FIRE DAMAGED ROBINSON STORE IN CLANTON

Fire which was discovered between two and three o'clock Tuesday morning, did very serious damage to the stock of dry goods of the Robinson Department Store in Clanton and the building occupied by the same.

The one story portion of the building in the rear was almost completely destroyed. The fire department was able to keep the flames from gaining headway into the two-story part of the building in front, however the merchandise in that part of the building was damaged by smoke and water.

The offices of Dr. J. P. Crumpton and Attorney J. B. Atkinson upstairs were damaged by smoke and water.

The store, one of the largest in Clanton, was owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Robinson. The building is the property of Renfroe Mullins.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

When you come to the first Sunday of the new year the devil is going to vote for you not to attend church and Sunday school. God is going to vote for you to attend, but the deciding vote will be cast by you. If you vote with the devil, God will be in the minority and you will not attend, but if you vote with God the devil will be in the minority and you will be present. With care watch your vote next Sunday.

After the opening devotions at 11 a. m., the Holy Communion will be served, and then a short sermon will follow. If you really love your church and if you really want Christ to be with you during the year 1931, be in your place in all the services of your church next Sunday.

Start the new year right by taking the family and coming to Sunday school at 9:45, remain over for preaching at 11, and then be with us again at 7 o'clock.

ALABAMA REIGNS FAVORITE IN CALIFORNIA GAME

Alabama vs. Washington State On New Years Day

Everyone tune in, on New Yearys Day and hear the Crimson Tide-Cougar football clash.

On January 1st, in Rose Bowl, in Pasadena, California, Alabama representing the South and East, will meet Washington State University, representing the West, in the most colorful game of the year, before some 85,000 fans.

In Alabama's third trip to the coast they reign favorite for the first time. Let's hope they justify that position.

Don't forget to tune in on your favorite station, (broadcast by NBC and CBS), and even if we can't see it, we can hear the most colorful game of the season, and let's all pull for that Crimson Tide from Alabama.

Let's go Tide—Roll on!
A happy and prosperous New Year

Mr. C. Reese Mullins stated Tuesday that his mother, Mrs. Oliver Mullins, of Jumbo, has improved considerably since last week.

FRIENDSHIP CHURCH

Rev. J. Robert Bean filled his appointments here Sunday and Sunday night. The weather was rather cold, but the attendance was fair. Bro. Bean delivered two excellent sermons.

A Christmas tree and program were presented Tuesday night of last week by the Primary Sunday School class, under the direction of Mrs. Jean Wyatt, teacher. The little children performed their parts nicely, and all of them enjoyed the presents which were taken from the table beside the Christmas tree and presented to the children by old Santa himself.

The program was declared by several as being the best and most smoothly carried out of any such occasion they hal ever attended. The program was strictly a religious one, nothing being done which was not in strict conformity with church usage.

CENTRAL SINGERS MEET AT CONCORD NEXT SUNDAY P. M.

The Central Singing Society meets at Concord for its third time next Sunday afternoon. The society had its beginning at this place the first Sunday in September, and two complete rounds have been made to all eight of the churches. Next Sunday begins the third round.

The society is still functioning in a healty manner. There is lots of interest and the spirit is always at high pitch. The meeting was at Poplar Springs last Sunday afternoon, Prof. O. L. Devaughn presiding. The singing was real good.

NYE INVESTIGATORS COLLECT MORE DATA

Alabama Situation Demands Attention, Committee Decided

Washington, Dec. 22.—The Nye committee has decided that evidence of alleged irregularities and excessive expenditures in the Alabama campaign warrants a further inquiry and investigators were ordered to return to the state to continue their examination.

Until they have made another report there will be no further action by the committee.

NATION'S MORTALITY RATE FOR THIS YEAR WILL BE LOWER THAN IN 1929

New York, Dec. 28.—Economically-depressed United States and Canada have one great thing to be thankful for—they still have their health.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company reports that 1930 will go down in history as a year of better health conditions than has ever been enjoyed in these two countries.

"The mortality rate for 11 of the 12 months has been so much better than ever before registered, that only a veritable health disaster in the final month could force the year's mortality rate above the precious minimum," the company's report says.

"The year has been absolutely free from the widespread prevalence of any contagious or infectious disease," says the report.

"There is a good prospect that 1930 will mark a break in the long series of years during which the cancer death rate has been persistently increasing and that there will be recorded also a drop in diabetes mortality for the first time since 1924."

The company's cumulative death rate was only 8.6 per 1,000 as compared with 9.4 in 1929.

SELECTION OF MONTGOMERY POSTOFFICE IS FIRST SINCE '84

Selection for a site for Montgomery's new postoffice was one step nearer, Tuesday, when Fourth Assistant Postmaster General John W. Philip inspected various plots offered as locations for the million dollar structure. Mr. Philip arrived at 7:30 a.m., from New Orleans and immediately after breakfast, begin the trip of inspection.

Until all available sites are visited and the conferences held with the owners or agents, Mr. Philp will devote himself strictly to business in hand. During the day he conferred with Congressman J. Lister Hill.

Selection of a new location for the postoffice will mean the first move since January 1, 1884 when the postoffice was moved from the corner now occupied by the City Water Works office to the present site. By a coincidence the plot of ground on which the postoffice stood a half a century ago is again offered for that purpose.

Many changes have taken place since Uncle Sam moved his Montgomery activities to Dexter Avenue. These changes include the expansion of Montgomery from a small town of less than 20,000 to a city of over 65,000. Another change was from muddy streets to a city of paved streets and modern homes.

EVERY MAN WANTED TO COME TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

Every man who is a member of the Mens Bible Class of the Clanton Baptist Sunday School, and every man who ought to be a member, is urgently requested to be present for the class assembly next Sunday morning at 9:45.

Next Sunday begins the new year, and it is the hope of the class officials and leaders that a full attendance may be had for this first Sunday, and a better average attendance throughout the whole of next year.

During this week cards will be prepared and mailed to each member of the class showing the number of Sundays he attended during the past year. The slogan which will be instituted next Sunday will be "Every Member a better Attender during 1931."

DR. DAWSON AND LIBRARIAN WED IN QUIET CEREMONY

Dr. John C. Dawson, president of Howard College, Birmingham, was married to Miss Avis Marshall, liberian at the school, on Christmas Day, a message received by Miss Anabelle Hendon, Dr. Dawson's secretary, said Sunday.

The message was sent from Chattanooga, Tenn., but did not state where the ceremony took place, Miss Hendon said. Mrs. E. N. McConnell, daughter of Dr. Dawson, residing in Atlanta, Ga., received a similar message.

Miss Marshall is a native of Texas and has a master of arts degree from Columbia University. For three years she was liberian at Avery College at Danville, Kentucky, before coming to Howard Collge. She joined the faculty at Howard College at the beginning of the school year, last September.

Dr. Dawson for thirteen years president of Howard College, and for 28 years connected with the faculty announced his resignation as president of the college several months ago to take effect February 1. He will become head of the romance of languages at the University of Alabama at the opening of school in September, 1931.

During the interim between leaving Howard and joining the faculty at the University of Alabama, Dr. Dawson has announced that he will travel in Europe.

The ceremony came as a surprise to the officials of the school, P. P. Burns, dean and T. R. Eagles, vice president, said.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY TO MEET SOON

The Woman's Missionary Society will meet at the Clanton Baptist church next Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. All members are urged to be present as this is a very important meeting. The Circles are to draw for next year at this meeting. Be sure and come as I have something special planned for this meeting.—Mrs. S. J. Ezell.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McEathern spent Christmas with friends and relatives in Columbus, Georgia.

Prohi Amendment Still Endures in U. S

Ruling Of Judge Clark Is Held To Be Unsound

The Department of Justice is to be commended for seeking a prompt review by the United States Supreme Court of the opinion of United States District Judge, William Clark, of New Jersey, holding the Enghteenth Amendment invalid because Congress submitted it for ratification to the legislatures instead of to conventions in the several states.

The ruling of Judge Clark is unsound for the following reasons:

The Supreme Court of the United States settled the validity of the Enghteenth Amendment in 1920.

The Constitution, Art. V, provides the method of ratification of amendments "by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the congress."

The Supreme Court has expressly declared: "The method of ratification is left to the choice of Congress."

Judge Clark's ruling is based upon an implied requirement not found in the Constitution, which he deduces from a vague theory of political science.

The Supreme Court in 1920, in the Hawke case, held there was no implied right of the people by states to pass directly upon federal amendment by referendum. That being settled, there is less reason to imply a right to act indirectly through conventions.

Substantially the same point made by Judge Clark was raised in 1920 and in effect overruled by the unanimous conclusion of the court.

The Eighteenth Amendment was adopted in exactly the same manner as all previous amendments. If it is invalid, then others are also.

The Tenth Amendment, upon which Judge Clark largely predicates his ruling, is an amendment which was adopted in exactly the same manner as the Eighteenth Amendment.

The present contention is a threshing of old straw and faces insuperable legal obstacles in the Supreme Court of the United States.

CHEST FUND GOAL SET AT $2,500.00

This Amount Is Necessary To Take Care Of Needs In County

The Finance Committee, after making a rough estimation of the needs of the county and looking over past records, have set a very low goal of $2,500. It is true that the goal of 1930 was $4,000, but was not reached. If our goal of $4,000 last year had been met the Child Welfare Department would have been able to have done more real constructive work in building up child life than was done, but on account of only about $1,300 being raised many calls for real help had to be refused. Due to the condition of the country and nation, we will be compelled to have a low budget for 1931 and will have to confine relief to emergency situations. However, indications of demand for relief will be greater in 1931 than during the past year.

The county worker under the supervision of the state worker is called upon to preserve home life for children whenever possible. The home is the bulward of the nation; the child needs his own home, and wants his own home, and has a right to his own home. The county worker must draw on the county resources to help meet the needs. If it had not been for the aid of the chest funds during the cold winter months of last year, the four small children of sick feebleminded parents would possibly have died of hunger and cold. Proper food and medicine secured through the chest funds greatly aided in saving a little girl's life. No greater service to humanity has been done to anyone, than the food given toward three sisters, all around 70 years of age. Two of these are blind, one is deaf, and the other has lost her mind. Their great love for each other and for their church is holding them together. A young mother with five sickly children, with feebleminded and epileptic father have been fed from your gifts to the chest fund.

One of the saddest plights of our county are the homes of little children with immoral mothers. The community sees the mothers' sins and refuses to help, but are often times glad for someone else to help, as they cannot "dirty their hands" with them. These children with immoral mothers love their mothers as devotedly as if she was a good woman. They get just as hungry as a child of two fine parents. They get just as ragged as the average child. They long for little friends and playmates more than the child who is not pointed at. We have some such families in Chilton County, who have immoral mothers, from lack of training in their younger days, lack of proper home life while growing up, lack of education, lack of recreation, lack of mental ability and sometimes for a lack of funds for caring for their children. With the crowded conditions of the orphanages, lack of state funds for boarding children, etc., these children, in many instances, have been left with their mothers and are given meager aid, not only with the hopes of keeping them alive, but with the hopes of building up their moral nature and possibly getting the mother to have a better vision. The child is the greatest gift to humanity and only in providing for childhood may we expect an improved civilization.

BALDWIN PLACE AT VERBENA BURNED

The Morris Baldwin old place at Verbena was burned about two a.m. Monday morning. The place is just across the railroad tracks from the Gibson home. It is occupied by Mrs. Davis, who operated a boarding house.

The building was completely destroyed. Quite a lot of the household furnishings were gotten out and saved. The Clanton fire department answered the call for help, and went to Verbena, rendering assistance in keeping the flames from spreading to adjoining property.

Peggy Page, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Page, celebrated her tenth birthday last Saturday, entertaining a group of little friends at luncheon. Those present were Olive Rainer Elmore, Jerry Alred, Theda Wyatt, and Mildred Maddox.

In the afternoon the hostess and her guests were carried to Montgomery by Mrs. Page, where they witnessed with much delight the presentation of a screen talking version of "Tom Sawyer," at the Paramount Theatre.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp. County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

HAY SCARCITY CAUSES MUCH HIGHER PRICES

Hay scarcity and its unusual high price in Maryland, Virginia, the South and some states in the Middle West are being successfully met by the farmers and stockmen of that section with a stock ration hitherto considered as little value as feed. This is millrun oat feed, a by-product of the oatmeal we eat at breakfast. It is estimated that more than 300,000 tons are produced annually in the United States. Until this emergency, much of it has been burned by the great oat mills because it was thought to be without a marketable value.

Today this newly discovered feed is recommended by agricultural colleges and county agents. Hundreds of tons are being rusheed to the drought-stricken areas from the oat milling centers of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Akron, Ohio and St. Joseph, Missouri. The Agricultural College o fthe University of Maryland and the experiment station of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, in their endorsment of this feed consider it the equivalent of timothy hay and not far below alfalfa hay and wheat bran in nutriment. These states are among those whose hay crops were hit hardest by the rainless weeks of July and August.

"Feeding experts who for several years have been conducting extensive research into this mill-run oat feed, have established its food value," said W. E. Suits, vice president of The Quaker Oats Company here, in commenting on the gravity of the situation affecting Eastern and Southern dairymen and stock feeders. "Now an emergency gives these finding great importance. Overnight, what many have previously considered a small product of value, becomes an important livestock ration. I predict that because of its low cost and ease of handling and shipment, it will continue to play a big part in feeding even with large hay crops and ample pasturage."

This discovery of the great value of mill-run oat feed has a perallel in wheat bran, cotton seeds and sugar cane bagasse, the manufacturer points out. These things, now so valuable, were once considered valueless refuse. Millers and cotton and cane planters gave them away and even at times paid to have them removed. Meanfhile oat mills all over the country are being called upon to ship their oat feed to Dixie and the Atlantic Seaboard, and flocks and herds are being saved.

DEMONSTRATION FLOCK RECORDS FOR ALABAMA

A total of 45 poultry demonstrators have reported the results of their poultry projects for the 12 months beginning November 1, 1929. The individual flock records are averaged rather than an average of monthly summaries.

These data are calculated to indicate the cost of egg production on Alabama farms. They do not include the receipts from sales other than eggs, although as the individual records indicate, several poultrymen greatly increased their income by the sale of eggs for incubation. Labor, intrest on investments, and other charges are not included.

The accumulation of these valuable data would be impossible were it not for the hearty interest and cooperation of the poultrymen, home demonstration agents, county agents, and others. We wish to thank all who have cooperated to make this work possible.

Editor E. P. Lakeman of the Haleyville Advertiser-Journal was in Clanton during the holidays. Mr. Lakeman spent Christmas with his brother, W. P. Lakeman, at Lay Dam. While in town he paid The Union-Banner a pleasant visit. We are always pleased to have our brother-in-the-craft visit us; he always tells us something good about our Republican friends in Winston County.

Mr. Wallace Cox was at home the past week-end.

DR. J. W. SMATHERS, M.D., Ph.G., tells of amazing results produced by Sargon in over ten thousand cases.

"As an official investigator for the Sargon Laboratories, I have personally seen Sargon at work in many thousands of cases in different parts of this country. I have seen it win victory after victory over stubborn ailments of long standing that had apparently defied all other medicines and treatments.

ALABAMA'S COAL INDUSTRY

Spends Millions Yearly For Alabama Farm, Factory and Forest Products

WHAT Alabama needs most today is a bigger and a better home market. What Alabama is now actually facing is a shrinkage in the market already here.

For many years, Alabama's coal industry has been Alabama's biggest cash customer for Alabama farm, factory and forest products. Its purchases have aggregated many millions yearly. It has been a steady customer for almost everything that grows from Alabama soil—corn, hay, oats, produce in vast quantities. It has been a regular consumer of Alabama livestock, dairy products and poultry. It has been a big buyer of supplies and equipment made by scores of Alabama industries. It has been the principal contributor to Alabama's railroad freight revenues. It has built its villages and tipples from Alabama brick, lumber, and cement, and wherever possible it has given preference to the products Alabama makes and grows.

More than any single industry, Alabama coal and coke have been responsible for the prosperity which Alabama has enjoyed. During the nationwide depression of 1920-21, Alabama did not fell the full effects of hard times because Alabama's coal industry was running almost full time.

One of the big reasons why Alabama is now feeling so severely this depression, is because Alabama coal mines are now running only one to three days a week. The big buying power of the coal industry has been cut down by outside competition—natural gas, and electricity (even though produced in Alabama) which employ but little Alabama labor in proportion to coal mining. It is not alone the coal producing counties which have suffered. Every section of the state has been blighted by the back-fire.

Every time the Alabama coal and coke industry loses a customer to Natural Gas or Electricity, an Alabama farmer loses some portion of his biggest and his best home market. Every time an Alabama plant replaces Alabama coal with another form of fuel or power, it is limiting its own home market and its own future growth.

For one hundred years, the welfare of the Alabama coal industry and the welfare of our state have been irrevocably linked. To continue to forge forward they must travel hand in hand and side by side.

Lesson for January 4

THE BIRTH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 1:8-17, 80.

GOLDEN TEXT—And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Gratitude for Godly Parents.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Gratitude for Godly Parents.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Need of Physical and Spiritual Equipment for the Lord's Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Value of Training in the Desert.

I. The Parents of John the Baptist (vv. 5-7).

1. When they lived (v. 5). "In the days of Herod the King." While both were of the priestly line, the priesthood was very corrupt and the ruling classes most wicked. Zacharias and his wife lived in a time when it was not easy to be godly.

2. Their character (v. 6). "They were both righteous before God." Many appear to be righteous before men who are not righteous before God. They were so mated that they walked in the commandments of the Lord blameless. The highest good in wedded life can be attained only when both are united in Jesus Christ. John the Baptist had a godly heritage.

3. They were childless (v. 7). Though this godly couple possessed the joy of the Lord, there was a real lack on their home. No home is quite ideal into which no child has come.

II. The Birth of John the Baptist Promised (vv. 8-17).

1. By whom? (v. 11 cf. v. 19). The angel Gabriel appeared and made known the good news to Zacharias.

2. When? (vv. 8-14). While officiating as priest this good news came to him.

3. Characteristics of the child (vv. 15-17).

(1) "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord" (v. 15). He was highly esteemed by the Lord. This is infinitely better than if he had been highly esteemed in the eyes of men or in his own eyes.

(2) "Shall drink neither wine nor strong drink" (v. 15). The child was to be a Nazarite, separating himself from sensuous things and dedicating himself to the service of God.

(3) "He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost" (v. 15). The energy of the Divine Spirit would enable him to lead people to repentance (v. 16).

(4) "Shall go in the spirit and power of Elijah" (v. 17). In this power he was to prepare the people for the coming of the Saviour and the salvation which he was to bring.

III. Zacharias Asking for a Sign (vv. 18-23).

Although the aged priest was earnestly praying for the salvation of Israel, the gracious promise of the angel, which was the beginning of that salvation, staggered his faith. He was unable to believe that his fond hope and prayer would be realized. The angel gave to Zacharias a sign. He was smitten with dumbness which was to continue until the fulfillment of the promise.

IV. The Promise Fulfilled (vv. 57-63).

When the time came for the birth of John, Elisabeth brought forth a son, and the neighbors rejoiced with her. On the eighth day they circumcised the child and gave him a name according to the instruction of the angel. The name "John" was contrary to family usage. By means of writing Zacharias made known the name which the child by divine instruction was to have. At this time God opened the mouth of Zacharias and he offered praise.

V. John's Growth (v. 80).

This is a fine picture of a boy dedicated to the Lord's service.

1. The grace of God was with and on him. How beautiful to see children grow up with the stamp of heaven upon them.

2. Physical development. "The child grew." This literally means "kept growing." In this holy environment his plain fare as a Nazarite and his temperate habits gave him a robust constitution, thus fitting him for his life of toil and hardship.

3. Spiritual development. "Waxed strong in spirit." His inward man kept pace with outward growth.

4. Retired to the desert. His heritage from his parents, the special grace of the Spirit, needed the silence and the austerity of the desert for its completion. There God had an opportunity to speak to him. He not only had an opportunity to become acquainted with God, but was forced to rely upon God.

Ideals

Ideals are like the stars; you will not succeed in touching them with your hands, but like the seafaring man on the desert of waters, you choose them as your guides, and following them, you reach your destiny.—Carl Schurz.

POULTRY

PROFITS IN POULTRY

Profits from poultry raising depend in large measure upon maximum egg production. And this, in turn, hinges upon observance of four basic rules of flock upkeep, anyone of which, if disregarded, will decrease the efficieny of the birds.

The four rules, as outlined by Dr. J. Holmes Martin, poultry sepcialist of the agricultural experiment station of the University of Kentucky are:

1. Proper feeding.
2. Providing a comfortable house with plenty of room for exercise.
3. Maintenance of healthy, vigorous birds.
4. Stocking the flock with birds bred to lay.

In observing the rule of proper feeding, the poultry raiser should consider that no noe ration will fit all conditions, Dr. Martin says. The cheapness and availability of feeds should be considered. Ready mixed poultry mashes are very saisfactory and if readily available an dnot too high priced, may be fed. Feeding should be done at regular hours, preferably twice a day, once in the morning and once in the evening. While their appetites should always be kept keen, the birds nevertheless should be fed all they want to eat. hould be fed all they want to eat.

Chief among the features embodied in the properly built poultry house are adequate space for the number of birds adequate distribution of sunlight, adequate ventilation, comfort in quarters and equipment and durability and convenience.

The poultryman is finding that vigorous, healthy hirds bred to lay are assured, if he replenishes his flock with baby chicks obtained from a reliable hatchery. This is proving especially true, since leading hatcheries of the country are operating together under the slogan "Hatchery Chickens for Greater Profits," for the purpose of raising the quality of poultry flocks everywhere and eliminating the non-producing hen.

DISEASES TO WATCH FOR AMONG CALVES

Scours Is the Most Prevalent and Should Be treated Promptly

Medical science has made marvelous strides during the present century in the field of human life but when we come to live stock we are still deep in study and research for methods to combat some of the more common ailments. This is especially true of calf diseases. The nature of some of the diseases which affect the young calf and successful methods of combatting them are still a matter of grave concern. In the meantime there is a great economic loss the country over because of the high percentage of mortality.

Take the matter of abortion which is just now receiving considerable attention. Some states are carrying on a determined fight against contagious abortion. Owners are combining with livestock sanitary authorities in stamping it out. For instance the question of whether milk carries abortion germs and the effect they may have on the young calves is being debated. Vaccines are being used for detecting affected animals and for treating herds that are suffering from contagious abortion. It is very much in the experimental stage.

But in this article we shall deal with the calf after it has been born. Of course in the new born calf is to see that the mother is free of disease in the reproductive organs.

When conception is about to occur the dam should be given more or less attention. A clean stall and fresh, dry bedding will go a long way toward helping the newcomer to get a good start. It is not always necessary to have someone present, unless you anticipate difficulty in the conception or unless the mother should refuse to claim the arrival. The first thing that needs to be done is to remove the membrane from nostrils and mouth and to dry the body. The mother does this by licking the newly born all over as her first maternal act. It is well, too, as soon as possible to treat the navel cord with tincture of iodine. It hardly seems necessary to add that the calf should be put into a clean, dry well-ventilated place at once, and that fresh air, exercise and sunshine mean a lot to its successful growth.

The disease you have to look out for in young calves is scours, which is looseness of the bowels. It corresponds in its frequency, and in some respects in its causes, to colic among children. Scours often occur among calves that are taken from the cow and fed from a pail. There are mmy causes for it, such as overfeeding, irregular feeding, dirty feeding pails, milk that is old or sour or too rich. Anything which disturls the digestion, be it dirty pails or dirty mangers, may cause scours. The effects are a diarrheal conditon, bloating, loss of appetite and a dark-colored, semi-fluid discharge. The first thing to do is cut down he rations about one-half. A remedy consisting of 1-2 ounce of formaine in about 15 ounces of water may be used as follows: Put one teaspoonful of this mixture into each pint of milk fed. Do this for two or three days and then gradually resume the normal feeding. That ught to take care of a mild case of scours. In more severe cases castor oil is used and the formaline mixture is continued several days. Sometimes two or three teaspoonfuls of lime water are added to the milk if the discharge is sour in odor. Scours should not be neglected for it may become chronic and then it will take months to cure it. Although the disease is not contagious the calves should be separated from the herd in order to give careful treatment.

If the discharges from the bowels show traces of blood, it is serious and more drastic treatment should be given. This indicates a contagious disease and it occurs in very young calves, from three to five weeks. Sometimes calves die from it in a few days. They should be segregated at once and all bedding destroyed and stalls disinfected. One remedy recommended is fluid extract of gelsemium administered in doses of two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day.

The most serious is white scours caused by a germ which attacks the calf at birth. If the calf shows dullness, is too weak to rise, has sunken eyes and gives a profuse discharge with a highly offensive odor, quick action should be taken to protect the rest of the herd. The disease is fatal in most cases. The body should be buried or burnt, also all bedding, etc.

The same germ which causes white scours is said to be the cause of pneumonia which occurs among calves a few months old. Symptoms are loss of appetite, weakness and coughing. Calves may also contract pneumonia from cold, damp quarters. Coughing and high temperature will result. Blankets, warm quarters and a mild purgative should be resorted to at once in the latter case.

Vocal Changes—Many a young man who talked bass to his father is now talking soprano to his wife.

Read-To-Wear Budget—Last year the women of America spent $1,200,000,000 for dresses, plus another $600,000,000 for coats and suits.

Missing the Goal—"Our religion is forever getting itself dehumanized," says Harry Emerson Fosdick. "It separates itself from the daily interests of men and women and lets itself be pushed off into ecclesiastical corners."

Heat and Aluminum—In an expert test of light and heavy aluminum cooking utensils, it has been discovered that food heats in them in the same length of time and consumes exactly the same amount of fuel.

Your Precious Motor—People who would not think of having their Rolls-Royce fixed in a Ford service station will placidly accept and follow a dacetious diet dispensed at a lavishly appointed beauty parlor or by an irresponsible traveling salesman.

No Need of Coaxing—Happy, well-exercised children like to eat. If they don't eat one meal they will the next. Nobody starves on purpose.

Dental Information—The dentists have demonstrated that candy never yet hurt a tooth, and that while nicotine may stain the teeth it does not harm them.

Jonesboro, Ark., Dec. 29—P. C. Barton, 74, at one time president of the Southern Baptist convention and several times president of the Arkansas Baptist state convention, lay critically injured in a hospital here today, the result of an automobile collision yesterday. He suffered a fractured skull.

A sister, Miss Parish Barton, 71, suffered a dislocated right shoulder, but a brother, the Rev. L. E. Barton, of Montgomery, Ala., escaped uninjured.

The automobile, driven by P. C. Barton, collided with one driven by Jos. Weber, Little Rock. Weber was not held.

The mother, in distress, could not refrain from saying:

"Oh, doctor, I fear it will leave a disfiguring scar."

Tommy looked up into her tearful face and said:

"Never mind, mamma, my mustache will cover it."

SLYVESTER'S WATERMELON

Mr. S. V. Miller of Beat 16 was displaying a thirty-pound watermelon in Clanton Monday, December 29.

We bet that even our neighbor state—Florida, cannot beat this record. Of course, Mr. Miller had a good excuse for not cutting the melon—he said he had to carry it back home so he could save the seed.

We let him carry it away, because this is a rather off season for such things; but we are going to expect a big juicy off-spring from it one day early next summer.

BIG SPELLING MATCH PLANNED

County Superintendent of Education, Buford Lawrence, gives out the information that a spelling match of unusually large proportions is to be pulled off at Jacksonville State Normal School some time in March. In this event will be two of the best spellers from each county in the Jacksonville District.

Superintendent Lawrence states brifly the plan of this spelling arrangement as follows:

Some time right away each school in the county will hold a spelling contest to determine the two best spellers in the school. Then two representatives of each school will meet in a county spelling contest to determine the two best spellers in the county. The two thus selected for the counuty will be the representatives in the final match at Jacksonville.

Mr. Lawrence also adds that complete details as to the rules and regulations of the contest will be sent out from his office to each school in the county, and the same will be published in the county papers within the next few weeks.

It is feared that spelling in our schools is gradually drifting toward the realm of lost arts. School officials believe that this spelling contest will go a long way toward reviving the interest among many students.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Stapp spent the Christmas holidays with relatives and friends at Aliceville and Fernbank.

MULLINS-TALLEY WEDDING SOLEMNIZED SATURDAY

The following account of the marriage of Miss Moren Talley of Anniston, to Mr. Burton Small Mullins of Clanton and Eufaula, was taken from The Anniston Star, of Sunday, December 28th:

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Talley announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Moren, to Mr. Burton Mullins, of Eufaula, the ceremony having been beautifully solemnized on Saturday afternoon at five o'clock at the home of the bride on Montvue Road. Rev. Samuel E. Hodges performed the wedding rites in the presence of a number of relatives, close friends and out-of-town guests. The home was charmingly arranged for the nuptial event with a profusion of palms, Southern smilax and ferns, with an improvised altar as a setting for the wedding party.

While awaiting the appearance of the bride, Mr. Elbert Parsons sang, "All For You," with Mrs. Luther Liles accompanying. Mrs. Liles also played softly during the plighting of the vows. The bride entered the presence of the guests with her father, Mr. Herbert H. Talley, by whom she was given in marriage. She was a lovely bride attired in a creation of lace chiffon, a Mery Porpora model of shell blush and her accessories were Mignonette green, while she carried a bouquet of Joanna Hill roses and valley lilies. The bride had as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Ormsby Dawkins, of Louisville, Ky., who wore for the occasion a Mary Elizabeth model of yellow sun-gold chiffon, with accessories of beige claire. Her flowers were Talsiman roses. Little Miss Doris Ormsby, of Louisville, acted as her aunt's flower girl and was daintily dressed in shell pink chiffon. The bride was met at the altar by Mr. Mullins and his best man, Mr. Reese G. Mullins, of Clanton, and the ceremony was impressively read.

An informal reception followed the marriage and the bride's table was a beautiful one in pink and white. The wedding cake held the usual favors and burning tapers cast a pretty glow over the scene.

The bride changed her wedding dress for a traveling costume of arosa blue with gray accessories and departed in the late afternoon for Florida. She and Mr. Mullins will be at home after January first at Eufaula.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. C. Reese Mullins, Mr. Claude Pipes, Mr. Samuel Upchurch, Mr. Edwin Mullins, Mr. Barney Burnett, Dr. and Mrs. Joe Edgar, Miss Sophia C. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Hosea F. Downs, of Clanton, Mrs. J. M. Shepperd, of Memphis, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Small, Mrs. J. M. Jackson, Mr. W. B. Small, Mr. Reese Mullins, Jr., Miss Gladys Jackson, of Gadsden, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Walker, Miss Margaret Walker and Mr. Norman Pilgreen, of Birmingham.

W. M. Polk was on the streets again Monday, having practically recovered from the recent illness that kept him at home and at the hospital for several days.

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.
M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

SOME ILLS OF MACHINERY AGE

"I wonder sometimes if the South is not destroying the laboring man's opportunities by using improved machinery when we consider the fact that all the money for gas and oil goes West, and all the money for machinery goes North, which, it seems to me, will eventually drain all the money out of this country," said Judge L. H. Reynolds, probate judge of Chilton County. "I sometimes wonder if it has been a wise policy for the state to build highways and then license trucks to haul freight in competition with the railroads because of the fact, as I have stated, all the money spent for trucks and their maintenance goes out of our state and the money spent by the railroad companies is spent with us in the South. Lumber and steel rails of which they use millions of dollars worth, all furnish the people of the South employment. The railroad companies have spent millions in building its railroads and I fear we are making a mistake when we put it out of business. Our coal miners are largely dependent upon the railroads for their business. When you stop the railroads from buying its coal it takes business away from it and that puts the miners out of jobs. And when you take employment away from the laboring man and do away with horsepower, then you take the market away from the farmer."—Birmingham News.

CONSISTENT PROGRESS

During 1929 the manufactured gas industry sold 524,115,000 cubic feet of its product to 12,139,000 consumers. Service was provided by 905 gas manufacturing plants, using 107,500 miles of main.

Since 1919 gas sales have almost doubled, and the number of purchasers has increased about 50 per cent. This remarkable progress is due to a number of causes, preeminent among them being the fact that gas is the most clean, efficient and economical fuel for both home and industry. No expensive and dirty storage places are required, and gas heat can be made entirely automatic. Gas has taken its place with electricity as an indispensible service.

POLITICAL HORSEPLAY

In Pennsylvania, where an important phase of the recent political campaign was criticism of public utilities and the public service commission, it is now proposed to protect the "people's rights" by substitution of a "fair rate board" for the public service commission. In other words, a change in name of the regulating body is supposed to result in securing a higher type of public officials.

What a joke! Is a name going to produce a superior class of citizenship from which to draw public servants? This move shows how hard pressed politicians are when they have to manufacture such an issue to secure public attention.

An unbiased observer is inclined to laugh up his sleeve.

We had to take our sister to the stock show in Wichita last night so that she could see a horse and buggy and buggy whip.—Augusta Gazette.

Revised Version—Twelve years ago a certain author announced that it was his wife's brains, not her beauty, that attracted him. "But now," he writes, "after twelve years of marriage, I imagine it must have been her beauty, because I don't see the brains."

A science note says the outer covering of certain fish is the thinnest and most transparent substance known. Well maybe, but we've done pretty well with hosiery.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Voice of the People

FROM REV. E. A. CHILDS

Please allow me a few words through your paper to yourself and other friends in Clanton.

Dear Mack:

We have received the second copy of The Union-Banner since leaving Clanton and how we enjoyed it! I read it from front to back, even the want ads. Every little fox terrier I see I think of Frank Callen's call for help. Edward lost his dog a few days after our arrival here, and only those who know his love for dogs can imagine the sorrow in our household until the lost was found. But an ad in the Troy Messenger brought home the lost pup. Take courage, Frank, it pays to advertise.

We miss you Clanton people, I am sure more than you miss us. Troy has given us a welcome such as we do not deserve, but even at that we still have to learn every thing and every body. I especially miss the boys of the Kiwanis Club. The club here has given me several invitations to meet with them, but I have attended only one of their meetings. This club put on a minstrel last Friday night which netted them a neat sum. They seem to be having some of the same troubles the club there has met.

I think the greatest regret I have in leaving Clanton is that I left a few unconverted Baptists. I am certain it would have been a real pleasure to have served the United Church with Sam Ezell as my assistant pastor. It looks like Clanton will have to superanuate him to get rid of him, and such a step as suggested would have let him down easy. Be patient with him, brethren, he does the best he can at his age.

We greatly appreciate every expression of love and good wishes that have come from the people of Clanton. We started out to send Christmas cards to our closest friends, but the longer the list grew the closer everybody seemed. So, we gave it up as an impossible task and decided to ask Mack to let us say "Thank You," and "God Bless You," in his paper.

We all were equally interested this morning when we opened packages containing pictures of Olive Rainer Elmore and Milton Diefenderfer. Olive Rainer never seemed so beautiful and sweet before, and Milton—well, he looked just as usual.

Although this will not reach you until after the Christmas holidays, it is being written two days before Christmas, and we are wishing every one of you a merry, merry Christmas.

Sincerely,
E. A. CHILDS, Troy, Ala.

SANTA CLAUS!

In 1897, Virginia O'Hanlon, then eight years old, wrote to the editor of the New York Sun, pointing out that some of her little friends had claimed there was no Santa Claus, and asking the direct question: "Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?" This was answered in the following editorial, which has become one of the classics of American literature:

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little mind. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. It is all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God! he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, yea ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the hearts of childhood.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

Did you know that it is possible for a man to succeed himself as Sheriff of Chilton County? Well, we didn't either. But we bet a Jew's harp that you have never heard of this before and never will hear of it again. So far as "Hambone" Gillespie is concerned the Sheriff of Chilton County is succeeding himself; because you see, it is like this: Hambone's Grandpa Collins is going out of the Sheriff's office and his Grandpa Gillespie is going into the Sheriff's office. So, you see his grandpa is going to be Sheriff right on.

If you don't happen to know who "Hambone" is, we will tell you. His real name is Wilton Gillespie and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Gillespie of Friendship community.

Judge Lindsay received a telegram from a group of Holleywood motion picture stars congratulating him on the show he pulled off in a New York cathedral. Didn't know that Hollywood movie talent stayed married long enough for the arrangement to be called companionate rather than a week end acquaintance.

Our international bankers have discovered that the United States Treasury has too much gold and are trying to think up some more plans for getting it where their foreign debtors san use it for paying their obligations.

It is hard to learn from the advertising columns of the newspapers that Pat Harrison's million dollar increase in the cost of living under the new tariff has really showed up.

Newark, New Jersey, has cancelled the bull fight which was arranged for the sportive citizens of the state and vicinity. Maybe they felt that Congress would be too great a counter-attraction.

London financial experts fear a gold famine in the near future. So far as we are concerned it is already on.

If the international bankers are guilty, as charged, of bringing about all this deflation, maybe they are only seeking to bring back the days of their youth when they could go in a restaurant and get a crock of beans with all the catsup and crackers they could eat for a nickel.

Italy is said to be making overtures to Soviet Russia and our advice to Mussolini is "quit your stalin."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

According to the opinion of the most qualified European observers Europe is rapidly drifting into two armed camps again. Perhaps drifting is not exactly the proper word, because there is more or less design in the movement toward new alignments. According to the repors which come to America, Italy, or rather Mussolini, is the leading force in the new movement. At the end of the World War when the Central Powers were crushed, France, one of the canniest nations the world has ever known, refused to place her faith in the League of Nations or the World Court and immediately set up a system of alliances to make her the leading military power in Europe. Her plan was immediately successful, and was designed not so much for making new conquests as to enforce the settlements of the Versailles treaty.

Of course the defeated powers were not satisfied with the settlements in the Versailles treaty. But the dissatisfaction did not stop here. Italy too has had reason to believe that she got the worst of it when the dividing up of the spoils of war was accomplished. And so Mussolini, according to these European observers, is seeking to build up a new system of alliances which he hopes will eventually checkmate or even overwhelm the French scheme. With France of course are Poland, Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia, and some of the minor states of Europe. To offset this combination Mussolini is seeking to bring about an "understanding" with Hungary, Bulgaria and Austria and he is said to have designs also on Rumanian support, although Rumania has always stood with France in European politics. Eventually, it is said, Mussolini hopes to win Germany to his side, although many observers declare that Italy, since the war, has been less popular in Garmany even than France. It is regarded as signficant also that cables during the recent weeks have carried stories of proposed economic agreements between Italy and Soviet Russia.

Of course, conditions in Europe are now so unsettled from the political standpoint that almost anything may happen. But if Mussolini succeeds in making the alignment which the observers think he is trying to make, we will again be confronted with the spectacle of European nations being divided into two army camps. In such event what becomes of the League of Nations and the World Court? What chance will these instruments of internationalism have in the face of conditions of the kind outlined?

Certain it is that thinking Americans will hesitate about giving their approval to any program which has for its purpose, or which may result in, the placing of America, by means of membership in the League either directly or indirectly, in no man's land, between two military alliances naturally hostile to one another and suspicious of every neutral nation which shows any indication of mixing into the European mess.

Thinking Americans will hesitate to approve such a course not only because they feel that it will not be good for America, because of our isolated position and of the cosmopolitan nature of our citizenship, but for the further reason that it would render less liable our chances of being of real service in case of a real crisis. The very fact that we have remained outside the orbit of European diplomatic entanglements, has kept us from the taint of factionalism, and has made it more probable that we might be of real service in a disinterested way whenever the peace of Europe is threatened. Certainly a man who wants to act as a disinterested pacifier of a quarrelsome facily, cannot help the situation by marrying into the family where he will have to become a part of its troubles and disagreements. He can do much better on the outside. The same thing might be true of governments. Of course we want Europe to have peace and prosperity. A restoration of general prosperity would help solve many difficulties. We can best bring this about by first getting Uncle Sam on his feet so that he can lead the march back to normalcy.

A German invented a folding house which can be carried on automobile trips. That seems to settle the housing problem in this country.—Albany Evening News.

At the End of the Road—Many people go through life haunted by the fear of death, only to find, when it comes, it is as natural and as satisfying as life itself.

Many of us who have been reading scathing criticisms of the Wicekrsham report for the past month, are looking forward expectantly to the appearance of the report.—Detroit Free Press.

ARGUMENT DOES NOT HOLD WATER

A critic of our constitutional right in the United States to own firearms, recently presented an exhaustive article in which he attempted to prove the necessity of laws to prohibit private ownership of firearms by showing that a larger proportion of people are murdered with guns in this country than in other nations.

By the same line of reasoning, he could probably show that more people per thousand are killed by automobiles in the United States, that more people per thousand are burned to death in fires and that more people per thousand meet with accident and death in constructing high buildings, at street crossings and in sports than in any other nation, all because our people are more active and generally more energetic, aggressive and careless than are the people of the rest of the world.

The critic of private ownership of firearms does not go on to show that in every time of national emergency, the United States has raised troops capable of using firearms, more rapidly than other nations. The argument that millions of law-abiding private citizens should be denied the ownership of firearms for either sport or protection on the theory that this would remedy the crime situation, the murder situation or the suicide situation, is visionary, far-fetched and impractical.

Prohibitory legislation which penalizes the masses in the hope of correcting the few, has always in times past created conditions worse than those it sought to remedy.

FORTY PER CENT WASTED

William Bennett Munro, of Harvard, states that 40 per cent of every tax dollar spent in the United States is wasted, through unnecessary governmental activities, the shifting of responsibilities, duplication of activities and superfluous number of employes. He points out that, in times of stress, "taxpayers are misled by empty promises, and respond to appeals to their feelings rather than their intelligence."

Probably every American community has had some experience with wasteful government. Experiments in business, retention of out-moded methods and dislike of modern innovations, political inertia—these and similar factors have cost American taxpayers untold millions of dollars. And they will cost millions more, unless the voting public demands that government confine itself to the function of governing. Rigid governmental economy and efficiency would be one of the greatest aids to home-building, industrial development and general progress.

TAKING SIDES IN EUROPE

Recent events in Geneva indicate how difficult it is for the United States to avoid implication in European international disputes while participating in European conferences into which America has entered with the highest purposes. During the debate on armaments a dispute arose between two European groups of nations which are drifting apparently toward armed conflict. The dispute is between those nations which desire a revision of the conditions of the Versailles treaty and its severe modifications, and those which do not. The United States is not a party to the peace treaty between the allies and the Central European powers, although we have participated unofficially in certain readjustments. But during the discusion of disarmament at Geneva, the American representative was called upon to cast his vote as between these two sets of powers, and did so. Thus we innocently become parties to what Washington called "the collusions and collisions of European powers at one of the threatening moments in history. ,

All that is necessary for Uncle Sam to do is to hang up his hat in the anteroom of European contention in order to be asked to take a hand that necessarily aligns us one way or the other. Our participation is urged in the name of peace. Certainly the effect of such involvement in the war system which grows out of Europe's multiplied nationalities, and age old hatreds and rivalries, is not the certainty of peace, but the strong possibility of involvement in war.

The integration of the American with the European political and economic system, means integration with disintegration. If Europe cannot find a way out of her present difficulties without American help, it cannot do with our help. For the voice of the United States is not decisive. Our world leadership, so much talked of at home, is not recognized abroad. Our purposes are distorted and our motives discredited. Our good intentions are not believed in. We are considered just another selfish, grasping power, trying to put something over on the rest of the world. We cannot complain against such a situation with any effect, but we can avoid putting ourselves in a position where new hatreds and enmities are created. When Ramsay MacDonald referred to 'the European mess" he described the situation in Europe. We did not make the mess; we have too much faith in ourselves when we think that we can clean it up, since the continent of Europe will continue to be controlled by the European powers, and America is looked upon as a designer outsider and a potential cats-paw.

Events ought to teach America something. After thirteen years of participation in European affairs we ought to begin to learn that so far from our being able to run the world we need to take some thought lest the rest of the world ruin us.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Judge L. H. Reynolds has gone to Florida to spend about ten days vacation. As he departed he said, "This is the first real vacation I have had in twenty years, and I hope to find a lot of fun in getting away from the duties of my office for a while of rest and relaxation."

Even Ernest Childs down in Troy admits that he reads every line in The Union-Banner, including the little ad about Frank Callen's lost puppy dog. Childs is not the only one who has the habit of reading every line of "the Dear Old Banner." We have had lots of them to tell us about it.

Just a word more about Frank's dog ad. The Union-Banner went out early Thursday morning. Just about noon a man walked into the bank bearing the little dog under his arm, or perhaps it was in his overcoat pocket. Anyway, he read the ad, sized up the little dog as being the one wanted. Results, don't you see?

Emmett McKee, alias Red, or, as Bull Riggins would say, otherwise known to the grand jury, came by the corner one day last week for a little interview. Jolly, full of fun, just as much so as ever. Red said he was surprised to find so few of his old cronies in Clanton, and somewhat disappointed, too. That must be noticeable to a fellow who has been away from here several years. I can notice it myself, when I come to think about it.

Red came up in Clanton along with Mut Marcus, Emmett Powell, Leonard Kemp, Clarence Roper, and ever so many more I could name. And there are not many of that crop left around these diggins now. The war scattered them to the four winds of the earth.

"We had a grand time at home in South Carolina during Christmas," said Mrs. Ezell Sunday, and with that remark she drew herself tighter in her overcoat and with a shiver said, "But my goodness, that awful snow." Of course the preacher had a lot to say about the snow and other incidents of their trip to the old home. But I know he has already told everybody about it, so I determined to print only what Mrs. Ezell said.

Thinking of Ezell takes me back to his sermon of Sunday morning. I almost said amen a time or two while he was putting over one of the best messages I ever heard in my life. I wish it hadn't gone out of style to say amen while a preacher is delivering his sermon.

"The big trouble with the world," he said, "is that we are away behind with our thinking." Now, isn't that a fact? Many of us who are almost facing starvation haven't stopped to think long enough to find out what it is or was that got us into the hole. Many a man is dragging the ground, with his nose to the grindstone, on account of keeping up an automobile which he has never had any use for, and never has yet found out what it is that ruined him. Ezell didn't say that part about the automobile. That is one of my bright ideas which came to me out of my own experience, almost after it was too late.

Rev. Harry B. Calentine, preacher at the Foursquare Church of Clanton, has gone to Syracuse, New York. He was here a little less than a year, but he proved himself to be a jam up nice fellow, and made many, many friends.

A lot depends on what we are looking for. The purpose in your heart, to put it another way, very largely determines how you will wind up. What I want to do is to get you a story which Grover Walker, the lawyer-philosopher of Clanton, told me about Mr. Roger W. Babson, the world's greatest statistician, and we might say the world's greatest economic diagnostician.

Mr. Babson was visiting in South America. He came into the presence of a ruler of one of the South American countries. The executive asked Mr. Babson why it is that South America has not made the progress that North America has made. "That is just what I was thinking about," replied Mr. Babson, "but I confess I had a sense of delicacy in mentioning it."

"Go right ahead," said the executive "and tell me just what is in your mind concerning that question." Whereupon Mr. Babson made this very interesting expression: "My opinion is that the reason North America has led the world in progress and development is that the people who settled upon its rugged shores were seeking religious freedom, whereas, the people who settled South America were seeking gold."

RAILROADS ASK EQUALTY, NOT FAVORS

The present depression has brought the railroad situation to a crisis. The falling off in freight and passenger business has focused public attention on certain basic railroad problems which must be solved in the near future if the American people wish to continue to receive the high type of railroad service they have enjoyed.

In addrssing 300 manufacturers in New Britian, Connecticut, three high executives of Eastern railroads said that all the rail lines need is a fair field for competition and no favors. They urged more ample legislation covering commercial transportation by bus or truck with adequate authority for railroads to operate such facilities without discrimination; that railroads be not forced to compete with subsidized government operated ships and barges over free waterways, and that railroads, after building lines to oil fields, shall not be faced with a competitor who can build a pipe line when the railroads are forbidden to do the same thing. As to the Panama Canal, the railroads object to the prohibition in the Panama Canal act against their engaging in transportation by water on the same terms as their competitors, and, secondly, they emphatically protest against the government engaging in such transportation and performing the same at a loss and assessing the general taxpayer to make good the loss. These railroad executives asserted that the lines were struggling to maintain their standing in the face of competition which was less regulated, and constant rate reductions forced by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

They pointed out the unfairness of the recapture clause of the Transportation Act by which a railroad making more than six per cent in any year on what the government says its property is worth, must give half of the excess to the government.

The railroads have been made the plaything of politics until the very life of the industry is threatened.

What Causes Catarrh?

Somehow or other many people have the erroneous idea that catarrh is more or less a chronic head cold. Such, however, is not the case. A catarral condition results when the nasal organ has to rid the body of various impurities and poisons that have accumulated because some organ of elimination is not performing its task. In such case the mucous membrane of the nose is made to throw off the overflow of mucous or poison. Some common causes of catarrh are constipation, indigestion, lack of exercise and too much clothing. In the case of the clothing the pores of the skin are not allowed to functions as they should and certain body poisons are not carried off. Too much sugar and starchy foods are also causes of catarrh. The proper way to treat the trouble is to find underlying cause and endeavor to correct it without paying too much attention to the nose and mucous membrane.—Pahfinder Magazine.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

It appears advisable before ratifying a treaty to make a few reservations to protect the interests of Uncle Sam, certain old fashioned Americans may think that all such reservations should be made by the Senate rather than by some cunning European diplomat.

The naval building program for next year has the cordial endorsment of President Hoover and of course, he will be criticised by those peace societies who believe that the best way to prevent war is for America to disarm.

Owen D. Young, who has suggested that we will have to level our standard of living with the rest of the world, is now telling the government how to run its foreign affairs and he seems to have the unanimous approval of Nicholas Butler.

Forty years ago Alaska had 1,300 reindeer. Today there are 600,000 giving employment to 13,000 natives. The government of Alaska thinks that the reindeer may become an important food supply for the United States.

Millions of acres in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, and also in other parts of the country especially suited for reservation, are being utterly neglected because our present state and federal laws make reservation economically impossible. This is a state and federal problem of great importance, which some day perhaps will receive the attention it deserves.

For some reason many of our college professors, and most of our university presidents, are easy marks for the international propagandists. The government should find a way to protect these innocent men.

"I HAD a stubborn case of constipation after a very severe spell of grip," says Mr. John B. Hutchison, of Neosho, Mo. "When I would get constipated, I'd feel so sleepy, tired and worn-out.

"When one feels this way, work is much harder to do, especially farm work. I would have dizzy headaches when I could hardly see to work, but after I read of Black-Draught, I began taking it. I did not have the headaches any more.

"When I have the sluggish, tired feeling, I take a few doses of Black-Draught, and it seems to carry off the poison and I feel just fine. I use Black-Draught at regular intervals. It is easy to take and I know it helps me."

This medicine is composed of pure botanical roots and herbs. Contains no chemicals. In 25-cent packages.

BUTLER FORESTRY FAST DEVELOPING

Montgomery, Dec. 29. — Butler County is forging to the front in forestry, according to a statement issued by the Alabama State Commission of Forestry. For some time forward looking citizens of the county have felt that local participation in the program of the state and federal governments for the use of otherwise idle lands for timber growing purposes was the natural solution of a very serious problem.

At a recent special meeting of the county board of commissioners a resolution was passed committing the county to join with the state and federal governments in such measures as may tend forward the promotion of the growth and safety of the forests in the county, and appropriating a stipulated sum to be deposited with the state commission of forestry as the county's portion of the expense in keeping up the work begun by the state in 1924.

The federal government cooperates with the local communities through the state commission of forestry. Since the United States provides a very large proportion of the funds used in forest fire protection and other phases of forestry, it very properly insists that the work be carried on in as efficient a manner as possible and that full value be received for all money expended.

CARROL REUNION

On Christmas Day Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Carroll were made very happy when all of their children, except Mrs. G. L. Messer, assembled at their home. Mrs. Messer had sickness some weeks before Christmas.

The children were notified to cook Christmas and bring it home and enjoy it with mother and dad. The home was beautifully decorated with holly and cedar for the occasion. About nine o'clock they began coming with baskets filled with good things to eat. The crowd enjoyed themselves laughing, talking and telling funny jokes, and listening to the Victrola, until 12 o'clock when the little but loved dinner bell rang. Two tables were joined together so it could seat 15. Preceding the dinner, father repeated these words. O Lord, give us humble thanks for these and all other blessings we ask for Christ's sake. After this a beautiful dinner composed of roast pork, turkey, chicken salads, cakes pies, and hot coffee were served to the following: Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Carroll, Mr. W. J. Carroll of Wetumpka and brother of N. G. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Carroll and three children from Jemison, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Carroll and two children from Clanton, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Carroll and son. Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Wyatt and son all of Clanton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Carroll of Jemison, Lelia and Alley Ruff, the two at home. In the afternoon the largest portion motored to Verbena and visited Mr. and Mrs. Messer and the children. They reported a very nice time. Everyone left hoping to get to spend several more Christmas days together.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE AT JACKSON

The Fourth Southern Baptist Sunday School Conference will be held at Jackson, Mississippi, January 13-16, 1931. This is an annual event promoted by the Baptist Sunday School Board, under the supervision of I. J. Van Ness, Secretary.

Assurance comes from the Baptist Sunday School Board headquarters at Nashville, that the conference at Jackson this year will be an outstanding event in Baptist history. A quota of 4,500 people in attendance outside of Jackson has been set. This number will be made up of Baptist workers and leaders from every section of the Southern Baptist territory.

Thousands will go to Jackson by automobile. Seventeen organized committees in the city of Jackson are making ample preparation for taking care of the visitors. Hotel reservations are already being made, and there is evidence that the city of Jackson will be taxed to its limit in acommodating the delegates.

An outstanding attraction of the conference will be the address of George W. Truett, of Dallas, Texas. He comes fresh from the experiences of an extended trip, as denominational representative, to South American countries. Dr. Van Ness, of the Sunday School Board, has planned a program of general sessions and divisional conferences that will likely outdistance any former activity of the type.

It is easy to get from here to Jackson, Mississippi, by auto. There should be a good representation of Baptist Sunday School workers from Chilton County to attend this conference.

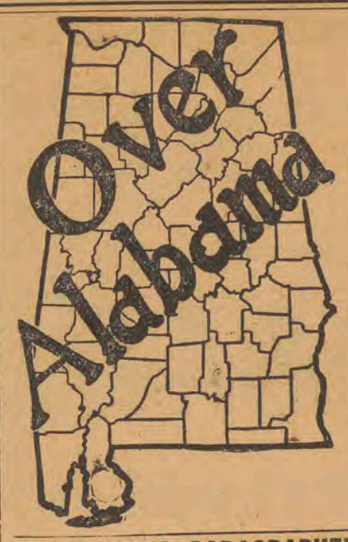
NEW 100-POUND BAG FOR CHILEAN NITRATE

Announcement of a new bag may not in itself be an item of much news value, but when the change concerns nearly a million farmers it at once becomes a matter of widespread interest.

So it is with the new 100-pound Chilean Nitrate bag. Hundreds of thousands of farmers have for years been buying the natural or original "soda" in 200-pound bags. Now comes the announcement from the producers that hereafter all Chilean Nitrate will be shipped to this country in 100-pound packages. Naturally enough, the change has been greeted with enthusiasm by everyone. Already the new-sized bag has been named "the bag without a backache."



The new bag is regarded as an important step in the program which the Chilean producers now have under way to improve their service to consumers in this country.

SIX-YEAR PROFIT FROM 31 TREES TOTALS $1,352

In progress for six years, the Wilson and Jones orchard demonstration at Hall, New York, now furnishes a striking illustration of the vital importance of quick-acting nitrogen in rejuvenating an unprofitable orchard.

The story of the success of these two growers in renewing the productivity of their orchard centers around two rows of McIntosh trees. Since the demonstration started in 1925 one of the rows, which has received Chilean Nitrate annually, has produced 1,031.5 bushels, whereas the other, without nitrate, has yielded only 315 bushels. The total net profits from the first row have amounted to $1,352.

During the last year the nitrated row yielded 348 bushels, as against 72 bushels from the check row. Each row consists of 31 trees which, at the start of the test, were as nearly alike as it was possible to select them. The nitrate is applied early in the spring about six weeks before blossom time. At present, the trees are 20 years of age and each receives 6 pounds of Chilean Nitrate annually. The effect of the nitrate is apparent in more ways than the yied. The nitrated trees are in healthy and vigorous condition, whereas the others are considerably smaller and plainly show the need of nitrogen.

CHILEAN NITRATE PRICE LOWEST IN 25 YEARS

In step with the spirit of the times, the producers of Chilean Nitrate of soda recently announced the lowest nitrate price in 25 years. The new price schedule now in effect enables the American farmer to get the original "soda" considerably below the pre-war level. The reduction is possible because of the application of the most modern methods of production throughout the Chilean industry. Modern machinery as well as new processes have brought about a degree of efficiency as well as new processes have brought about a degree of efficiency which was undreamed of a quarter of a century ago.

Review of the Year 1930 at Home and in Other Lands

Unemployment and Economic Depression Generally Prevalent—Steps Toward World Peace—Democrats Win in United States Elections—South American Revolutions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROSPERITY, which was "just around the corner" at the beginning of 1930, gave the world no more than an occasional glimpse of her face during the year. Business depression, increasing unemployment, continuing low prices for agricultural products and declining markets for securities prevailed generally.

Skilled observers professed to see war clouds again gathering over the Balkans, but notable steps were taken in the direction of world peace and disarmament. The United States, Great Britain and Japan signed the London naval limitation treaty, and toward the close of the year there were indications that France and Italy, settling their parity dispute, would make it a five-power pact. Some progress was achieved by the preparatory disarmament commission of the League of Nations. The revision of German reparations, known as the Young plan, was adopted by all nations concerned and put into effect, although Germany was not hopeful of its ultimate success. The evacuation of the Rhineland by the allied forces was completed.

China's long, bloody and confused civil war ended in victory for the Nationalist government. Popular and military revolutions upset the governments of five Latin-American republics.

Though governmental and other agencies in the United States strove throughout the year to relieve the unfortunate economic conditions, results of these efforts were slow in appearing. Consequently the voters went to the polls in November and expressed their dissatisfaction in the customary manner. There was a Democratic landslide that covered most of the country and the Republican party virtually lost its control of both houses of the congress that convenes in March, 1931. However, the national leaders of the victorious Democrats pledged their party to co-operation with the Republican administration in all measures designed to bring prosperity around that corner, and business was reassured by the promise that there would be no attempt for some time to revise the tariff act passed in June.

Industrial and financial distress in the United States was greatly increased by drought that prevailed all summer in the Mississippi and Ohio river states and extended as far east as the Virginias. National and state governments afforded speedy relief to the sufferers. As winter neared numerous organizations throughout the country went into action to alleviate the unemployment situation, their aim being to supply those out of work with jobs rather than charity doles. Public building and highway projects were started and speeded up, and great industrial and transportation concerns sought means to increase the number of their employees.

All in all, 1930 was not a happy year for the world.

INTERNATIONAL

THREE months of intensive debate, diplomatic negotiation, study of experts' figures and mutual concessions brought forth the London naval treaty, which was signed on April 22 by the delegates of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy. By this pact the first three powers agreed to the extension of the Washington treaty so that the reduction and limitation of their navies should apply to cruisers and lesser vessels. France and Italy failed utterly to reach an accord as to what their relative naval strength should be. Consequently they subscribed to only those parts of the London treaty that provided for a battleship building "holiday" and prescribed various rules designed to humanize submarine warfare.

France and Italy held intermittent conversations during the rest of the year, but could not settle their differences. The one insurmountable obstacle was Italy's demand that her right to naval parity with France be admitted, and France's flat refusal to yield this point.

League Receives Briand's Scheme.

In September the assembly of the League of Nations listened politely while M. Briand, French foreign minister, expounded his pet scheme for a federation of European states. Other statesmen cautiously praised the plan and it was accepted in principle by the assembly and referred to a special committee which will report to the 1931 meeting.

Twenty-eight of the nations represented at Geneva signed on October 2 a treaty guaranteeing financial aid to any signatory state that is the victim of warlike aggression.

Late in August nine of the smaller nations of central Europe held a conference in Warsaw and agreed on a concerted program of action mainly in furtherance of their agrarian interests. The pact was signed by Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Poland, Rumania and Jugoslavia. Lithuania was absent because of her political differences with Poland. France was quick to strengthen her friendship with these states by offering credits.

During the year there were many indications that Italy was drawing into close co-operation with Germany and Russia.

After being ratified by all the nations concerned, the Young plan for reparations was put into effect on May 9. Gates W. McGarrah of New York already had been elected president of the bank for international settlements created by the plan. On May 19 the last of the French troops in the Rhineland began moving out, the evacuation being completed June 30. A separate reparations settlement was signed in April by Hungary, Austria and the states in the little entente.

Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state of the United States, was elected a member of the World Court in September to fill out the term of Charles Evans Hughes.

The mandate commission of the League of Nations made in August its long awaited report on the Palestine conflicts between Jews and Arabs, placing the blame on Great Britain. In the fall the British government announced a new policy concerning Palestine which would stop for the present any further immigration of Jews into the Holy Land. Zionists everywhere protested vigorously and President Chaim Weizmann and other chief officers of the World Zionists organization resigned.

Russia's Great Conspiracy Story.

Early in November the government of Russia announced that it had uncovered a gigantic plot against the Soviet regime in which a number of "capitalistic" states were said to be involved. Among many individuals who were alleged to have a part in the conspiracy were Former Premier Poincare and Foreign Minister Briand of France and Sir Henri Deterding, British oil magnate. Eight Russian engineers were put on trial, confessed and were sentenced to terms in prison. Paris and London looked on the whole thing as a "frame-up."

Late in January Mexico severed diplomatic relations with Russia because of alleged Communist insults. In the United States the advocates of a policy of resumption of relations with the Soviet government were jolted by revelations that the latter had been selling wheat short on the American grain exchanges, aiding in the demoralization of prices. At the same time it became evident that the Moscow government was dumping grain in the European markets at prices far below the cost of production. The whole affair created a great stir here and abroad but nothing much could be done about it.

FOREIGN

GREAT BRITAIN'S Labor government struggled manfully throughout the year to solve the nation's economic problems, but found that this could not be done in a short time. Unemployment continued to increase, passing the two million mark in June, and industrial depression was little lightened if at all. However, no one seemed to have a better solution to offer than Prime Minister MacDonald and his ministers, so they held on to their power. They had the aid of a national advisory council, Chancellor Snowden devised a satisfactory budget that was by no means socialistic, and parliament passed some of the legislation asked by the government.

Two matters of vast import demanded much attention from the British empire's rulers. One was the effort to develop the empire as an economic unit, and the imperial conference which was held in London undertook this task. The various dominions were represented by some of their best minds and the discussions continued until well into November. But the results were extremely disappointing. The main issue was economic cooperation, and in this nothing was accomplished because the dominions and the British government could not agree concerning free trade, protection and preferential rates within the empire.

Problem of India.

The increasing independence of the dominions was marked by the tacit understanding that henceforth they shall have the right to accredit their own diplomats to foreign countries, and may communicate with one another and with Great Britain, not through governors general, but directly. It was decided to create a tribunal for the settlement of intraimperial disputes.

The future status of India within the empire was a question that troubled the British throughout the year, and it was complicated by the non-resistance rebellion conducted by Mahatma Gandhi and his numerous followers. As is their custom, the Communists took advantage of the situation to convert the peaceful revolt of the Indian Nationalists into riotous demonstrations, and the police and military forces had to handle not only these but also attacks on the northwestern frontier by tribesmen. Gandhi and many of his lieutenants were put in prison but their civil disobedience campaign never slackened. One of its frequent manifestations was the making of salt contrary to the laws. The All-India congress, consisting largely of Gandhi's adherents, decided to boycott the roundtable conference arranged for late in the year, because their demand was for the absolute independence of India.

The roundtable conference opened in London November 12 with much pomp and ceremony, the native princes, the Hindus, the Moslems and even the "untouchables" being represented by their ablest men—and by two brilliant women. The Indians made it clear they would accept nothing less than dominion status, and some of them bitterly attacked the British methods of rule in India. The problem before the conference and the government was so complex that there was no chance for its solution for many months. One definite decision reached was that Burma should be made a separate dominion.

In the Canadian national election on July 28 the Conservatives completely upset the Liberal government headed by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and secured a comfortable majority in the dominion parliament, and Richard B. Bennett, their leader, became prime minister. The new government took steps at once to relieve the unemployment situation and to help the farmers, one being the almost complete discontinuance of immigration from Europe.

German Fascists Win.

As in most other countries, political events in Germany reflected the prevailing discontent of the people, and there it was aggravated by the feeling that they were oppressed by the reparations. Chancellor Mueller and his cabinet resigned in March because of dissatisfaction with the ratification of the Young plan and with the budget and financial reforms proposed. Dr. Heinrich Bruening, Centrist leader, became chancellor and formed a ministry of members of the five middle parties. The National Socialists and the Communists kept up continual agitation and President Hindenburg dissolved the reichstag on July 18. In the elections which were held September 14 the National Socialists, commonly called the Fascists, won a most surprising and tremendous victory. They increased the number of their seats in the reichstag from 12 to 107, and their popular vote from 800,000 to more than 6,000,000. Their titular leader is Adolf Hitler who, being an Austrian, could not be elected to the reichstag.

France, Spain and Italy.

One small provision in the finance bill brought a vote of lack of confidence in the French chamber of deputies in February and the Tardieu ministry was forced to resign. It was succeeded by a Radical-Socialist cabinet formed by Chautemps which was defeated on its first appearance. Tardieu then was recalled, and held on through a stormy summer and fall, but early in December the senate forced him and his cabinet to resign, and Theodore Steeg undertook to form a new ministry. France maintained her position as one of the most prosperous countries of Europe, and gathered an immense store of gold. She was largely preoccupied with national defense and went ahead with her plan for a powerful chain of fortifications on her eastern frontier.

Gen. Primo de Rivera, who had been dictator of Spain for more than six years, resigned on January 28, partly under compulsion, when faced with the threat of a military revolt. He was succeeded by Gen. D'amaso Berenguer. Throughout the year there were repeated strikes, food riots and violent demonstrations by students and in the middle of December a serious rebellion broke out in the northern part of the country.

Economy was the continual cry of the Italian government, Premier Mussolini being its spokesman, and his measures toward that end were put through with thoroughness and dispatch. They extended to the reduction of salaries of all governmental employees, who are remarkably numerous there, and all employers were urged to follow suit. In compensation, the cost of living was brought down by the lowering of prices of food and other necessities. At the same time the Duce continued his program of extensive public works, like drainage and restoration of waste lands, giving employment to many men.

Carol on Rumanian Throne.

Carol, former crown prince of Rumania, with the aid of prominent Rumanians, executed a startling coup d'etat in June. From his exile in France he flew to his native country in an airplane and two days later the parliament declared him king and his little son, who had held the title, heir to the throne. Carol soon began planning for his coronation, but his estranged wife declined to be reconciled and the statesmen said the ceremony could not be held unless she were present or the marriage were dissolved. As a result of this dispute Premier Maniu resigned in October and Carol went ahead with his plans.

An interesting if not important event was the marriage on October 25 of King Boris of Bulgaria and Princess Giovanna, daughter of the king and queen of Italy.

Latin-American Revolutions.

Revolt flamed in four South American republics. Four men who had been virtual dictators were ousted. Four new governments were established. As a preliminary to these events there was a revolution in the Dominican republic in February, the immediate cause being the announced intention of President Horacio Vasquez to stand for re-election. After a few skirmishes Vasquez was forced out of office, being succeeded temporarily by General Urena. Elections were held on May 16 and Gen. Rafael Trujillo was chosen president and inaugurated three months later.

Bolivia was next on the list. There Dr. Hernando Siles tried, like Vasquez, to perpetuate his rule and was driven from office in May by the insurgents. He was permitted to take refuge in Chile, and his much hated right hand man, Gen. Hans Kundt of Prussia, fled back to his German home. A military junta took over the government, its chief being Gen. Carlos Blanco Gallindo.

Peru followed suit in August. The officers of the army led a movement against President Augusto B. Leguia who had held the office for more than ten years and considered himself almost irremovable. He was forced to resign, turning over his powers to a military junta, and later Lieut. Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro was made provisional president. Leguia had been recognized as an efficient business president and Peru made great material strides during his regime, but the revolutionists accused him of "denial of civil liberties" and also of nepotism and the sale of concessions. He was imprisoned to await trial.

Late in August President Hipolito Irigoyen of Argentina was warned by his minister of justice that a revolution might break out immediately. A few days later the prediction was fulfilled, the high army and navy officers leading their commands in a revolt that speedily ousted the aged chief executive, who was seriously ill. Only in Buenos Aires was there any popular opposition to the revolution, and this was soon quelled with some bloodshed. Gen. Jose Francisco Uriburu, chief of the insurgents, became the provisional president on September 6. Irigoyen for years had enjoyed great personal popularity in Argentina, was president from 1916 to 1922 and was elected again in 1928. But he had become senile and sick and lost his hold on the people.

Vargas Rules Brazil.

Brazil's revolution broke out early in October and was in a way a war between the states, the leader of each striving to seize the central government. The term of President Washington Luis was soon to expire but his favored candidate, Dr. Julio Prestes, president of the state of Sao Paulo, had been elected, allegedly by fraud. The defeated liberal candidate, Dr. Getulio Vargas, former president of the state of Rio Grande do Sul, started a revolt to prevent the inauguration of Prestes, and the movement spread to state after state, all the insurgent armies converging on Rio de Janeiro, the national capital. The government resisted stubbornly, but considerable parts of the army and navy deserted it and after a few weeks of bloody fighting Luis was ousted. The members of the junta that took over the government at once began quarreling and scheming, but Vargas promptly came up from the south with a large force of gaucho soldiers and his authority was recognized. He was installed as provisional president on November 3.

Pascual Ortiz Rubio was inaugurated as president of Mexico on February 5 and selected a strong cabinet under whose rule the country promises to prosper. Especial attention is being paid to reorganization of agriculture and to education.

DOMESTIC

WITH less cause for complaint than the peoples of most other countries, the inhabitants of the United States were nevertheless dissatisfied and pessimistic. Overproduction by farmers and manufacturers and timidity of consumers resulted in business depression and unemployment that lasted throughout the year, despite all efforts to restore prosperity. The great drought played its evil part, affecting conditions in the entire country.

President Hoover's administration had another exceedingly difficult year. In the senate the Democrats were reinforced by the radical Republicans and the coalition fought many of the Chief Executive's policies. After more than six months of debate the senate passed the Smoot tariff bill, embracing two features that were obnoxious to the President. These were the export debenture provision, carried over from the old farm relief legislation, and a clause transferring the flexible tariff power from the President to congress. The house of representatives eliminated these features, the senate was forced to yield, and on June 14 the so-called Hawley-Smoot tariff measure was finally enacted. It reached the highest protective level of any tariff law ever passed, with an average rate about 20 per cent above that of the Fordney-McCumber bill of 1922. In its entirety it was satisfying to nobody, but President Hoover signed it because he saw in its flexible provision the means of righting its injustices. Protests against the higher duties were received from many foreign governments.

Veterans' Pension Act.

There was another long and bitter wrangle over the veterans' pension bill. As first passed by congress it was wholly objectionable to the administration and was promptly vetoed, partly because it granted compensation for disabilities not incurred in active service and partly because it went "beyond the financial necessities of the situation." The house sustained the veto but the senate repassed the bill with some amendments. These were rejected by the representatives and a measure fairly acceptable to the administration was passed and signed. It inaugurated a vast pension system for all partly or wholly disabled veterans not already receiving compensation, no matter what their illness or when contracted. Soon after the enactment of this law the President put into effect the consolidation of the three bureaus that had been in charge of veterans of all wars and appointed Gen. Frank T. Hines as chief.

Some of the recommendations of the Wickersham law enforcement commission were adopted by congress, the most important being the transfer of the prohibition bureau from the treasury to the Department of Justice. The change was made on July 1. Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock took command of the new bureau and former Commissioner James M. Doran was made head of a new industrial alcohol bureau under the Treasury department.

When William Howard Taft resigned as chief justice of the Supreme court on February 3, only five days before his death, President Hoover immediately named Charles Evans Hughes to succeed him. The appointment was confirmed by the senate with 26 votes in opposition. Then Associate Justice Edward Terry Sanford passed away and Mr. Hoover picked Federal Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina to fill the vacancy. Labor and negro organizations rose in opposition and the senate rejected the nomination by a vote of 41 to 39. The President then named Owen J. Roberts for the place and he was accepted.

Prohibition and the Election.

Prohibition as a political issue increased in importance as the months passed. A poll conducted by the Literary Digest indicated that the country was largely in favor of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment or at least of modification of the enforcement law. The liquor question was a great factor in the pre-election campaign in many states and had a decided effect on the results when the people went to the polls on November 4. The voters of Illinois, Rhode Island and Massachusetts in a referendum were against prohibition by large majorities.

The election turned out to be very much of a landslide for the Democratic party. The Republican majorities in both senate and house were almost wiped out for the next congress, and many states and cities elected Democratic officials to replace Republicans. Naturally the more rabid opponents of the administration saw in all this a severe rebuke for President Hoover and his policies; but sane opinion was that it was the natural result of unfortunate economic conditions.

With large appropriations available the farm board worked for the relief of agriculture by promoting and financing various co-operatives; and later in the year undertook, with some success, to stabilize the price of wheat, which had fallen rapidly in all world markets. In this latter operation the board was forced to accumulate something like 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, the future disposal of which was an unsolved problem. Chairman Legge of the board campaigned unceasingly for reduction of wheat acreage.

Among the diplomatic appointments by the President were: Ralph H. Booth, minister to Denmark; Fred M. Dearing, ambassador to Peru; John N. Willys, ambassador to Poland; Hanford W. MacNider, minister to Canada; W. Cameron Forbes, ambassador to Japan; W. M. Jardine, minister to Egypt; Herman Bernstein, minister to Albania; Nicholas Roosevelt, minister to Hungary, and J. Reuben Clark, Jr., ambassador to Mexico.

Taking of the fifteenth decennial census began on April 2. The final figures, announced in November, gave the population of the United States as 122,775,046. The increase for the decade was about 16.1 per cent.

On November 28, President Hoover appointed William N. Doak of Virginia secretary of labor to succeed James J. Davis, who had been elected senator from Pennsylvania.

The short session of congress opened December 2, and the President's message was largely concerned with measures of relief. Following to a great extent his recommendations, congress appropriated more than one hundred millions for an emergency construction program designed to aid the unemployment situation, and also set aside a large fund for loans to farmers who had suffered from the drought. Mr. Hoover transmitted to the senate the revised protocols of the World court and asked early action on them.

See Bright Future For South's Dairying

The Southeast took another step forward in diversified agricultural development this week when the new $250,000 headquarters plant of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation was formally opened at Atlanta. The plant, hailed by Dr. Andrew M. Soule, dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Georgia, as a sign of the time not far distant when the Southeast will become one of the country's foremost dairying sections, will pay in milk checks to southeastern farmers approximately $1,000,000 annually. It will serve as the headquarters for 15 other Kraft-Phenix plants in the southeast which so far in 1930 have bought 42,985,926 pounds of milk for cheese products which formerly were made in other sections and imported to the south. Inset shows James L. Kraft, chairman of the board of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation, officially starting the machinery in the new plant, while Thomas H. McInnerny, president of National Dairy Products Corporation, and John H. Kraft, vice president of the Kraft-Phenix Corporation, in charge of sales and advertising, look on. The Atlanta plant is said to be one of the most modern food factories in the United States. Officials of the Corporation present at the opening declared the Southern made dairy products equal in quality to those made anywhere in the world, and announced themselves ready to expand their Southern operations as fast as southern farmers would provide additional raw materials.

LYNCHINGS OF 1930

Editor Union-Banner:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find according to the record compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929; 10 more than the number 11 for 1928; 5 more than the number 16 for 1927; and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. 14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, 3 were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death, and 1 was burned to death when a mob burned the jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 7 victims who did not come into the hands of the law, 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 7 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 negro men and 2 negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, 1 was white and 20 were negroes. The offences were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the murder in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.—R. R. Moton, principal Tuskegee Institute.

W. J. RHODES KILLED BY PASSENGER TRAIN

W. J. Rhodes, age 73 years, was killed by a Mobile & Ohio passenger train at the North End railway yards in Montgomery about five o'clock Monday afternoon. Rhodes lived in Montgomery.

It is said that the man was walking down the tracks when the north bound train struck him, knocking him several feet from the tracks. He died before help could reach him.

The engineer, L. C. Gayle, reported that he saw Rhodes walking along the side of the track in front of the train. Just before the train reached him he attempted to cross the tracks without looking around, Gayle said. Rhodes is said to have been slightly deaf.

The man is survived by his wife; four sons, William and F. M. Rhodes, both of Clanton, Jesse Rhodes, of Luverne, and H. W. Rhodes, of Montgomery; four daughters, Miss Mattie Rhodes and Mrs. Lucy Mae Brightwell both of Montgomery, Mrs. Nannie Bell Brightwell, of Luverne, and Mrs. Addie Kuykendall of Greenville.

Judge and Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Omar Reynolds and baby, left Tuesday for an automobile trip of ten days to Miami, and other points of interest in Florida.

The city of Venice is situated on 120 islands in a shallow bay of the Adriatic sea, the gulf of Venice. The islands are close together and are only separated by narrow canals, which serve as streets. There are about 175 of these, over which there are 378 bridges. The city is two and a half miles from the mainland and connected by railroad bridges which contain 222 arches. It covers an area of 944 square miles and the population in 1921 was 519,298.

AIRPLANE HERE NOW TO SUNDAY

Seat of Operations Will Be At Dudley Collins Farm

An airplane in charge of the Southern Flying Service is scheduled to arrive at Clanton this morning (Thursday) at the farm of Dudley Collins, out on the Lay Dam road. The plane will be here the balance of the week, including Sunday, and will do special exhibition flying, as well as carrying passengers for rides.

Mr. James B. McKinley, who has charge of the program, has been in Clanton all this week perfecting all necessary arrangements. In an interview with a reporter of the Union-Banner, Mr. McKinley said:

"Our plane will be at the Collins farm all the rest of the week, and will do exhibition flying each afternoon at the field. The plane will be in charge of Lieut. Elliot R. McCune, a government licensed pilot. He is one of the greatest stunt fliers in the country. If you are present you will see him do every kind of stunt that can be done with an airplane, such as looping, spining, rolling and dead motor landing.

"Lieut, McCune will carry passengers to ride, but he will absolutely do no stunts with his plane when he has passengers aboard. This flier has been piloting ships for 8 years and has carried more than 25,000 people without a mishap.

"Our company is offering each and everyone a chance to ride at the lowest prices in history. Any questions that you may wish to ask about the general subject of aviation will be cheerfully answered. This event is sponsored by the Maddox Service Station of Clanton. Flying will start at 10:30 each morning and will last till dark."

SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, LAST DAY TO PAY TELEPHONE FEES

Saturday, January 17th has been set as the final day for the payment of central fees to the Peoples Telephone Company. The central operator, Mr. Lomer Giles, is giving good service, and if the people will fix up the lines and pay the fee, the service is here for you. Of course, service cannot be given with the lines down and buried up in the mud.

The above date gives two Saturdays; so this is enough time for all to pay up. Don't put it off until the last day, for you may not be able to come to town then. Attend to it at your first convenience.

No one who has not paid his central fee will be let through the central after January 17th. The fee is very reasonable this time, and everyone can surely arrange to pay by Saturday week: If you do not pay by that time, please be so kind as to cut your phone from the line until you do pay; and do not sponge on your neighbor by asking him do your telephoning.

Thorsby Corner Stone

Baptist Church Will Hold Impressive Ceremony Next Sunday at Eleven O'clock

The corner stone of the Thorsby Baptist Church will be laid next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, with appropriate ceremonies in charge of Dr. L. E. Barton, and the pastor, Rev. J. W. Jones.

The corner stone was donated to the church by J. W. P. Murphy, and has been delayed somewhat in delivery. But that makes no difference, according to Rev. Jones, who gives assurance that the services next Sunday will be arranged and carried out with appropriate attention to the weight of the occasion. He hopes that all friends of the church will come.

This service next Sunday will also be the occasion of the second anniversary of Rev. Jones as pastor of the church, which fact will also have suitable recognition in the rendering of the program.

The new building of the Thorsby Baptist Church is highly creditable to the community of Thorsby, and the particular pride of the Baptist congregation. It is comfortable, commodious and convenient, and enables the Baptist church and Sunday School to carry out a greater program of community service than they have ever done before in Thorsby.

MEETING JANUARY 20

Farmers Will Discuss Safe Program For Year 1931

On January 20th, at 10 o'clock there will be a county-wide meeting held at the courthouse in Clanton, Alabama.

The object of this meeting will be to discuss a safe farming program for 1931, and to have a discussion by a representative of the Bureau of Economics of Washington on the farming outlook for 1931. County Agent Stapp attended a conference along this line at Auburn, December 29th and 30th, and reports that outlook and discussions would indicate very little possibility of farmers making more than a mere living in 1931, and this being true every farmer should begin planning to make plenty of food for the family and feed stuff for the livestock.

Farmers, merchants, bankers and all others interested in the agricultural outlook for 1931 are urged to attend this meeting on the 20th and see what the probable cotton price will be next year.

JEMISON BANK ELECTS OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Peoples Bank of Jemison was held December 30, 1930.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: F. J. Callen, president; A. A. Conway, vice president; C. R. Foss, cashier.

The Board of Directors elected is as follows: F. J. Callen, A. R. Conway, H. G. Heflin, L. G. Posey, John B. Moore, A. A. Conway, C. C. Conway.

The bank at Jemison has has been in operation over a year now, and the present condition of the institution gives every assurance of a successful future. The prediction that the people of the Jemison territory would give ample business support to a bank has been substantiated continuously since the bank was opened.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank E. Jenkins brought their daughter, Miss Helen C. Jenkins, from LaGrange, Georgia, by auto Sunday to resume her duties as principal of Thorsby Institute. They immediately left for the return trip.

J. C. Primm Killed In Auto Accident

Aged Citizen of Thorsby Lost Life Here Last Sunday

An automobile accident in Clanton last Sunday afternoon at the intersection of Ninth Street and the Selma Highway, suddenly snatched away the life of Mr. J. C. Primm, age 81 years, a prominent citizen of Thorsby. Mr. Primm was in a car driven by his son-in-law, W. H. Raybon. When they came south on Ninth Street and drove into the Selma Highway, their car was struck by another machine driven by T. M. Yawn, of Birmingham, who was driving eastward on the Selma Road.

The crash was very serious to the Raybon car. It was thrown into the ditch by the side of the road with great force. Mr. Primm was thrown from the car and landed in the middle of the road. He sustained broken bones in the legs, and severe injuries about the head and face. Mr. Raybon was cut in the face.

Martin's ambulance was summoned and carried the injured men to the Central Alabama Hospital. Mr. Primm died without regaining consciousness. Mr. Raybon received attention of physicians and was able to leave the hospital in a short while.

Mr. Yawn was accompanied by two ladies, Miss Louise Pilgreen, of Selma, and Miss Martin, of Marvin, Ga. None of them were injured. It was impossible definitely to place the blame for the accident. Mr. Yawn made a bond for appearance here in case the matter should necessitate his coming back for further investigation.

Funeral services for Mr. Primm were held at the Congregational Church at Thorsby Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Each, Rev. Butler, and Rev. Jones. Burial was in charge of Martin.

Surviving Mr. Primm are his wife, Mrs. Martha J. Primm; four sons, John W. Primm, of Weogufka, R. L. Primm, of Thorsby, Thos. R. Primm, of Tuskegee, Hugh R. Primm, of Siluria; three daughters, Mrs. P. D. Killingsworth and Mrs. R. C. Fletcher, of Birmingham, and Mrs. W. H. Raybon, of Thorsby. A brother, Peter Primm, lives west of Clanton.

Charley Mims, who lives in the Temple community, was caught with a gallon of whiskey in the refrigerator at his home. He was released under bond.

Dick and Clack Price were arrested last Friday on warrants charging failure to work public roads and driving a car while intoxicated. They were placed in jail, where they remain at this writing.

Barney Littlefield was placed in jail Sunday night on a charge of public drunkenness. He was caught on the road by Sheriff Collins. He was released on bond.

While engaged in the fox hunt the officers spotted him and took him into the custoby while the hunt was in progress at the old Charley Martin place in Stumps Hills. Horton is one of the three prisoners who took the keys away from Effie Duke, the janitor, last summer, locked him in a cell, and joined the bird gang. Horton is the second of the three to be overhauled by the officers. He was originally in jail on a charge of making liquor.

May God be with them all. —Mrs. J. C. Prim and children.

AMERICAN LEGION MEETING

In spite of the very bad weather, the Chilton County Post of the American Legion held a very enthusiastic meeting Monday night. Hon. Massey Edgar, of Washington County, came and addressed the meeting on the subject of forest conservation. His speech was enthusiastically received by the members of the Legion.

At the conclusion of his address the local Post took action officially to begin a program that will bring the subject of forest conservation and fire prevention to the attention of the people of Chilton County. A committe was authorized to institute a wide program of publicity and education on this very important subject.

The following resolution was adopted dealing with the subject under discussion:

Whereas, the members of the American Legion, through their service in time of war, and as citizens of the commonwealth, have been, and are committed, by principal and practice, to the welfare and maintenance of our County in matters of defense, development and economic advancement; and

Whereas, among the means of achieving these ends, the proper use and management of the land of the State is of extremely great importance; and

Whereas, the growing timber by forestral methods on Alabama's twenty-three million acres of woodland will result in annual yield of commercial forest products valued at many millions of dallars; and

Wheras, public, private and associational agencies have done much to advance progress in mining and agriculture, but thus far have not made corresponding progress in the proper use and development of forest lands as a necesary and integral factor in a well-balanced system of the economic and industrial development of the State; and

Whereas, the forest industries and the manufacture of forest products form an important part of the business activities of this community and the extensive woodlands and forests provide substantial incidental benefits of watershed protection and hygenic influences.

Be it there resolved, that the Chilton County Post of the American Legion does hereby express and record its urgent recommendation that the State Government by necessary legislation and appropriations provide for the adequate promotion of the proper use and development of forest lands along the lines now being followed by the State Forestry authorities in co-operation with the Federal Government, particularly through a provision to meet the allotment of Forestral funds offered to the forest department of Alabama by the United States Government.

MEETING SATURDAY

Mrs. A. M. Turnstall, Welfare Worker, Will Attend and Speak

A county-wide meeting was announced in the last week's issue of the Union-Banner. This meeting is to be held at the courthouse at 2:00 p.m., Saturday, January 10th, at which time it is hoped that people from every community in the County will be able to report on the destitute families in their communities. Plans will also be made for funds in aiding these destitute families.

During the past year approximately $1,300 was raised in cash for such work. The wolf was scared away from the door of hundreds of families through this fund. The conditions of many families over the county are grave and immediate attention is absolutely necessary. The need for help has never been so great.

The reports of the conditions of needy families over the county will be heard, and conditions as found by the welfare worker will be placed before the meeting.—Mrs. C. E. Stapp.

YOUNG GOVERNOR WILL TAKE OATH

Notables Gather To See Lafollette Seated In Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5.—Notables of Wisconsin gathered today to hear Philip W. Lafollette, 33, take the oath that will make him the state's youngest governor.

The ceremony will be simple, in contrast to the pomp attending the elevation of his father, the late Robert M. Lafollette, to the office in 1901, a brother of Senator Robert M. Lafollette, Jr., is the third of his family to win office in Wisconsin as a progressive republican. He defeated Governor Walter J. Kohler, conservative republican, for the nomination and was elected by the usual landslide vote accorded Lafollettes.

The annual meeting of the Thorsby Congregational Church Society, due to be held Wednesday night, January 7th, has been postponed for one week, and will be held at the Church at 6 p. m., January 14th.

Several Fires Here During Past Week

Homes of Buck Roberts, Burton Higgins and Dr. Hayes Damaged

It was hard to determine last week whether it should be said that the old year ended with an epidemic of fires in Clanton, or that the New Year began in that manner. Fires were happening in rapid order last Tuesday and Wednesday, but they seem to have reached a halt at the threshold of the New Year. The last one reported up to now was the serious damage to the home of Buck Roberts just as dusk was falling upon the last day of 1930, Wednesday evening.

Following the fire of last Tuesday morning at the Robinson Department Store, the alarm was again sounded at an early hour Wednesday morning, when the home of Burton Higgins in Candler Terrace west of Clanton, was found to be on fire. The call was answered by the fire department, but the destruction of the home was complete. Only a few items of the household effects were saved from the flames.

Late Wednesday afternoon while Dr. Hayes was out hunting, Mrs. Hayes was also away from home, Catherine went up town for a short while, and when she returned the house was full of smoke. She went on through the house to the back room where a fire had been left in the grate. She found the room in a good way to start a very dangerous fire. The rug had been practically burned up, and a large hole already burned through the floor. With unusual coolness and presence of mind, Miss Hayes proceeded to apply water to the burning rug, and soon had the blaze under control, when Dr. Hayes arrived home.

About dark the alarm was sounded for a fire that had broken out at the home of Buck Roberts and had gotten well under way before it was discovered. The fire fighters of the town answered the call promptly and soon had the fire put out, but not until very serious damage had been done to the house. All of the household furnishings were taken out of the house and saved, except for some little damage in hurried handling and removal.

SCANT SOLACE FOR THE WETS

Majority of Commission Is Behind Present Statutes Is Belief

Washington, Jan. 3.—The long-awaited prohibition report of the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission was described Saturday in high official quarters as predominantly dry, with a majority of members conceding little to anti-prohibition views.

From an official in a position to be fully cognizant of the commission's activities came this anaylsis:

A tentative report, agreeable to more than a majority of the 11 commissioners, has been completed. In it is no recommendation for beer or wine. Neither does it urge any other major modification of the Volstead act designed to relax enforcement structure built up around dry laws. Repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment did not enter the picture.

In effect, the view taken by a majority of the members was said to be that prohibition as such has not yet had a sufficient trial. It was asserted this stand was based upon facts recently uncovered, showing enforcement of dry laws during at least part of the past decade has been riddled by politics and surrounded at times by graft.

"No Pussyfooting"

The statement was made emphatically that in the final report to President Hoover there will be "no pussyfooting" concerning conditions as the commission has found them during the most extensive investigation ever made into prohibition, extending over more than 19 months of deliberation and research. Corruption and graft, lax enforcement and crime resulting directly or indirectly from the dry law, it was said, will be set forth alongside reasons why it is believed these problems can be solved.

Despite the virtual completion of the report, authoritative word came that it could not be placed before President Hoover before the end of next week.

Report Bulky

Even after the report has gone to the White House and the prohibition-weary commissioners are free to complete the rest of their crime report, it was said small possibility existed that the president could send the report immediately to Congress.

It was described as a bulky document, comprising not only a majority and possibly a minority report, but also lengthy opinions prepared by each member, containing his or her concurring as well as dissenting views with solution of the dry law problem presented.

At least one of these opinions, it was asserted, will be longer than the report itself. Work still being done upon some of these individual documents was given as one cause for the delay. Then, too, the commission will not meet again until the middle of next week for a final consideration.

Possibility of changes in the tentative report was held not unlikely, although a majority was said to be completely committed to a dry stand.

Wine Question Up

Within the completed document, it was intimated from various sources, there will be revived not only the much-controverted subject of grape concentrates, easily converted into wine, but possibly the question of a nation-wide referendum on prohibition.

An authoritative denial was given to reports that the commission would recommend a relaxation of the Volstead act in order to give full legality to the sale of fruit juices intended for manufacture of wine in the home.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition, and now counsel for a grape concentrate concern, was said to have brought some form of statement concerning this product before more than one of the commissioners, and other grape concentrate interests filed a brief with the commission itself.

Reports have been circulated that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has requested the commission to approve 2.75 per cent beer, but had met with little favorable reaction.

Mrs. Annie Brewer is stopping over with Mrs. W. J. Billingsley on her way back to Chicago. She has spent two months touring Europe, and was a delegate to the World Christian Endeavor Convention. She is making a visit to Montgomery and Birmingham before leaving for her home in Chicago.

WHY FRESH AIR MEANS MORE MILK

Ventilation In A Barn Where Dairy Cattle Are Kept As Important As Proper Feeding

For several years we have had with us fresh air advocates. Whereas our forefathers did everything possible to keep the night air, which was supposed to be unhealthy, out of the lungs by boarding up doors and windows and filling every crack and crevice, we now roll our beds out onto the open porch and breathe deeply of the frosty atmosphere.

The modern dairy farmer is paying more and more attention to the ventilation of his barns because he knows that the proper changing of the air is essential to the health and well being of his herd. Unless pure air is mixed with hay and grain you do not get the maximum amount of milk.

In the summer time ventilation is no problem because doors and windows are open but in winter the opposite is true. We are not talking now of barns with artificial heating, but the kind where the heat from the bodies of the animals is depended upon to keep the temperatures up and the cold down.

It is easy enough to let cold air in. But to regulate the amount is the task. Unless there is a proper proportion of cold, dry air and the warm, moist air from the live stock you have a damp and dangerous stable.

Fortunately we have men who have made a very careful study of barn ventilation, among them King, of the Wisconsin Experiment Station, and others.

We know that cows in breathing give off carbon dioxide, moisture, marsh gas and other matters. We know definitely how many cubic feet of fresh, pure air are necessary every hour to offset the impurities of a cow's breathing. From that we can determine the size of ventilating flue necessary to produce that change in air.

The so-called King system of ventilating provides for a large flue which opens near the floor and extends above the roof. The carbon dioxide, being a heavy gas, seeks the floor. The air on the floor is always colder than that near the ceiling. The wind blowing against the top of the flue which is open above the roof provides the suction which draws the foul air from the floor up through the opening where it is discharged.

We now must provide for fresh air to enter. The wind causes pressure of air against all sides of the barn. It is desirable to have the cold, fresh air enter near the ceiling where it gradually mixes with the warm air and drifts slowly downward where eventually it will be sucked up in by the ventilating flue and sent out through the roof. These openings for fresh air should not contact directly from the outside for then the warm air would escape. The intakes should be down near the ground or foundation and go up through the walls before entering the barn. Some ventilating systems change the King plan to this extent—the outlet for the foul air is at the ceiling and in the center of the barn.

Intakes should be about 4 by 16 inches and the ventilating flue not less than 2 feet by 2 feet. This whole system of course is based upon the barn being tightly constructed. For instance if the system is properly installed and the barn closed all night there should be very little or no odor in the morning when you enter.

In some barns windows are depended upon for ventilation. Plenty of windows are a good thing. They admit sunlight and cost very little more than the same amount of wall. Double-glass windows are very desirable because a single pane allows a coating of ice to form on the glass when the moisture from the inside air condenses on it. The double panes, set in the same sash, should be about one-quarter inch apart.

One objection to windows as a means of admitting fresh air is the draft hazard. It is a good plan to hinge the windows at the bottom in a one-story barn, because there is not room to have the sash slide upward. In the northern states storm windows are almost a necessity in winter to keep the barn warm.

Alfred F. Mims was a visitor to Clanton last Saturday. He didn't discuss politics. When I mentioned to him that 1932 would be another campaign year, he reminded me that it would not be time to run for Tax Collector again. That's all he said, and I will leave you to form your own conclusions.

Prof. Luther E. Little, principal of the school at Stanton, was among the visitors ot Clanton last Saturday.

Mrs. Oliver Mullins was reported in a serous condition Monday at her home at Jumbo. She suffered a stroke Sunday and was still unconscious Monday. Her children answered the summons to her bedside.

Painful Condition

"When I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time.

"After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

"Ten years medical practice has convinced me that persons suffering from functional debility as indicated by pasty complexions, faulty digestion, poor assimilation, chronic or occasional constipation, acidity, gas, unrefreshing sleep, nervousness, biliousness and toxic headaches, should shun the frequent use of calomel, salts, oils, or other drastic habit-forming purgative drugs.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

STABLE TAXATION ON FORESTS

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 6.—The Legislature of Alabama will be asked to provide a safeguard against excessive taxation of Auxiliary State Forest Lands, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. The present law provides that timber on such lands shall not be taxed directly or indirectly until cut or otherwise utilized, or until the termination of the owner's contract with the state when it shall pay a ten per cent yield tax.

This provision would ordinarily seem sufficient, but difficulties have arisen throughout the action of local tax authorities in raising the ad valorem tax on the land to make up for what is not paid anually on the growing timber, which is forbidden by the law. It is not always easy to establish this fact.

The proposed remedy is to require that the assessment of the land be not changed during the life of the Auxiliary State Forest contract except upon an affimative determination of the actual value of the land made jointly by the Commission of Forestry and the State Forest Commission. If the land really has increased in value, independently of the timber, on account of changing conditions of any kind, the fact will then be evident. However, merely increasing the assessment to make up for lack current receipts from other resources will not be permitted under the new proposed provision.

TIME IS RIPE FOR HOG PRODUCTION SAYS GIST

"Time is ripe for Alabama farmers to grow more hogs for home consumption and for market during the fall and winter of 1931," declares F. W. Gist, state and federal statistician, who reported a decrease of 16 per cent in the number of fall pigs in Alabama as compared with a year ago.

"In the peanut area especially, hogs may be grown at a profit. In the rest of the state a sufficient corn crop next year, with beans and peas, will also make hog growing attractive," he said.

The decrease in the number of fall pigs for the United States is one per cent, compared with a year ago and combining the fall survey as to the size of the fall crop and the June survey as to the size of the spring crop of pigs, the total pig crop in the United States is four per cent smaller this year than in 1930.

Although the survey shows that the number of sows bred or to be bred for spring farrowing in 1931 to be 12 per cent greater for the country as a whole, than the number of sows which actually farrowed in the spring of 1930, when allowance is made for the usual spread between breading intentions and actual farrowings, there is likely to be littel change in the number of sows which will actually farrow in the spring of 1931 compared with the spring of 1930.

Past surveys have shown that the number of sows reported bred in the fall were larger than the number reported as farrowed the following spring, due to changes in intentions, death losses and other causes. The number of pigs saved per litter in the spring of 1930 was unusually large, being 5 and one-half per cent above average. If the number saved per litter in the spring of 1931 is only average, the pig crop of 1931 will probably be somewhat smaller than that of 1930.

The average number of pigs saved per litter in the United States in the fall of 1930 was, 6.1, while in Alabama, it was 5.4.

John H. Gore has sold the Little Fruit Store to Mr. Evan Parrish, who continues the business at the same place in the Mullins Building back of Mullins and Moore. Mr. Gore says he is getting loose from everything else so he can give his entire time to the management of his farm near Clanton.

MANY FARMERS WANT PLACE TO WORK IN 1931

County Agent Stapp advises that he is being called upon daily to help farmers find places where they can work on halves for 1931. There are a lot of men in the county who are not able to rent. Landowners who can possibly take care of one or more men on halves this year are urged to do so, and County Agent Stapp will appreciate any such landlord getting in touch with him.

ARE YOU USING THE BEST VARIETY OF COTTON?

Farmers of Alabama are growing the shortest staple cotton grown in the cotton belt, and Chilton County farmers are growing more than their share of this short staple. The Chilton County cotton is so short that cotton buyers are refusing to buy it. Indications are that Chilton County farmers, who grow short staple cotton will be penalized even more this year than in the past. For information along this line, County Agent Stapp suggests that farmers in doubt about the penalty on short staple cotton might talk to George Polk Renfroe Mullins, Gulledge Bros. and Cal Foshee. In fact any of the cotton merchants of the county are aware of the serious penalty placed on farmers, who persist in growing short staple cotton.

The Alabama Experiment Station advises that D. P. L. cotton is the highest yielder of good staple and should be planted by all farmers, whose land is not heavily infested with wilt. If it is necessary to plant heavily infested wilt land with cotton, the Exepriment Station advises the use of good wilt-resisting cotton.

County Agent Stapp has arranged with Farm Bureau at Clanton to secure for farmers of Chilton County sufficient seed of D. P. L. and Rhines Wilt Resisting variety to take care of the farmers needs.

TIMELY ORCHARD SUGGESTIONS

County Agent Stapp advises that now is the time to clean up home orchards and get them in good shape for producing fruit for this year. The trees should be pruned and sprayed with oil emulsion for scale and general health of the tree. One good application of oil emulsion now would be sufficient to control the scale and put the trees in good vigorous growing condition. Every farmer should try to take care of the orchard in order to provide fresh fruit and fruit for canning this year. Any farmer who will follow the recommendations in the Home Orchard Bulletin at County Agent Stapp's office can have good fruit.

WHAT PRICE HEAT?

REGARDLESS of the kind of fuel you use, HEAT is what you actually want and actually buy, whether fuel to produce that HEAT is delivered to your HOME in a truck or thru a pipe line.

Just as distance is measured in inches and weight in ounces, HEAT is measured in B. T. U.'s (British Thermal Units). In order to compare the cost of COAL AND COKE with Natural Gas, compare the cost of the Heat or B. T. U.'s as furnished by each fuel.

Here is a very simple table by which you can easily determine what the same amount of HEAT you are now getting from your COAL OR COKE would cost you, if you substituted Natural Gas in your home.

COST OF NATURAL GAS TO EQUAL HEAT UNITS IN A TON OF COAL OR COKE

Heat Units Per lb. of Coal or Coke	Heat Units Per Ton of Coal or Coke (2000 lbs.)	Number of Cubic Ft. Natural Gas to equal Ton Coal or Coke	Price * Natural Gas Per 1000 Cu. Ft.	Cost of Natural Gas to Equal Ton Coal or Coke
13,000	26,000,000	26,000	@ 60 cents	$15.60
13,500	27,000,000	27,000	@ 60 cents	16.20
14,000	28,000,000	28,000	@ 60 cents	16.80
14,500	29,000,000	29,000	@ 60 cents	17.40
15,000	30,000,000	30,000	@ 60 cents	18.00

*Sixty cents is minimum rate for Natural Gas for household use approved by Alabama Public Service Commission.

To figure what it would cost YOU to substitute Natural Gas for Coal or Coke in your home heating plant, call your dealer and ask him how many B. T. U.'s per pound are contained in the Coal or Coke you are using. Then find this figure in the left hand column, and you'll find the comparative cost of Natural Gas in the last column on the right. Compare this cost with what you're paying now for Coal or Coke.

FOR EXAMPLE: If the Coal or Coke you are burning contains 13,500 B. T. U.'s per pound, it contains (2000 times 13,500) 27,000,000 B. T. U.'s per ton. To produce 27,000,000 B. T. U.'s will require 27,000 cubic feet of natural gas. With Natural Gas at 60 cents per thousand cubic feet you will pay $16.20 to get the same heat from Natural Gas as from one ton of the Coal or Coke you are now using. To find the difference in your home heating costs for the WINTER, merely multiply the cost per ton of your coal by the number of tons you use; then multiply $16.20 by the number of tons you use and subtract the cost of Coal or Coke from the cost of Natural Gas.

WHAT A SAVING! THAT'S WHY WE SAY—UNLESS YOU HAVE MONEY TO BURN, BURN COAL OR COKE.

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:40-52.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Ideal Childhood.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Growing up for God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Responsibility of Youth.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Being about the Father's Business.

I. Jesus Growing (v. 40).

While Jesus was as to his personality, God, yet his deity did not interfere with his development as a human being. The processes of his physical, mental, and spiritual growth were the same as those of any normal human being.

1. "Grew and waxed strong." It was necessary for his body to develop. His brain, nerves, and muscles must not only attain unto the proper size but must come to act in unison, become correlated.

2. "Filled with wisdom." As with most children his training was largely in the hands of his mother. She, no doubt, taught him to commit to memory Bible verses and taught him the great stories of the Old Testament, from the creation down through the patriarchs and prophets. It seems that it was customary among the Jews to send the child at the age of six years to the synagogue school, where the Old Testament was the textbook.

3. "And the grace of God was upon him." By the grace of God doubtless, is meant God's loving favor and tender care.

II. Jesus Tarrying Behind at Jerusalem (vv. 41-43).

At the age of twelve years the Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the temple. He was then considered "a child of the law." Being thoroughly conscious of his mission, Jesus tarried behind and inquired into the meaning of the ordinances of God's house. His heart yearned for his Father.

III. Jesus Found in the Temple (vv. 44-47).

When his mother and Joseph had gone some distance on the homeward journey, they perceived that Jesus was not with them and sought for him among their kinsfolk and acquaintances. Not finding him, they returned to Jerusalem and found him in the temple.

1. He was sitting (v. 46). He was perfectly at home in his Father's house.

2. He was hearing the teachers of God's Word (v. 46), and was eager to learn God's will.

3. He asked questions (v. 46). His growing mind was inquisitive; it inquired after—reached out after—truth.

4. He answered questions (v. 47). His answers showed such great wisdom that he astonished those who heard him. It was the expression of the workings of a perfect human mind suffused by the Holy Spirit.

IV. Mary's Complaint (vv. 48-50).

1. Her question (v. 48). "Why hast thou dealt thus with us?" She remonstrated with him for his behavior.

2. Jesus' reply (v. 49). He replied to her question in a dignified yet tender manner, but made no apology, thus indicating that he was more than merely the son of Mary. God was his Father.

3. Mary acquiesced in his revelation of himself (v. 51). She did not understand all these things, but she kept them in her heart.

V. Jesus' Obedience (v. 51).

Though he was fully conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of filial obedience, thus teaching us that obedience to parents is pleasing to God, and a duty which will be discharged faithfully by those who have the spirit of Jesus Christ.

VI. Jesus' Development (v. 52).

1. Mental. "Increased in wisdom." Although the divine nature was united with the human, his mind was left free to develop normally.

2. Physical. He increased in stature. His body developed according to the laws of a normal human being.

3. Spiritual. He increased in favor with God and man. As his mind developed, and his apprehension of God became more comprehensive, the Divine Being could be more fully expressed through him, and as the perfect life was lived, men could recognize his superior qualities, and therefore, their hearts would open to him.

Christian Victory

To trust him and to keep the eye on him is the one secret of all Christian victory.—G. H. Morrison.

The Disease, the Remedy

"The law discovers the disease. The gospel gives the remedy."—Martin Luther.

PRICE OF 1931 COTTON CROP WILL DEPEND ON ACREAGE

There is no doubt of an understanding in the minds of those who are interested that a most serious and critical situation exists for the cotton farmers of the South. The situation calls for something different, even drastic, to be done at once in order to keep us from wreck and ruin. Many articles are being written concerning this. Much talk is being indulged in, but no action is being taken; time is quickly passing and the dawn of the 1931 crop will soon be here.

After having studied this situation, travelling through the states, I come to the conclusion that the two most important phases of this problem are: First, too much fertilizer being used. Second, planting of too much cotton. The prime cause of the present conditions of cotton prices is that of over production. This phase of the situation can be corrected by a drastically restricted cotton acreage in 1931. Reduction of the production will naturally make the price rise. Bankers cannot loan money; merchants cannot credit the farmers to raise cotton at the present price; hence, why can't the situation be changed, prices raised by planting less cotton, and making a demand for the other products? The government has already said that they couldn't help us out if we did-not cut the acreage in cotton.

There is a tendancy for the farmers of the smaller cotton states to say: "We don't need to cut acreage, it is the larger states, as Texas, that plants so much and raises so much that needs to be cut." But this is somewhat of a mistaken idea. We must remember that Texas is five times larger than any other state and does not raise more cotton, accordingly than we do. We all need to cut the acreage. However, the restriction of cotton acreage cannot be done by the farmers alone, but can with the assistance of all bankers, land owners, furnishing merchants and Farm Bureau Credit Corporations.

The carrying on of the work in order to get the acreage can be done by the farmers, ourselves, if the bankers, merchants and Farm Bureau Credit Corporation will back us up. We won't have to attempt to organize the farmers either as has been done and failed. It only proved to be jobs for nice, fat salaries and men do nothing, or pretend to help us out, but let's get busy and do the work ourselves.

I, a farmer, am vitally interested in this problem, and am willing to exert any amount of work to get it across. This is my plan: All of the land owners and renters, for standing rent, can sign a pledge not to plant but 50 per cent of the acreage planted in cotton, in 1931, and use 50 per cent of the fertilizer used in 1930, for 5 years. The bankers, the furnishing merchants and Farm Bureau Credit Corporation can also pledge not to furnish any farmer unless he signs a pledge to cut his cotton acreage and fertilizer 50 per cent of that in 1930, for 5 years. The ginners also play an important part in solving this problem. They can pledge not to gin a man's cotton that is over 50 per cent of the acreage of 1930 for 5 years.

These pledges can be taken in each cotton state, by counties. The farmers can set a date, meet at the county seat, appoint one or two men to each beat, get out and get them to sign. Let them go to each land owner, banker and furnishing merchant, make him see the importance of keeping the pledge and signing it. Then on a set date all of the men working in the beats meet at the county seat, collect the pledges and file them on record. This can be done in each county of each state and have all the cotton states with 100 per cent pledges.

The benefit of these pledges for restricted acreage, for 5 years, can be seen in many ways. First, there will be a demand for more cotton seed from which oil is made, and must be supplied. Then there is the peanuts, the only substitute, will get the chance to get on the market at a high price level. There will be a demand for more stock, and this calls for more feed to be raised for market.

Some action must be adopted in order to get this work done. I plead, do not sit still and wait and say: "Somebody else will go ahead, and I will follow," but get to work, advertise through your county papers and urge the importance of these meetings at your county seat; appoint the men to work the beats and get these pledges signed before any arrangements are made for the ensuing year, 1931. This appeal is being made in every paper of each county and state in the cotton states; hence it is impotant that we all start immediately and together.

As I have said above, I am a farmer and am willing to meet with the farmers of any state, at my own expense, and help start the signing of these pledges, and make a success of it.

This is the form of the pledge:

I, A farmer, merchant, ginner, and banker, hereby pledge not to plant but 50 per cent of the cotton acreage of that in 1930, and not use but 50 percent of the fertilizer used in 1930, for five years.

Please make further appeal to the ones who are interested in your county seat and through the county papers, within the next few days and lets get busy.—Otis Paul, Goshen Alabama.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS

The missionary society of the Methodist church in Clanton met on last Monday to begin their year's work. Many of the women braved the weather and much enthusiasm prevailed. Mrs. D. W. Haskew was elected as president for the coming year. Others elected were: Vice president, Mrs. Marcus Polk, secretary and treasurer, Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer; local treasurer, Mrs. J. D. Armstrong; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. C. Warr; superintendent of supplies, Mrs. Bob Jones, superintendent Junior, Miss Morris; voice agent, Mrs. S. J. Kicker. The circles were not changed, and will meet next Monday afternoon under the leadership of the circle chairmen.

The New Year started off right with one very unusual performance. Tuesday afternoon a fine Duroc Jersey hog was seen strolling down the middle of one of Clanton's main business streets, just as unconcerned about himself as any hog could be.

He was laid to rest at Pleasant Hill church, where he had been a member for a number of years. Rev. Willie Davis conducted the funeral with Mell Martin in charge.

May God bless and comfort our mother through the vale of tears. She was so good and faithful to work and wait on him during the long illness. Our father was born and reared in Alabama.

THORSBY SECTION

(S. E. Norton, Manager)

About 2 o'clock last Sunday afternoon, January 4th, W. H. Raybon and his father-in-law, J. C. Primm, both of Thorsby, were crossing the Maplesville Highway at the intersection with Ninch St. in Clanton were hit by an auto coming from Selma. The cars collided with such force that the car of Mr. Raybon was overturned, throwing both of the men out. Mr. Primm was so seriously injured that he died a few minutes later without ever regaining consciousness. Mr. Raybon was considerably shaken up, cut and bruised about the head and body. We saw him in bed the next day. He said that he was doing as well as could be expected.

Mell Martin, undertaker of Clanton, took charge of the body and prepared it for burial at Thorsby on Monday afternoon.

The car that collided with them was driven by a Mr. T. M. Yawn, of Birmingham. He was not one of the type of hit and run drivers, but stopped and rendered what assistance he could. He gave his name and address and attended the funeral the next day. He manifested a purpose to do whatsoever that he could under the circumstances.

James Calhoun Primm was born in South Carolina, July 15th, 1849, and at an early age brought by his parents to Chilton County, Alabama. The home of the Primm's was for more than 50 years at Free Springs, Chilton County, where they were among the most prominent and successful farmers.

On December 28th, 1883, he was married to Miss Martha J. Meiers, whose home was near Clanton. For all their married life, Mr. and Mrs. Primm had been active in the church and community affairs, until coming to Thorsby some six years ago. They were then affiliated with the Methodist church. There being no Methodist church in Thorsby, they united with the United Protestant church of Thorsby, and have proved to be active and efficient members. In advanced years they were seldom absent from church services.

The funeral was conducted by the pastor of their church, Rev. Joseph E. Each, assisted by Rev. E. W. Butler, Congregational and Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the Baptist church of Thorsby of which Mr. and Mrs. Raybon, with whom the Primm's lived were members. The attendance at the funeral was large enough to tax the capacity of the house, and there were many beautiful flowers.

Twelve children were born to this union, seven of them are now living. Two of the sons enlisted during the World War, both saw active service in France, and one of them, J. Wyatt, gave his life for the cause of liberty.

All of the living children were able to attend the funeral.

The names of the children are: J. W. Primm, Weogulfka, Alabama; R. L. Primm Thorsby; T. R. Primm, Tuskegee, Ida Killingsworth, Birmingham; Alma Raybon, Thorsby; Hugh R. Primm, Siluria; Ethel M. Fletcher, Birmingham.

He is survived by two brothers, Peter of Clanton and Thomas of Miami.

Thorsby Baptist Ladies Aid social will be held on Thursday afternoon of this week at the home of Mrs. Ben Davenport.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Each entertained several young people at dinner last Tuesday evening.

Miss Alta Each gave a watch party last Wednesday night.

Miss Roma Lee Pate also gave a watch party the same night.

Miss Lorena Primm of Womans College, Montgomery, spent a few days at home, returning Tuesday.

Miss Addie Primm is still on the sick list.

A Junior Christian Endeavor Society was organized at the Thorsby Congregational church last Sunday night by Miss Alta Each. Ten members assisted in the organization. Officers elected were Lucille Each, president; Ruth Foss, secretary and organist; Margaret Ward, treasurer; Jack Peterson, chairman of the social committee; Jack Higgins, chairman of Prayer meeting committee; Frances Conway, chairman of lookout committee.

Mrs. P. B. Thompson spent the week end with her mother in Clanton.

Mrs. Sidney Davenport is making an extended visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Willis in Thorsby. Her husband will retain his position in a bank at Phil Campbell, Alabama.

Mrs. Hattie M. Gerald spent last week with her daughter, Mrs. Leonard E. Moody in Birmingham.

Mrs. Clyde Billingsley and children have returned to Thorsby after they spent a week with relatives in Birmingham.

Mark Twain, (Samuel L. Clemens) once said, "The report of my death was greatly exaggerated." And so Mrs. S. E. Norton considers the report of her serious illness, as published in the Banner last week as unauthorized. She was sick with a severe cold, but is now so far improved that she is up and about the house.

Mrs. Bella Payne of Fairhope, Alabama arrived Sunday for an indefinite stay with Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Norton. She is the sister of Mrs. Norton.

Mr. A. N. Laurell took Mr. E. L. Thornburg and son, Conway, to Birmingham, Saturday, where Mr. Thornburg remained for medical treatment. Conway returned with Mr. Laurell.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Thorsby Institute will be held in the dining hall and living room at the Institute at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, January 8th.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Goddard, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Goddard and Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Goddard spent Monday afternoon calling on Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Sather of Elmore, and inspecting the grave vault works.

Mrs. Alton Cox came home from Prattville Tuesday night.

Miss Vivian Roebuck of Birmingham spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gray.

Mrs. S. C. Wood and her son, Frank, spent the week end in Birmingham visiting her mother.

Mrs. G. F. Harper, who has been sick is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Jones of Clanton and Mrs. Webster Sharpe spent Wednesday as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Goddard.

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Each were the Wednesday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Goddard.

Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Goddard, Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Goddard, who has been visiting at the home of the grand father, Mr. J. H. Goddard, left Friday morning for their home in Grover Hill, Ohio.

On Christmas Eve Miss Willie Littlejohn entertained at a birthday dinner. Yuletide decorations prevaded in the living and dining rooms, making a very pretty effect. A large birthday cake embedded with Christmas greenery made a beautiful center for the very attractive table.

Friends who enjoyed this lovely courtesy were Mrs. Grace Littleton, Messrs. Green and Billy Thomas, Mrs. Roberta Childress, Misses Gladys Parnell, Agnes Leary, and Messrs. Walter Parnell and Earl Leary.

Two new students have enrolled at Thorsby Institute, Fred Boyd from Jakin, Georgia and Roma Stirling from Pittsview, Alabama.

All of the Institute teachers returned Monday night except Miss Stoddard who resigned on account of her mother's health and has returned to Idaho.

Because of the lengthened Christmas vacation school will meet on Saturday from 8:30 to 1:30 this week and probably the 24th. Then during the second semester it will meet on two Saturdays.

The literary society party scheduled for Saturday night will be postponed indefinitely.

The second semester will begin February the second.

Through the kindness of friends of Miss Davison and Miss Jenkins, vest pocket editions of the New Testament and Psalms were given the boarding pupils Monday night.

If there are any who would like to start music lessons with Miss Thoroman, state accredited music teacher at the Institute, please speak to her about the matter soon, as she can take a few more pupils. Miss Thoroman has had considerable experience and does very thorough work.

Goodbye 1930 season—it will always be a pleasant memory.

Some Advice For The Man Who Does Not Need It

(EDITORIAL)

There is no use in telling the man who is down and out what ought to be done at this time. Any man whose family is up against the rocks and hungry will work to make bread if he is given the chance.

Therefore, the proper thing right now, it seems to us, is to get the ear of the man who is not in distress, and who is able to help the needy, if he will only show a willingness to do it.

The solution of our economic problem in Chilton County lies in the hands of the men who are not in a tight. They must come to the rescue of the less fortunate.

The man who can do business—who can carry on his business operations—and give employment to those who need it, is the man who must be talked to right now. He is the man who must become interested. The fellow who is hungry is already interested and willing to do his part.

The man who owns a farm and has the money with which to operate that farm should be making plans to cultivate every acre of his available land, instead of planning to let it lie idle.

The man who is able to keep his business running and keep his farm producing something to eat, and fails to do it this year, is only adding more to the hard times that are causing many people to go hungry.

Chilton County can overcome its present situation if the men who own farms and are able to keep those farms running will put folks to work on the farms and give them a chance to eat and work.

There are plenty of people who will be glad to work from now until next fall just for what their families need to eat during the summer, and for the chance to make something to carry them through next winter. The man who is able to furnish such people work and food on his farm is doing a very foolish thing if he closes down now and says he will not have his land cultivated while times are so hard.

You may think you can not make any profit out of operating your farm under present conditions. If you do, you are wrong about that. If you will hook up with the safe farming program that is being sponsored by our county agent, you can conduct a safe and profitable operation of your farm in 1931. And you will be giving to some man who needs it a chance to keep on eating and feeding his family.

The man who can is the man who must get into action now to save the day for the man who can't.

We urge the business men, farmers, land owners, bankers, and everybody to take note of the meeting that is being planned for Tuesday, January 20, to deal with this question.

Our county agent, C. E. Stapp, through the Alabama Extension Service at Auburn, is working on a plan of safe farming for the people of Chilton County in 1931. The citizens of our county who can do so must join in with him and help him put it over.

Where Is Your Cash Coming From in 1931?

"Where is my cash coming from in 1931?" is a question every Chilton County farmer is asking himself at this time, due to the present low prices of farm products.

"I must pay my taxes, I must keep my children in school, I must clothe my family; my present farming system does not give me sufficient cash returns to enable me to do these and meet my other cash obligations."

These are statements coming from farmers, large and small, from all sections of Chilton County.

For this reason, I have arranged for us to have expert assistance in discussing and analyzing these important questions, and offer the best solutions and recommendations that have grown out of a thorough and careful study by the best brains of the country.

Come to the meeting at the Courthouse, Friday, January 20th, 1931, at 10 a. m., and bring your neighbors.—C. E. STAPP, County Agent.

DON'T WALK INTO TROUBLE

There seems to be very little logic in reasoning that with the United States a member of the so-called World Court, strength enough would be given that more or less august body to quell and quiet all the disturbing noises of Europe. The man who wishes to avoid trouble doesn't deliberately walk into it. To become a member of the court, and thereby a part of the League of Nations, is only to become a part of an European military alliance—for that is all the League really is. And when was there ever a European military alliance which did not eventually result in war? There is no safeguard in the so-called Root reservation, which provides that we have the right at any time to withdraw for any reason, without arousing the ill-will of other nations. We suppose no nation would officially chastise us for withdrawal under such a provision, but what does any man think of another who makes a bargain and then declines to stick to it? Can't you just imagine the opprobrium that would be heaped upon our heads if we were to withdraw because some question had been settled in a manner that displeased us?

Voice of the People

A WORD OF ADVICE TO FARMERS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please permit me a little space to express a few thoughts throught your column, which might be of some good to those in our county who are less fortunate than I. We are going through a period of depression in some ways that has never had an equal. We read of more suicides, bank failures, and great industries of all kinds going down. Too much of this will almost make a pessimist out of the most substantial optimist. To begin with I want to tell the people of Chilton County that you live in one of the most natural formed spots in Alabama, if not in all of the world, and to take the farmer as a whole, I do not believe you can find another county that will equal ours, in progressive farming.

I know it is hard to give up your old car, but listen, farmers, you had better roll your old car into the shed and quit taking eggs and butter, and even sometime swapping meat and flour that you have bought on a credit, for gasoline, and go to work, if you only get 50 cents a day. I think it will not be long before things will restore themselves to normal conditions. On account of science getting out so much machinery, man-power has been laid aside and consumption has been stopped since we have a surplus of such commodities as cotton, corn, wheat, etc. You see machinery does not eat nor wear clothes and shoes. It will take a while for things to right themselves. My advice to the farmer is to plant oats, corn, and in fact everything to eat, in order to insure a plenty and some surplus; and the balance in cotton, and not use a pound of commercial fertilizer.

Some will say that you can't raise cotton without fertilizer. This is the very thing that should happen. Wo do not want to raise much, then it will bring a better price. The fertilizer companies, and I am sorry to say some bankers have joined them saying reduce acreage and use more fertilizer. This would bring certain disaster. The best way, as I see it, to pay a debt is not to make it. If you buy fertilizer you have this to pay if you make a crop whether the price of cotton is high or low.

If the Chilton County farmers had the money paid out for fertilizer last year in the banks in Clanton, the vaults would almost be bursting open. You see so much in the paper now about the government helping you with "cheap money." Friends, the government can't help you. Did you ever stop to think and figure out what this "cheap money" meant? We will say that you need $100.00 this year, and the government would let you have it for 4 per cent interest, and your bank will charge you 8 per cent, you will save $4.00. So you see the hard thing to pay back is the principal and not the interest. I know it is hard to send your boy or girl to school with run-down shoes and cotton hose, and in some instances no shoes at all, but listen folks, I was ten years old before I knew that boys wore shoes; and I want to say just here that I am proud of it, because it taught me the lesson of economy and self-denial while young, that has helped to hold me up in such times as these.

So do not be discouraged and give up, but get up earlier in the morning, put in a full day's work at something so you can be contented, and resolve to stay out of debt, if you have to make a great sacrifice. Yet if you do have to make a debt, let it be for something to eat, and not fertilizer, clothes, automobiles and gasoline. But if you do have to buy something to eat that you could raise on the farm, I would ask the Lord to forgive you this time, and send you some more rain and sunshine so that you may make use of it this time, and raise something to eat on the farm.

We think times are hard now, but all of you who were old enough and lived in 1894-95 and had to make a living for yourself, well know that conditions are real good now in comparison to them. We are spending more money now for gasoline in this county than the people spent then for clothes, shoes and wearing apparel of every discription. I hauled corn 12 miles and sold it for 35 cents per bushel, and took in exchange flour for 80 cents for a 24-lb. sack. Now if there are any of you who are fortunate to have any money laid aside, I would suggest that you bring it and make a deposit in one of our banks, because our banks are ably managed, and your money will be safely kept. This would be a good time for everybody who has something to build or improve to put somebody to work, and you will have done a better favor than you would have if you had helped them by donating to them. A word to the Commissioners, I want to congratulate you for giving so many people work before Christmas, and I think you have done the biggest and most progressive service you have ever rendered while serving in this capacity.

In conclusion I want to say that I have been trying to live the advice that I have given to you. I have worked on an average of 25 men a day for the last twelve months, and put all of the money that I had in the bank. And I promise you that I will not buy any fertilizer in the year 1931. Wishing you each and all of you a very prosperous and contented new year, I am

Yours very truly,
W. A. REYNOLDS

JEMISON HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Last Friday morning we had a very interesting chapel program. Rev. Jones, the pastor of the Baptist church, gave a short talk on how and when we should make our new year resolutions. This was followed by a humorous program. We are always glad to have our pastors and friends join us in our chapel exercises.

The basket ball games of the past week-end have been a success. The boys went to Isabella and won over them by the score of 27 to 7. The girls played Calera Junior High on the home court and won by a close score of 18 to 16. Saturday afternoon both teams played Tompson High of Siluria. Both games were thrillers, for the girls won by the score of 13 to 12, and the boys won 20 to 17. The boys will invade Birmingham Wednesday afternoon for a game with Phillips High.

Everyone is preparing for the mid-term tests, which will begin Wednesday of this week, and end Friday.

The Junior III Home Economics class is now studying the yards and how to plan the home and its surroundings. They have just completed the study on "home and its care." Most of the pupils are now beginning their project work for the school year. Before this course was completed the class visited many of the homes to see the different types of home arrangement. We visited Miss Elizabeth McNeil's beautiful new home on January the first.

The school kitchen is divided into four groups. Each group painted its kitchen utensils a different color. The colors being blue, red, yellow, and green.

The class has made new curtains for the Conway dining hall. We are planning to make new draperies for the sewing room. There are twenty-three pupils in this class and has Miss Leacy Newell as its home economics instructor.

Quite a number of the members of the American Legion in Chilton County are planning to attend the celebration in Montgomery next Monday and Monday night, honor of the visit of National Commander, Duke O'Neil. Anyone iterested in going are requested to leave your name with Joe Calloway.

Since the burning of their home last week, Mr. and Mrs. Buck Roberts, have moved to the house at the intersection of Tenth Street and Fifth Avenue, near the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Page went to Birmingham Monday night where they attended a popular show at the Erlanger Theatre.

M. Marinkovitch, foreign minister on Jugo-Slavia, says that he foresees a long and prosperous peace if the United States takes the responsibility of helping to clear up the European situation. Is there anything else we can do for them, while we are at it?

General Chiang, the new ruler of China, is quoted by the correspondent of the Chicago Tribune as saying that the time for high sounding speeches and resolutions has passed and the time for constructive action has arrived. If he really means this, maybe China has found a real leader at last.

By Jay Taylor

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Forest experts in the Department of Commerce tell us that ten million Christmas trees are now used annually. It is found to be a great help to timber conservation when the trees are carefully cut from the dense forests.

All important members of the League of Nations have always had the right to prevent the World Court from giving an advisory opinion on any question that they would object to. Senate Reservation V was adopted for the purpose of giving the same right to the United States.

But our European friends, who are not willing to let America enjoy equal rights with them, have written as a substitute for Reservation V a new protocol which is now before the Senate for adoption or rejection.

Senator Pepper, who had much to do with writing Reservation V, has examined carefully this new protocol, which is long and complicated, and the senator assures us that it has a joker in every paragraph and that it is a subtle attempt to tie us up with the League of Nations through the Court.

A most important question involved in the present controversy is whether reservations to protect the interests of the United Stats shall be made by the American Senate or by European diplomats representing the League of Nations.

In totaling the population of Alaska there are 3,500 grizzly bears that should not be overlooked.

Some keen observers believe that if America should become entangled in European affairs, the danger of war would be greatly increased, because certain European countries might be more inclined to start something if there was a good chance of getting the cooperation of the United States.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Just now when Congress and the administration are attempting to do what they can to relieve the effects of the depression it is well not to forget that the hard times which came upon us so suddenly a little more than a year ago are of world-wide extent and due in the main part to causes over which the United States government has no control. This fact was pointed out repeatedly during the recent campaign by the political orators supporting the party in power but judging by results it is doubtful whether they got the message over to the bulk of the voters although they tried to the best of their ability.

But the fact remains that the causes of the depression are world-wide. That the depression itself is world-wide is evidenced by the changes of government all over the world, during the past few months, many of them accompanied by revolution. The recent abortive revolutionary attempt in Spain is the latest example.

A great many writers on economics say that the depression is a result of the final post-war deflation. Prices and costs of living, they say, had to get back to pre-war basis. Others lay most of the trouble to the over-production in raw materials, citing the over-supplies of cotton wheat, sugar, oil, as examples. Still others tell us that the trouble is not so much over production as under consumption, while there is still another economic, school which blames it all on to the scarcity of gold and the concentration of gold in the United States and France.

Perhaps the real cause of the trouble may be found to an extent in each of these theories. Just how much each element complained of is a contributing factor will never be known, for as soon as times get better the people will forget about the depression, and its causes. It is only fair to say, however, that world-wide unrest is in part a cause as well as an effect of the depression. For years China has been in the throes of civil war, until the country has approached a state of complete exhaustion and almost national annihilation. For years Russia has been a disturbing factor and has only recently commenced dumping commodities on an already glutted world market. Conditions have been seething in Egypt and India, too. When one considers the hundreds of millions of people in China, in India, in Russia and in Egypt, and the potential market which they represent, it is easy to realize what the dislocation of the markets of these nations has meant to the rest of the world. With nearly half the world in political turmoil to the point where its world trade is disrupted there is every reason for world-wide depression.

Already there are signs of improvement in China, while hopes have arisen that an agreement restoring stability may be reached in India. Here are factors which ought ot make for constructive improvement of world conditions in the near future, unless the world is to be sorely disappointed again. The return of stable conditions in China and of political peace in India would go a long way toward stabilizing trade in the other countries of the world.

European statesmen say they are willing to maintain peace if Uncle Sam will show them the way. Well, let's lend Fred Libby to them and see what he can do over there.

Every American should be ambitious to make 1931 a prosperous year. Never have our resources, from the standpoint of capital, men or machines, been so great. Never have we possessed such an abundance of potentialities for future achievement.

The nation is beginning to emerge from the "depression wave" which engulfed us more than a year ago. There is nothing fundamentally wrong with America, and our ills are of the most transitory sort. One of the most hopeful signs for future national stability and progress is the vast amount of effort now being given by leaders in all fields of endeavor to find workable solutions of our social and economic problems. Instead of being either overly optimistic or stupidly pessimistic they are approaching them scientifically.

It is trite to say that future prosperity will be largely the result of industrial development. The electric industry, railroad, automobile, telephone, mining, oil—progress in any one of them is connected with progress for all other business.

Industry's future problems will be mainly arising from governmental policies toward business. There is a strong, politically-backed trend toward socialism in this country. Men in high official positions are seeking—some sincerely, some for the sake of the political capital it makes for them—to put the government into various lines of business and pass unnecessarily restrictive laws. The 1930 depression was unquestionably largely the result of political agitation to discredit industrial leadership.

Socialism in the United States will succeed only if the American public fails to recognize that it is a violation of the spirit of our constitution, and a denial of those social and economic rights and liberties laid down by the founders of the nation.

In the same category must be included efforts to control the habits and personal affairs of our citizens through sumptuary legislation. There is no greater menace facing our people than the growth in scope and increase in power of an organized bureaucracy. Its ultimate result will be to establish a dictatorship of office-holders, which can be prevented only by unceasing vigilance on the part of voters.

If the sole achievement of 1931 is a start toward a return to fundamentals in the relation between government and industry, and government and the idividual, it will be remembered as one of the greatest years in our history.

From the purely material standpoint, there is no reason why the new year should not be the beginning of a new and greater epoch. The machine age has become firmly established. Industrial and agricultural mechanization is now an accepted fact. Domestic life, aided by labor saving devices and modern conveniences has reached new standards of comfort. Commodities and services that were once only possessed by the wealthy are now in reach of all. The American workman, commanding record horsepower, leads the world in wages and production.

All that preceding generations discovered, evolved and perfected is ours to use. No nation ever had so firm a foundation on which to build.

But we must not lose sight of the fact that the modern world is a cooperative world in which no nation can stand alone and remote from the rest. A broad and tolerant international spirit is supplanting the insular nationalism of an earlier day. Friendly diplomatic and commercial relations between nations are the surest guarantees of world peace and progress. The volume of our foreign trade may, in coming years, mean the difference between prosperity and depression in the United States. Local prosperity depends on buying and selling between individuals and industries—world prosperity depends on buying and selling between nations.

Political bickerings, sectional jealousies, local prejudices, industrial depressions—all must be conquered and forgotten in the work of accomplishing the greatest possible good for the greatest possible number of people.

WORLD DISARMAMENT

The cause of world disarmament does not look any too bright. It is true that the London naval conference has brought about a cessation of naval rivalry between the two principal naval powers of the world, but the question of disarmament in Europe seems to be as difficult of solution as ever. During the eleven years of its existence the League of Nations has been trying to do something along the way of military disarmament but up to this time it has signally failed of its purpose. Europe is today an armed camp, just as it was before the World War, only more so. On every hand we hear stories of new European alignments. Military expenditures are increasing. The Russian military machine, under the guidance of world revolutionaries who preach disarmament for other nations, is the greatest and most efficient in the history of the Slav country. France is armed to the teeth and the French minister of war recently declared: "We must have a standing army—an army which would prevent the possibility of another Marne which might end in defeat instead of victory."

Italy is arming, too, and is attempting to build up another alliance to counter-balance and ultimately overthrow the French system of alliances on the continent. Germany is beginning to chafe under the restraint of the Versailles treaty and threatens to start arming again.

In the face of all this, what are we going to do about it? The pacifist program of disarming America as an example to the rest of the world is so foolish and so suicidal as to require no refutation. There are other internationalists who declare that we ought to enter European arrangements to bring about peace and disarmament. Just how this could be done they fail to tell us. Up to this time, the League of Nations has failed to do anything for disarmament. The only step taken during the past ten years—the agreement on naval affairs—was taken outside the League. Now is there any assurance that Uncle Sam, inside the League or its Court, could bring order out of chaos? How could we persuade the war dogs of Europe to cease their growling? Are we supposed to try to frighten them into quietude? There is considerable doubt whether such a program will work. Most Americans will continue to believe that Uncle Sam's best place is on the side lines.

Maybe the fact that the American people have ceased to buy his books abusing them had something to do with Sinclair Lewis's unloading of $48,000 worth of Latin-American grouch on the Swedish Academy.

A card from J. J. Mims in Los Angeles, written January 31, said he was having a mighty big time, and was keen for the football game on New Years Day. He promises to tell us a lot about the game and his trip when he gets back home.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw—and Some He Saw Not.

It so happens again this week that I haven't much space left for my little corner chat with you. A number of the other good scribes have come across to get something off their chests to begin the New Year, and I am glad to step back and give them the space.

For instance, there is the long letter from W. A. Reynolds, discussing our present economic situation. A subject that ought to have much serious attention right now. Our farmers have always been reluctant to take the advice that was offered them. And I guess there is more advice available right now than anything else. I would not tell a farmer to try to take all the advice he gets, but I do think it would be a mighty good plan for him to listen to the advice of men like Will Reynolds, and mix with it a lot of good common sense. Think. Remember most of us are away behind with our thinking.

In a few days now we will have a new Sheriff. Walter Gillespie is getting everything in shape to take charge of the office about Monday week.

I hope everybody had a good time during the Christmas and New Year holidays. I did, and I am feeling fine with a good deal of interest in the future. There is lots to do, lots to write about, and lots of good hard thinking to be done. Let us get down to business and we can make 1931 a better year than 1930 was. You may say that will be hard to do under the circumstances. I know it will be hard to do. But it is a problem that ought to be done.

We have a new column this week, "Moral Echoes," by Rev. D. W. Haskew, our Methodist pastor. Mr. Haskew promises to let us have this contribution at regular intervals throughout the year. We are glad to have it. The observations of a new man in our town will be an interesting diversion from the writings of The Man on the Corner, who has been here in Clanton all his life.

I am impressed with the thought that is being given to our agricultural and economic problems for 1931 by the County Agent, the Farm Bureau, and the Kiwanis Club. Such concerted action kept up with determination and persistence, will produce some valuable results in due time.

And the American Legion of Chilton County proposes to make a very valuable contribution to the future interests of our county by sponsoring a program of fire prevention and forestry conservation. The meeting Monday night was addressed by Massey Edgar, of Washington County, on this subject. It was a very good meeting, a splendid address, and I hope will result in some effective work in our county. We need it.

The Kiwanis Club wants every place of business in Clanton to display the United States flag on flag days. An objective that is worth our attention. We need more education in the use and purpose of our flag.

Watch the boy scouts of Clanton. They are coming fine. It is indeed a reassuring sign to see our coming citizens fill their young lives with the good things that they get through the Scout organization.

Clanton Baptist Sunday School sent $112 to the Baptist Orphans Home at Troy for a Christmas offering. Only about half what was sent last year, but very good for the present times.

United States birth rate for 1929 was the lowest since 1915. Maybe the stork is taking up bridge or miniature.—Dallas News.

MORAL ECHOES

By D. W. Haskew

One of the most familiar sounds in our city is the ringing of that bell at the crossing of the L. & N. track. When the moving train comes near enough to that crossing for it to produce danger to traffic, the red disk swings to and fro, and the bell warns of danger. Do we pay attention to that warning? I say we do. We must heed that warning or die. The pastors in your little city are holding up the flag of warning, and they are crying to you of approaching danger, but are you listening to them? You had better listen—there is danger ahead.

And it came to pass in Chilton County that a certain father got up Sunday morning and strolled off to his business. The wife of that father and husband arose also and went to the kitchen. The children of that home arose to romp and play about the house and yard. Not one out of that home went to Sunday School or church on God's day. In the curse of time one of the children was taken desperately ill. Both parents prayed to God to spare their child. God may not have said it, but it seems to me that I can hear Him saying: "Why beseech me for the life of the child? You are not setting a good example before that little one. Why should I leave it with parents who will not take it and train it in my house?"

A certain traveler strolled along the side walk and as he passed a certain door he looked in and saw more men standing around than he had seen in a church in many a day. He heard much rolling and quite a bit of noise of all kinds. This stranger inquired—"What is the business conducted on the inside?" He was told that it was a place where men and women "Rolled their money away." This citizen said, "when men go into a grocery store and spend their money, they come out with food for the table. When they go into a dry goods store and buy, they come out with something to wear, but when they go into that place and spend their money, they come out empty handed." We are crying hard times and yet we are wasting more than any race of people on earth. Everywhere we see young and old—"Rolling their money away." Better keep it—the time is coming when it is going to be needed.

Sometimes we think that we are growing to be an absent-minded race. I heard of a minister not long since who went to the bucket of water for a drink. This preacher had the habit of chewing tobacco, and he thought to rinse his mouth with the water before satisfying his thirst. Guess the man of God was thinking about his sermon, for here is what he did: he threw the dipper into the back yard and turned and spit into the bucket. If he had kept his mind with him he would have done the opposite. I heard of a mother who saw an old hen on the back porch while she held her baby in her arms. She was so thoughtless as to imagine that her baby was a stick of wood and she threw that baby at the hen with all her might. Such absentmindedness was bad for the bucket of water and the baby. It pays to keep your head with you.

Folks, listen! Liberty is not a passion to do as you please, but a privilege to do as God wants you to do.

You are free when God has made you free.

WEST CHILTON

Happy New Year to the Banner and all its readers.

The holidays were unusually quiet here. This was one Christmas when no one was expecting anything but a monotonous time, yet after all the Christmas spirit manifest itself regardless of predictions to the contrary.

Marion Cofer's brothers of Siluria paid him a flying holiday visit Christmas.

Manly Atchison and family of Clanton were holiday visitors to the home folks here.

Mr. Pat Lowery and wife of Providence visited Mr. Hubbard's family Christmas.

Mrs. Ella Pate and daughter arrived here a few days ago from Mississippi.

The sad information has reached us of the death of our old friend, Mr. Tom J. Jackson of Georgia. We regret to learn of his passing, and extend our sympathy to his bereaved loved ones.

We learn that Mrs. Martin Johnson was buried at Mars Hill Thursday.

Mr. W. G. Culp and wife were in this section last week. Their many friends were glad to see them.

Every one is talking depression and hard times, yet all the talk does not change the situation either way. We are in it, and had just as well meet it bravely. It means self denial all along the line. We have been living too fast for our ability. That makes the situation painful.

Every body has gone to work promptly after the holidays. That is a good sign.

Mr. John Rhodes has moved to the E. Z. Nix farm.

Mr. Hughes has moved to the N. B. Posey place. Mr. Posey has gone to Siluria.

Ermon has moved to the I. L. Waldrop form north of Randolph.

Newman Crumpton now occupies the John Merchant place.

D. H. Hodgens and son, of Thorsby were visitors at T. J. Hubbard's last week.

Mrs. John Lowery and Mrs. Pat Lowery of Providence visited Mrs. Hubbard just before the holidays.

Mrs. Ora Littlejohn of Lawley attended her sister's burial on the 1st at Mars Hill.

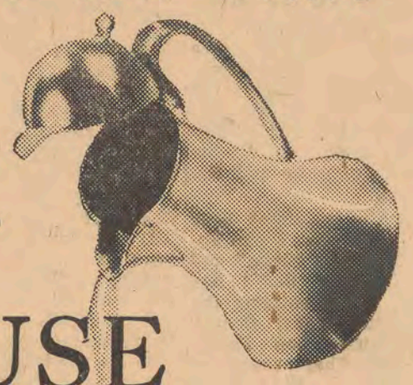
Mrs. W. E. (Jake) Smith is reported very low with paralysis.

Mr. Seymore and Miss Morris of Birmingham made a short visit to Mrs. Hubbard's at Christmas.

Mrs. Lizzie Crumpton spent some days at Jemison visiting at John Merchant's just before the holidays.

Mr. Luke McCary and wife of Randolph were in West Chilton one day during Christmas.

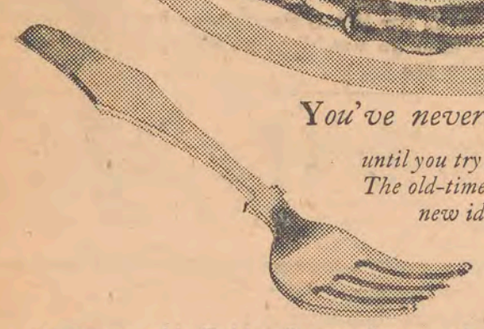
There is much talk of reducing cotton acreage. But who will do that? Will it bother the little farmer who is depending on the banks? How about the big farmer that produces hundreds of bales to the farm? Will he cut the acreage? How about the cotton growers not dependent on banks? Will he reduce his acreage?



William Robinson and wife were visitors to Birmingham during the holidays.

For the new year let us all help each other. Officials, farmers, merchants, preaching, editors, carpenters, attorneys, blacksmiths, teachers, bankers, employers, employees; all cooperate and things will go right. It is not impossible.

Mr. Harrel and wife of Marvel visited at William Robinson's Christmas.



Last, but not least, we congratulate "The Man on the Corner" in obtaining the chitlings.

"The true old-time
SUGAR HOUSE FLAVOR
in this Golden Syrup"

Bill Heer

STALEY'S MASTER BLENDER

You've never tasted PANCAKES before...

until you try them with this clear golden syrup. The old-time "sugar-house" flavor gives you a new idea of what pancakes can be!

"TASTE this Golden Syrup of ours and you'll know what I mean by 'real old-time sugar-house flavor'! It's a blend we used to make down South nearly fifty years ago when we cooked our syrups in open kettles and syrup blending became an art.

"Syrup as fine as this is rare nowadays. There's more to it than selecting your ingredients carefully. There's the knack of blending at just the right time and just the right temperature to bring out its mellow smoothness and pure golden color.

"Nobody learns to make syrups in a few months or a few years. I've spent almost a life-time in perfecting this Golden Syrup of ours. It's as fine as a syrup can be.

Ask your grocer for Staley's Golden Syrup and serve it with pancakes, waffles, muffins, hot breads of all kinds. You can make delicious cakes, cookies and ginger bread with Staley's Syrup. It's surprisingly inexpensive, too.

LOW COST PRODUCTION IS BIG NEED OF FARMER

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 6.—As a sure way to increase their net returns, Alabama farmers are now being advised by their county agents to cut the cost of production to the lowest point, not sacrificing efficiency and economy. Low cost production was the main object of the State meeting of county agents at Auburn, December 29-30, called by prof. L. N. Duncan, director of the Extension Service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Two economists came from Washington to present the latest official information concerning the agricultural situation. One represented the United States Department of Agriculture and the other the Federal Farm Board. A study of their data leads to the conclusion that Alabama farmers should stress four factors this year. One is cheap production; another is fewer acres in cotton; the third is ample food and feed for the farm; and the other is production of one or more cash crops in addition to cotton.

These economists gave little encouragement concerning immediate recovery of prices of farm products, which means that production cost must be reduced to the lowest point to obtain satisfactorily results in the year 1931. The same will be needed every year, because it is the application of efficiency and economy to the production of farm products.

County agents are advising farmers on how to reduce costs as well as urging them to make the reduction. Meetings are being held, articles written for newspapers, conferences conducted, and other things done to impress the paramount importance of low cost production.

FARM BUREAU HAS HAD BIG CO-OP BUSINESS

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 6.—During the year 1930, the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and its auxiliary organizations in Montgomery did a cooperative business of $17,000,000, president Edward A. O'Neil, told a group of agricultural workers at a meeting in Auburn late in December. This included buying and selling, he said. Cotton sold was the biggest single item of business, approximately 180,000 bales being pooled by Alabama growers in 1930 for cooperative marketing.

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

The Crimson Tide, with its dashing whitecaps, completely washed Washington State back before an onslaught of tiders led by "Donk" Campbell to the tune of 24-0. It is well it was the Rose Bowl or it would never have held that Crimson Tide that drowned the Cougars of W. S. C. As Amos and Andy said "the fust snow ever in California." Alabama snowed under Washington State's "Cow Jars."

The individual stars for Alabama were Campbell, Cain, Suther, McRight, Sington, and 31 other players of Wade's machine. Wade's swan song was well sung by his greatest team in 8 years. And the coach of this great team is the greatest coach in America.

Today the University of Alabama resumes its classes after a pleasant holiday season, climaxed by Alabama's great victory in the Rose Bowl. From now until January 14, when the mid-term examinations are held it will be study. Midnight oil burning many nights.

The Crimson Tide, champions of the world, were received by 4,000 Alabama students with wild acclaim, and what a reception. Words cannot describe the praise for Dade and his team.

C. C. H. S. Wins First Basketball Game From Isabella

(By John P. Lawrence)

Last Thursday afternoon our boys defeated the Isabella High School boys on our local court for a game of basketball. In the first half of the game the Isabella boys out-witted us a little, making the score for Isabella 9 and C. C. H. S. 4. At the second half our boys came back with the spirit to hold up for the name "Tigers." Every boy played his best. The final score was Clanton 24, and Isabella 14. Due to the fact that the team had not selected a captain, Paul Cox filled the position during the game.

Senior III English Class Does Interesting Work

(By Homer Carroll)

The Senior English class, under direction of Miss Wells, made a careful study of the origin and development of ballads. After having completed the study, the entire class was called upon to write an original ballad. The following was selected as the best:

"The Little Log Schoolhouse"
(By Homer Carroll)

In a little log schoolhouse where I once was a scholar,
A tragical drama occured;
'Twas composed of three boys, Joe Green, Bill McNoyes,
And I, least important, was the third.

Joe Green was a lad who had ever been known,
To be timid and awkard in class;
He never could spell, nor read very well,
That's why he never could pass.

Now the schoolroom floor near the teacher's desk,
Was not completed just then;
But a large open space, just the right sort of place,
Was left for the cold to come in.

When the teacher had called for the pupils to spell,
And placed them all in a row;
Joe's number was four, near the hole in the floor,
He stood all primed up to go.

When at last came his turn and the word was pronounced,
He awkwardly stepped back a pace;
Then again came a word, and at last came a third,
He was nearing the floor's open space.

Now Bill was a boy who was ever in fun,
From laughter he could never refrain;
If someone should pull a joke in school,
He would laugh until he suffered with pain.

As he looked at Joe Green he could clearly discern,
That a scene was about to occur;
Then a smile and a grin wrought his face up again,
And his countenance began to stir.

I saw that the grin that had spread o'er his face,
Was about to burst to a roar;
And he gigled in glee, as he whispered to me,
"What if Joe should fall through the floor?"

The hole in the floor was now only a step,
From where Joe stood with a frown,
He tried to begin and failed once again,
And fell through the floor to the ground.

Bill clasped his hands to his sides as a fit
Of laughter seized him once more;
He laughed and he cried, while I earnestly tried,
To drag him out at the door.

Day after day and night after night,
I watched at the side of the lad;
For not long after he was through with his laughter,
I saw his condition was bad.

And now ever since he laughed once too hard,
He has walked and laughed never more;
Of the two boys, you see, I'd much rather be,
The one who fell through the floor.

It might be of interest to some to know that the author of the above little bit of originality and playful attempts with the muses is Homer Carroll, a young married minister in our school this year, who is making an enviable record in his school work, and otherwise a splendid asset to the school and student body. He enters Howard College next summer where he will pursue work further along his chosen line. We wish him well in every activity of life.

FARM MEETING NEXT TUESDAY

Judge Reynolds Insists That All Citizens Attend Meeting

Editor Union-Banner:

I hope the people of this county will come to the meeting of January 20th. I hope every banker, every merchant, and every landlord that has land to rent will come to this meeting or have someone to represent them. I am afraid the people of our county do not fully realize the condition of many people in our county. I am afraid that parties that have farms to rent have not thought over the matter seriously. I hear expressions from many people who have land to rent, that they cannot furnish any renters this year. I think this is a sad mistake. This is the best and safest year for landlords to furnish renters that they have had in the last ten years.

We all know that everybody has been too extravagant especially renters. This will not be the case this year. The landlord needs not put more in a crop now than he can get out. Landowners, let me ask you one question. Do you expect the banks of Chilton County to take the people's money and loan it to renters to make a crop on your land that you will net help yourself? Surely you do not expect this. I would not put my money in a bank that would do this kind of business. If we will all do our duty Chilton County can take care of all the people in the county and we will make the cheapest and the most profitable crop we have made in ten years.

W. A. Reynolds and myself were in business at Jemison during a crash like this and we advanced everybody in our community that needed help to make a crop, and we made the closest collections that fall that we had ever made. This county can do the same thing this year if they will try.

One trouble we have now is the people that have money and means are leading this distress procession. Everybody that has surplus money ought to put it in the banks in our county. I feel like every bank in our county is safe and they are going to do their part this year in helping the people make a crop. Now let's do our part. Let's quit sending our money away from home to buy goods. Let's spend every dollar we have to spend with the people of our county. Burn every catalog you have in your house and let's keep our money at home.

Your Commissioners Court is doing all it can to help this situation. They have stopped the road machines. They are spending the County's money with the people here in the county. They have relieved every road subject from paying a road tax or working on the public roads for 1931, but the situation needs your help. The bankers, merchants, and your Commissioners Court cannot do it all. Come to this meeting on January 20th at 10 o'clock a. m., and let's work out a plan that will enable the people to cultivate every acre of cultivatable land in Chilton County in 1931. Let's raise something to eat and let's raise abundance of truck to sell. Quit crying over-production while we have thousands of bushels of oats shipped into our county and thousands of pounds of chicken feed. Let's supply the demand of our own folks before we cry over-production.

I wish every person in the county would read Mr. Wyatt's editorial in last week's Banner. Let's dismiss from our minds fine clothes, silk stockings, gas and oil, and let's give our full attention to making something for our people to live on, then have a little cotton for a surplus. The United States government is doing all it can to help the people by loaning money, but the people of this county needs a job and we will never have prosperity until the common people are given work. If we will all do our duty, prosperity will be restored to us this fall.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

PLANT MORE HAY AND LESS COTTON THIS YEAR—AUBURN

Auburn, Aa., Jan. 12.—With three words county agents and extension workers of the Aabama Poytechnic Institute at Auburn are answering questions from farmers as to the best way to reduce their cotton acreage in 1931. These words are: "Make more Hay!"

The answer is based upon the fact that Aabama farmers normaly produce one-third of the hay requirements of the State. Last year approximately 600,000 acres grew hay in the State. On this basis the 1931 acreage in hay should be thrice 600,000 to produce the hay needs of the State. If this is done, 1,200,000 more acres will produce hay and that is 30 per cent of the 3,801,000 acres which grew cotton in 1930.

Coun ty agents are not mindful of the fact that hay produced on a proper basis requires machinery for planting harvesting, and storing. They are advising farmers to consider this in advance. Farmers who do not have adequate hay machinery may co-operate with their neighbors in buying it. Frequently one implement will be sufficient for many farmers. If bought and operated in this way the cost per farmer is much lower, they explain.

The best summer hay crops for Alabama are sopbeans, cowpeas and sudan grass.

In addition to adding the acreage in hay more acres should be planted in corn and other feed crops. Unless this is done Alabama farmers will have to buy feed with low price cotton.

Some Advice For The Man Who does Not need Advice

(EDITORIAL)

There is no use in telling the man who is down and out what ought to be done at this time. Any man whose family is up against the rocks and hungry will work to make bread if he is given the chance.

Therefore, the proper thing right now, it seems to us, is to get the ear of the man who is not in distress, and who is able to help the needy, if he will only show a willingness to do it.

The solution of our economic problem in Chilton County lies in the hands of the men who are not in a tight. They must come to the rescue of the less fortunate.

The man who can do business—who can carry on his business operations—and give employment to those who need it, is the man who must be talked to right now. He is the man who must become interested. The fellow who is hungry is already interested and willing to do his part.

The man who owns a farm and has the money with which to operate that farm should be making plans to cultivate every acre of his available land, instead of planning to let it lie idle.

The man who is able to keep his business running and keep his farm producing something to eat, and fails to do it this year, is only adding more to the hard times that are causing many people to go hungry.

Chilton County can overcome its present situation if the men who own farms and are able to keep those farms running will put folks to work on the farms and give them a chance to eat and work.

There are plenty of people who will be glad to work from now until next fall just for what their families need to eat during the summer, and for the chance to make something to carry them through next winter. The man who is able to furnish such people work and food on his farm is doing a very foolish thing if he closes down now and says he will not have his land cultivated while times are so hard.

You may think you can not make any profit out of operating your farm under present conditions. If you do, you are wrong about that. If you will hook up with the safe farming program that is being sponsored by our county agent, you can conduct a safe and profitable operation of your farm in 1931. And you will be giving to some man who needs it a chance to keep on eating and feeding his family.

The man who can is the man who must get into action now to save the day for the man who can't.

We urge the business men, farmers, land owners, bankers, and everybody to take note of the meeting that is being planned for Tuesday, January 20, to deal with this question.

Our county agent, C. E. Stapp, through the Alabama Extension Service at Auburn, is working on a plan of safe farming for the people of Chilton County in 1931. The citizens of our county who can do so must join in with him and help him put it over.

Where Is Your Cash Coming From in 1931?

"Where is my cash coming from in 1931?" is a question every Chilton County farmer is asking himself at this time, due to the present low prices of farm products.

"I must pay my taxes, I must keep my children in school, I must clothe my family; my present farming system does not give me sufficient cash returns to enable me to do these and meet my other cash obligations."

These are statements coming from farmers, large and small, from all sections of Chilton County.

For this reason, I have arranged for us to have expert assistance in discussing and analyzing these important questions, and offer the best solutions and recommendations that have grown out of a thorough and careful study by the best brains of the country.

Come to the meeting at the Courthouse, Friday, January 20th, 1931, at 10 a. m., and bring your neighbors.—C. E. STAPP, County Agent.

Now Time To Pay Poll Tax

The time is fast flying in which we may pay our Poll Tax and be a legal voter during the year 1931. I am in hopes that all the people in the County who are due a Poll Tax will attend to this at once and I here beg leave to insist that we do this thing and do it now. It is true this is what we usually call an off year and in which there will probably be no elections, while at the same time we do not know there may be several important elections, as you remember the State Legislature is in session this year and we may be called upon by the Legislature during the year to vote on some very important measures; some that probably we would not miss voting on for several years Poll Tax. Then too, it will just take $1.50 to keep you qualified now and it will take $3.00 to qualify you next year. The money goes to a good cause, so why not strain a point now, if needs be, and pay this time?

There are some young people in the County who became 21 years old before October the 1st, 1930, and who have never registered. These people should pay their Poll Tax just the same as though they were registered, for it will have to be paid before they can vote, and it being paid now will enable them to vote when they do register. They may be permitted to register after it is too late to pay their Poll Tax.

Again let me urge every one who is due a Poll Tax to be sure and pay same before the time expires, which is February the 1st, as I understand the law.—J. Z. MIMS, Secretary Republican Executive Committee Chilton Co.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PAY YOUR POLL TAX

Voters of Chilton County, who are subject to pay poll tax in order to keep up their franchise, are reminded now that the time for payment of this tax will come to a close on the first day of February.

While this year will not be election year, the fact yet remains that poll taxes shoul be paid. One good reason why they should pay, is that the money from such taxes goes entirely to the support of the public schools. Every citizen ought to be glad to pay poll tax for that reason alone, if for no other.

Then again, poll taxes should be kept paid up each year, because it is a comulative proposition. If it is not paid in any year, that year's poll tax will have to be paid sometime before the person can become a qualified voter again. It is therefore, much easier to pay poll taxes each year as they come due, and keep up with it than to miss one or two years and have to pay it all in one lump.

Those who are able to pay poll taxes should not neglect it. And you are urged to remember that February the first is the last day on which you can pay.

The Legislature of Alabama is in session this year, and we may reasonably expect that some measure of importance to the State will come out of that session, and demand the vote of the people of the State during this year. So after all, even if this is not election year, there is a possibility that voters will be called upon to vote on something of importance to our State.

AIRPLANE WILL BE HERE THE REST OF THIS WEEK

Lieutenant McCune, pilot of the airplane which has been stationed at Dudley Collins Farm near Clanton for the past few days, stated Tuesday that he will remain here the balance of this week through next Sunday. The decision to continue operating here for the balance of this week was caused by the fact that the weather was so bad last week end and Suniay that many people who planned to ride were prevented from coming out to the field.

Many persons have availed themselves of this opportunity to ride, and everybody acclaims it is the greatset pleasure of their lives to view Clanton from the air.

Lieutenant McCune has demonstated that he is a flier of full competence and experience. From the way is looks to us, the pilot and the ship are all that could be asked for by one wanting to take an adventure into the air. If you can muster up the necessary nerve, along with the small sum of 75 cents, Lieutenant McCune is ready to do business with you.

The seat of operations is at Dudley Collins farm on the Lay Dam Road a little more than a mile from Clanton.

MIMS BRINGS UP DISCUSSION AGAIN

Lengthy Discussion of Matter Prior To General Election Last Fall

Editor Union-Banner:

May I, through the columns of your paper, speak to the citizens of this county and especially the Republicans relative to some letters that appeared in your paper in the issue of October the 23rd, 1930?

It may appear rather late to you and some others, but I have several legitimate reasons for being late.

First, I would say I presumed the people of the county are intelligent enough to read yours and the Judge's letters and understand your purpose and intentions and which fact I still presume.

Then, I would say at the time said letters were published I was much concerned about the success and outcome of our party in the general election, which at that time was almost on, and that the very worst you and the Judge could say about me I considered would be nothing when compared with the great harm that I think would have come to our people and to our party had I ceased to fight and direct the fight at that crucial moment, and for me to have turned loose then and have gone to fighting for myself would hardly have been short of treason to the Republican candidates and the great host of honest Republicans in this county who were looking for us to put the fight over.

Then, too, it would probably have been an easy matter at that time to have gotten into a paper controversy which I do not desire and will suffer myself rather than enter into such, and since the election and the shouting has been over, I have been busily engaged in court. But let that all be as it may, upon request of some of my friends and on my desire to be understood and because of my abhorrence for the practice of being misrepresented and misquoted, I ask you for this space and privilege.

Now my fellow citizens, the permission of the editor first having been obtained, I wish to state among other things that I have not sought the hurt of any man. That my purpose and intentions have been honest and sincere. That I do not wish, neither have I sought the downfall of any man, and any insinuations to that effect in the above mentioned letters or otherwise, are ungrounded.

The statements or insinuations that I whispered, hinted, or intimated or sent any word or anything of the kind relative to the squabble we got into about the printing of the ballots to any body are absolutely false and unfounded and is caused, it appears to me, because of ignorance, misinformation or a desire to injure.

I did not make the statement to Judge Reynolds that I had never filed the second declaration under Section 588 or any other section after I had been nominated in the primary, neither have I made it to any one in his presence or hearing, and I am persuaded to believe that no one has heard me make that statement, for it is not my expression. It is not my habit of speech to use the word declaration in that sense.

I did not remember what I had filed after the primary and in fact I did not recall ever filing anything, and I told the Judge that, whereupon I asked him for the file of the previous election that we might see just what we had been doing, and the file seemingly was out of place at that time, as will be explained further on in this article, and may I say here, after failing to get to see the file, I did the next best thing I knew to do, and that was to go to the manager of the last campaign, Mr. Mack Wyatt, and there sought information as to just what had been the practice and Mack told me that I had never refiled my announcement with him and that he did not remember filing anything with the Probate Judge, as chairman of the campaign committee, and so I told Mack then that I did not remember filing anything with the Judge after the primary and all the statements that I made about the filing of papers I tried to qualify them by the fact that I was speaking from memory only and if I made the statement without qualifying it I did not intend to do so, for I could not remember what we had filed, if anything.

Now before I enter into details further I wish to state to the people that all that I have or did do and say was done and said because I thought it was time to do and say something and that it was to the best interest of our party and that is all that I had in view, and if it was to

Compiled by C. E. Stapp. County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

FARM BUREAU DOES $17,000,000 BUSINESS

A start in "big business" was made by farmers of Alabama in 1930, as they transacted a co-operative business of buying and selling totaling $17,000,000.

"They did this at the remarkably low overhead cost of 1.3 per cent," said President Edward A. O'Neal of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, through which the business was cleared.

It is reasonable to expect that this business will grow in 1931," he declared. "Hard times should increase instead of decrease the decided trend toward co-operation, because financial difficulties present convincing evidence of thinking farmers that they must transact their business in an orderly, efficient manner, and at low cost."

To date, farmers have pooled 176,575 bales of cotton, the largest amount ever pooled in Alabama, and the figure should pass the 200,000 before the season ends.

Other business transacted included the marketing of 230,000 pounds of wool, 240,000 pounds of pecans, $557,919.30 worth of livestock, and 3,762 cases of eggs, and the buying co-operatively of large quantities of feeds, fertilizers, seeds and other supplies.

Development of stronger county farm bureaus and a large increase in the membership are the main goals of the Farm Bureau for 1931.

FARMERS WILL BID FOR MUSCLE SHOALS

The ten-year old problem of Muscle Shoals may in the end be solved by the farmers of America, according to President Edward A. O'Neal of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation.

This was mad possible by the passing of a resolution at the Boston convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation, authorizing the board of directors of that organization to set up a committee truly representative of agriculture authorized to develop and organize a corporation the purpose of which would be the leasing and operating of Muscle Shoals on a co-operative basis so as to preserve the property in times of peace for agriculture, and in times of war for the United States.

Mr. O'Neal was made chairman of the committee and other members are: Chas. E. Hearst, president of Iowa Farm Bureau, George M. Putnam, president of New Hampshire Farm Bureau.

"Our purpose is to get the most fertilizer for agriculture," said Mr. O'Neal.

If Congress passes a bill on Muscle Shoals, the committee expects to organize and develop a corporation to make a bid under the bill as passed. If no bill is passed, the farmers, through their organization, will sponsor a bill which will enable the proposed corporation to make a bid as provided for in the resolutions.

Practically every county in Alabama is now engaged in mormulating plans for safe and profitable farming in 1931. Bankers, farmers and business men are co-operating with the county agents in working out recommendations which all will promote during the year.

POULTRY

EGG AND POULTRY SALES IN PROGRESS IN THIS STATE

Plans are being made by state and county farm bureaus of Alabama to market co-operatively 5,000 to 6,000 cases of eggs and 100 carloads of chickens.

The poultry will be shipped direct to New York markets. Already cars have been loaded in Baldwin, Escambia, Clark, Marengo and Wilcox counties. Loadings will continue until carlot poultry has moved from 55 counties.

The eggs will be assembled and placed in cold storage in Birmingham. This is being done, said J. B. Sylvest, marketing specialist, to hold the eggs for better prices and to remove surplus from local markets.

Next fall, when prices, in the judment of farm bureau managers, are at their highest point, the eggs will be sold.

When the eggs are pooled, farmers will be advanced 75 per cent of market value at the time the eggs arrive at storage points.

This year the eggs will be handled on a monthly pool basis, eggs arriving each month being handled and sold separately from those being delivered in other months.

County farm bureaus are prepared to present details, including shipping instructions, to farmers interested in the pool. County agents will advise farmers on the sales.

Last season Alabama farmers stored 4,000 cases of eggs and received from 3 cents to 7 cents per dozen profit due to storing instead of selling at the time the eggs were laid.

BUSINESS IN ALABAMA IS DEPENDENT ON FARMERS

One of the best ways for business to prosper in Alabama is for agriculture to be placed on a paying basis, says F. W Gist, state and federal statistican, who reports that agriculture furnishes to Alabama about 48 per cent of the wealth produced annually and upon which business depends very largely for its existence in most towns and cities in the State.

Mr. Gist gave figures showing that in Alabama in 1925 miners produced 360,000,000 in new wealth, the manufacturer $227,000,000 and the farmer $268,000,000, the latter being 48 per cent of the total. He also showed that in the United States in 1925, there was produced, by the 3 groups named about 45 and a half billion dollars of new wealth. Of this the miner gave us 5 and a half, the manufacturer 26 and a half, and the farmer 13 and a half, the latter constituting 28.5 per cent of the total.

Mr. Gist declares that only three groups of workers produce new wealth and of these three groups disappeared from the face of the earth, "we would follow mighty soon." These three groups are the miner, the manufacturer, and the farmer. "All the rest of us are parasites, living on and absorbing the wealth that there three groups produce," he said.

GARDEN WILL AID IN RELIEVING DISTRESS

Emphasizing the importance of home gardens in relieving the suffering in the drouth stricken areas of Alabama, Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture and industries and master farmer, said that "the early garden may be pushed to a great start by using window boxes if the hotbed cannot be prepared in time or is unavailable for any reason. A half dozen cigar boxes will start enough plants of cabbage, lettuce, peppers or tomatoes for the first plantings in the average garden."

"It is not so important as to how the start is made but it is most important to make the start for an early garden this year, advises commissioner Storrs. "The hame garden will go a long way in relieving present economic distress."

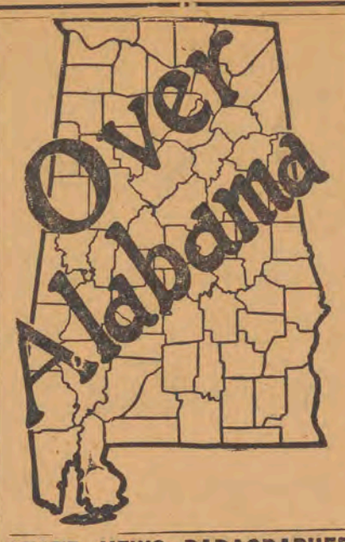
1931 BEE OUTLOOK IS ENCOURAGING

Despite the fact that indications point to the cheaper prices in bees and honey, the outook for the bee business during 1931, "is somewhat encouraging" says Thomas Atchison apiary inspector of the Departement of Agricuture and Industries, in his annual bee business outlook issued Thursday.

Urging commercial beekeepers not to sell their bees Mr Atchison said. You will lose your bee and honey crop and no doubt come out in debt, so why not get a living price for your bees and possibly a honey crop on the side? Some few years ago, when the buyers of package bees got ready to purchase his bees he would at once book his order; now he will writ every commercial beekeeper for cheaper prices and then if he doesn't get his prices, he will write the man from whom he has been buying every year, and tell him that he can buy from his neighbors at a very low price. Then the beekeepers will begin to think if he doesn't meet that price he will lose a customer. After all, the purcheser has made his owon price.

"The commercial beekeepers need to get better organized and cooperate in a more business-like way. We hope to bring these problems togethergether at the Southern States Conference which will be at the Jefferson Davis Hotel, February 18 and 19. I think that every shipper of bees should be on hand. I am planning to start out on my inspection work about February 1 to issue health certificates in order to avoid delay of shipments."

FARMERS WILL PROFIT GROWING OWN SEEDS



Money sent away each year to purchase farm seeds could be used profitably in farm operations at home, but aside from this, there are two other reasons why every land owner should grow and save his own seed. First, they can be grown at little expense and second, the grower can tell whether they are free of disease," says B. P. Livingston, in charge of seed testing work of the Department of Agriculture and Industries, Montgomery.

The purchaser of large quantities of both major and minor crop seeds by growers each year, is tremendous. This outlay of money is not in keeping with the aims of our live-at-home program. Also there are but few crops grown in the state where high quality of product cannot be maintained by home production of seeds. Conditions are favorable in this state to improve crops by careful seed selection on the home farm.

Mr. Livingston declares that seed can be grown at home at little expense. The ripening and curing needs are not expensive. About the only attention necessary is to keep them in moderately dry storage and in tight containers.

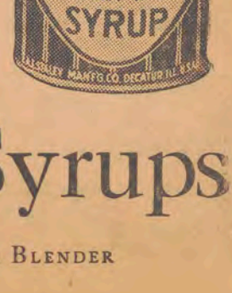
"You'll Discover Pancakes

for the first time with this Golden Syrup"

"Our Golden Blend has the true old-time 'sugar-house syrup' flavor. A lot of folks today don't know what that means—but down South, where I learned syrup making nearly fifty years ago, it meant a lot.

"We flavor our Golden Syrup with premium grade syrup from the first run of the best cane sugar refineries. But the real knack is blending at the right times and temperatures—to bring out all the mellow smoothness and flavor."



Staley's Golden Syrup is delightful with hot biscuits, pancakes, waffles and muffins. And it makes delicious cakes, cookies, and ginger bread. Write for our free recipe book.

Review of The Graves State Administration

With the close of the Graves administration, it is appropriate to briefly review some of its accomplishments, and the progress achieved during the past quadrennium. Governor Graves was elected in 1926 on a platform which pledged his best velopment of the human resources efforts to the conservation and deof Alabama; emphasis was placed on the necessity of providing for the educational advancement and physical health of the people, as the foundation for a prosperous state. The carrying out of these policies has resulted in unprecedented progress during the past four years in education, public health and child welfare work. Anotoher notable accomplishment of the administration now going out of office was the abolition of the convict lease system, and the reorganization of the convict system of the state which resulted therefrom; while during this four-year period roadbuilding has been carried on in Alabama on a bigger scale than ever before.

Education

The past four years has witnessed a great forward movement in education in Alabama, which probably should be rated as the outstanding accomplishment of the outgoing administration. It was during these four years that practical application was given to the theory of equalization of educational opportunity—the theory which holds that a child born in one of the poorer agricultural sections of the state has as much right to an education at public expenses as one living in the centers where the wealth of the state is largely concentrated. Prior to 1927, most of the school money which the counties received from the state was apportioned on a per capita basis—so much for each child of school age. This state fund was entirely inadequate to provide a reasonable school term; and while the richer counties were able to supplement it from local taxation, the poorer counties, with low values of taxable property, were unable to do so. The inequality existing between different sections of the state was further promoted by the matter of radical distribution. Under the per capita system of distributing school funds, no distinction was made, or could be made, on account of race; a county received from the state just as much money for a colored child within its borders as for a white child. As a result, counties where the bulk of the population was colored were able to provide amply for the education of their compariti vely few white children; while other counties with a dense white population could not provide for them anywhere near an adequate school sytem.

Governor Graves and the legislature of 1927 set out to correct this situation, not by taking away anything from the more fortunate counties, which on the contrary have shared in the general educational prograss, but by giving especial aid to the poorer counties unable to help themselves. One of many new educational appropriations voted in 1927 was an equalization fund of $900,000 per annum, to be used exclusively for providing more nearly equal school terms over the state. The average school term for the entire state has been increased thirteen days during the past 4 years; while many schools which were in session only four or five months in 1926 were in session seven and eight months last year.

During the past year there were 32,583 more children enrolled in school than enrolled in 1926. The actual gain must be greater than that number, since the present reports are acknowledged to be more accurate than those in 1926.

Children are attending school much more regularly now than they did four years ago. This is shown by the fact that there were 57,032 more pupils attending school daily last year than in 1926. This is an increase of nearly 14 per cent during the past four years.

When the aggregate days attended are considered we observe the greatest gain made in the amount of schooling which has been received by the boys and girls of the state. Last year the aggregate days attended was 13,787,753 greater than in 1926. This gain is equivalent to a term of 135 days for 102,132 children. Expressed in another way it is equivalent to the attendance of 17,022 children during every day of a 135 day term for six years.

Teachers are now receiving a higher average salary than they did in 1926. The gain during the past four years is $106 and has been due largely to the increased length of term.

New textbook adoptions were made during the quadrennium, reducing the number of books required and resulting in a saving of millions of dollars to the parents of school children.

Educational progress has not been confined to the common schools; on the contrary, the entire educational system from top to bottom has been tremendously strengthened and improved; and the state colleges and normal schools have entered upon a new era of development as a result of the greatly increased appropriations which they received for new buildings and for operating expenses.

The extent to which educational appropriations have been increased during the past four years is graphically illustrated by the following figures showing comparison of amounts made available for public education in Alabama during their respective quadrenniums by the 1929, 1923, and 1927 legislatures:

Year 1929, appropriated $9,491,-440; amount of increase, $413,158;

Year 1919, appropriated $9,491,-440; 1923, appropriated $9,904,598; amount of increase, $413,158; percentage of increase, 4.35; 1927, appropriated $32,180,758; amount of increase, $22,276,160; percentage of increase 224.91.

The following figures show total number of days attended by all the pupils enrolled in the public elementary and high schools of Alabama during six consecutive years:

Year 1925, attended 57,686,491; 1926, attended, 57,254,174; amount of decrease 432,317; percentage of decrease, .75; 1927, attended 61,-814,896; amount of increase 4,560,-722; percentage of increase, 7.97; 1927-1928, days attended, 68,828,-558; amount of increase 7,013,662; percentage of increase, 11.35; 1928-1929, days attended 68,593,254; amount of decrease 235,304; percentage of decrease, .44; 1929-1930, days attended, 71,041,927; amount of increase, 2,448,673; percentage of increase, 3.57.

Schools for Deaf and Blind

A notable accomplishment of the outgoing administration was the manner in which it has provided for the state schools for the deaf and the blind, located at Talladega. At the beginning of the administration, appropriations totaling $300.000 were provided for construction and repairing of buildings and equipment at these institutions, which have as a result functioned on a scale and with an effectiveness far ahead of anything in previous years.

Public Health

Alabama's progress in public health work may be summed up in the fact that the state today stands at the top of the list of states in his field—a position attained during the past four years. Alabama has fifty-four counties with full-time county health units, engaged in prosecuting all phases of public health activities. The percentage of population enjoying the benefits of full-time county health service is 88.97 per cent of the total population of the state—a ratio not equaled by any other state. The number of counties possessing county health units January 1, 1927, was thirty; twenty-four more have been organized during the Graves administration, leaving only thirteen unorganized. Progress in public health work during the past four years was made possible by the 1927 legislature; the appropriation for the central administration of the state health department was increased from $150,000 in 1926 to $539,383 for 1930; while the appropriation for county work, which is matched by the counties, was increased from $55,000 to $130,-000.

Figures for 1929 established several new records of low death rates. Typhoid fever caused only 196 deaths for 1929 against 382 for 1929, or a decrease in the death rate from 15.1 for 1926 to 7.5 for 1929. There were no deaths from smallpox in 1929. It is the first year in 13 years that one or more deaths from smallpox was not reported. The death rate from tuberculosis was 85.7 per 100,0000 population and was the lowest record since Alabama has had susceptible registration.

With the manufature of diphtheria toxoid for immunization against diphtheria by the state laboratory begun in 1929, it became possible for counties to carry out immunization campaigns against diphtheria similar to those carred out aganst typhoid fever. There was not time to secure results from immunization in 1929, but the figures for both cases and deaths would indicate a considerable decrease so far in 1930. In the next few years there should be a dechease in diphtheria similar to that secured in typhoid.

Child Welfare

The past quadrennium witnessed remarkable progress in child welfare work in Alabama, the outstanding feature being the practical completion of county child welfare organization. Four years ago, only fourteen Alabama counties were organized for child welfare work; fifty two county child welfare units have been established since, leaving only one county unorganized. During the past four years a stronger child labor enforcement division has been built up, a better institution program has been undertaken; and there has been manifest improvement in the service offered by the chidren's aid division in providing foster home care for children received. Alabama's progress in child welfare work has attrcated favorable comment from nationally known experts. The legislature of 1927 increased the appropriation to the child welfare department from $50,000 per annum to $100,000 for a two-year period, and $125,000 annually thereafter.

Confederate Pensions

Pensions to confederate veterans were doubled by the 1927 legislature, the increase being from $75 to $150 per quarter. Large increases were also provided in pension payments to widows of veterans. The increase in Confederate pensions hit the general fund of the state during the administration for the huge sum of $3,-730,056, this being the amount paid out in pensions over and above what was brought in by the one-mill soldiers tax. Much has been said about a deficit, but critics have failed to point out that the money has gone to relieve the necessities in extreme old age of the survivors of the armies of the Confederacy. Pension payments will bear less heavily on the treasury in the next four years, for there are now less than half as many Confederate veterans in Alabama as there were four years ago.

Agriculture and Industry

Agricultural laws were stengthened by the 1927 legislature and the State Department of Agriculture has functioned with increased effectivness. Important new legislation included provisions for the establishment of five agricultural experiment substations on various soil types of the state, with a view to determine crop adaptability of various soils.

The last legislature also created the Alabama Industrial Development Boad, to promote and advertise the industrial opportunities of the state. A large number of new industries have located in Alabama during the period.

Convicts and Law Enforcement

Abolition of the convict leasing system and inauguration of a successful system of working the convicts on the roads stands out as one of the major accomplishments of the Graves administration. Formerly, a large percentage of convicts were leased by the state to private business concerns, and worked in coal mines and lumber camps. This system was very profitable to the state but was denounced on humanitarian grounds, as a relic of barbarism. Instances of brutal mistreatment of convicts were brought to light, and besides it was contended that the principal of leasing out human beings for profit was all wrong. Public sentiment demanded abolition of the lease system, but there was hesitation on the part of those in power to face the loss to the state of the lease money and the task of finding other employment for convicts which would be turned back to the state with the lease business ended. Abolition of the lease system was an issue in Alabama for many years, and was repeatedly promised, decreed and deferred, until finnally the Graves administration took the responsibility and brought the discredited system to an end. As a result, the state found on its hands approximately 1,250 convicts removed from under the lease. Convict problems were augmented by the taking over by the state of county convicts, and by the great increase in prison population, which will be commented on below.

The problem was partly met by placing convicts on the roads. Eighteen road camps are operated, with a daily average of 1,480 convicts employed during the period June 1, 1929, to September 30, 1930. And, despite gloomy preductions to the contrary, this convict road work showed a net profit during the above period of $120,179.01.

Further employment for convicts was found through the expansion of the existing system, and the establishment of Moffett State prison near Atmore, built at the cost of $452,-544.09, which includes cost of land, improvements, buildings and railroads. This prison, with an investment cost per capita of prisoners below that of any other of the state's penal institutions, is a model establishment, where scientific farming is profitably carried on in a big way.

In spite of the loss of the lease money, there was a net profit on the operation of all state penal institutions during the quadrennium of $1,091,479.43. This net profit was arrived at after charging off all depreciation on buildings, equipment and machinery.

The administration of Governor Graves has been characterized by vigorous law enforcement; the governor has been prompt and active directing the suppression of lawlessness in all forms. He has appointed jury commissioners who believe in law enforcement, and has granted compariti vely few paroles. As a result of better law enforcement and curtailment of paroles, there has been a great increase in prison population. During 1926-27 the convict department had a daily average of 3,94 prisoners and 115 county convicts, total 3,209; for 1929-30 the figures were 4,370 state and 664 county convicts, total 5,034, an increase of 1,825 or more than 50 per cent.

Roadbuilding

The Graves administration has done practically as much roadbuilding as had been done by the state altogether prior to this administration; in fact, on the higher types of roads, the figures show that much more has been accomplished during the past four years than had been done during all preceding years. The following tabulation shows the length of road and bridge contracts awarded from 1916 up to January 17th, 1927.

Graded and drained, 370 miles; graded, dariend, and surfaced with sand-clay and topsoil, 629 miles; graded ,drained and surfaced with gravel and chert, 1,540 miles; graded, drained and surfaced with bituminous surface, 242 miles; graded, drained and surfaced with cement concrete, 113 miles; total 2,894 miles.

Bridges ever 20-foot clear span, 91.056 lineal feet.

The following tabulation shows the length of road and bridge contracts awarded from January 17, 1927 to January 1st. 1931

Graded and drained 650 miles; graded, drained and surfaced with sand clay or top soil 344 miles; graded, drained and surfaced with gravel or chert, 1,072 miles; graed drained and surfaced with bituminous surface 170 miles; graded, drained and surfaced with cement concrete 451 mile; total 2.687 miles.

Bridges over 20-foot clear span 102.960 lineal feet. Fifteen state owned bridges with approach fills 15 miles.

The above figures do not include approximately 100 miles of paved roads the construction of which will probably be arranged for before the close of the Graves admininstration.

Conclusion

In the closing months of the Graves administration, certain critics have pointed out that more money has been spent during this administration than during any that went before it. It is obvious that millions of dollars worth of new school buildings, increased teachers salaries, doubling Confederate pensions, better public health, etc., could not be attained on the same expense which prevailed before such progress was made. In other words, if the state during the past quadrennium has spent $22,000,000 more for the schools than was spent before—naturally this could not be done without spending $22,000,000 more, and of course this additional revenue had to be raised through taxation. It should be noted that Governor Graves went into office pledged to increase appropriations and also to increase taxation; he did not promise the impossible feat of increasing the one without the other. He did not promise that there would be no increase in property taxes, and that needed revenue would be obtained by "hitching the big mules" to the tax wagon, in other words by levying upon big business and corporate interests which it was claimed hitherto escaped paying a fair share of the tax burden. This promise has been carried out to the letter. There has been no increase in property taxes in the past suadrennium; such increase as has occurred in property taxes has been due solely to the natural rise in the value of the property and the tax rate has remained unchanged, and in some of the poorer agricultural counties there has been an actual decline in property valuations and consequently tax payments. New revenue needed for schools, public health, etc., was provided through nex tax levies on railroads, water power companies and other phases of big business, through an extension of tonnage and severance taxes on coal, iron and other minerals; and through a sales tax on cigars and cigarettes which has bhought into the taxpaying class thousands who hitherto enjoyed te benefits of government without contributing anything to its support. Four years of progress in public activities have been supported without increasing the taxes of the farmer or home owner, and the distribution of taxes has been made more nearly equalized than ever before in the history of the state.

Miss Glennie Mahan of Montgomery has undergone an operation at the Memorial Hospital in Montgomery, and is doing fine. We hope that she will soon be up again.

do over I would do and say the same things again, for that was all I knew to do or say; and further that my purpose has been all the time to serve my people and party, and if I have appeared to you to be untimely, assuming or aggresive or unduly eager to acquire or usurp authority and control of the Republican party in this county, I have made the wrong impression on you, and my purposes have not been understood, neither have my services for I have rendered them as humble as I knew how.

I wish to state here that I realize that I make mistakes, and I am perfectly willing to be criticised and I here invite just, fair, and constructive criticism, and I am not here and neither have I attempted to shun such criticism.

I wish to state further that the cause of the disturbance about the printing of the ballots was something that I could not help and regret very much that it happened, and I never was more sorely surprised at anything than I was at it happening just as it did happen. It was done seemingly on the account of the candidates failing to designate some one to receive and disburse funds for them after the primary. That was a matter solely in the jurisdiction of he candidates and I had no legitimate way of knowing that they had not complied with all the law and the wishes of the Judge of Probate, because there was no complaint made to me until most dark, on the last day anyone could qualify before the election. The only thing that I could do then was fight it down the best I could under the circumstances, and that I did with all there was in me. I contend that the whole affair was unnecessary, and could have easily been avoided had the file of the 1928 election not been lost in the Probate Judge's office, while I allow the other fellow the same privilege to his ideas.

The Judge came to my office about five o'clock on the evening of October the 15th, I believe it was, and asked me to come to his office, which I did as soon as I could arrange, and then he told me what was happening and the great danger we were in, and asked me to let some of the boys know about it and get me a lawyer and we, together with the Democrats, if they should choose to go, would go to Montgomery the next morning and have a consultation with the Attorney General at nine thirty o'clock as per his previous arrangements, and see what we could do about the matter.

In the consultation and discussion I had with the Judge at that time, I told him among other things that I did not remember what I had filed, if anything, and in fact that I did not remember filing anything after the primary. He contended that we had, so I asked him to get the file of the previous election that we might see just what we had been doing. He told me that the file was lost or someone had stolen it from his office, and that he did not know where it was.

Soon after I left the Judge, it came to me that Mr. Dennis was to have a meeting with the candidates in his office at seven o'clock to attend to some matter pertaining to the election, so I concluded to avail myself of this opportunity to let the Chairman of the County Executive Committee and the candidates know about the trouble, especially as the Judge had requested me to do so or at some of them know about. He did not designate any particular one but asked that I get a lawyer to go with us the next morning. I went first to the telephone and called Mr. Percy Pitts, a lawyer, and also a candidate at that time, and told him of the meeting and that there appeared to be some trouble about the printing of the ballot and that I especially wanted him to be at the meeting to advise with us. Mr. Pitts told me that the Judge had just told him about the matter but excused himself with regrets and did not attend the meeting.

I went to the meeting and when they got through with their business I told them as best I could what the trouble was and the grave danger we were in of not having a ballot printed.

With the advice of the candidates and some other Republicans who were there, I called a lawyer in Birmingham, he being a Republican and one of the best lawyers in the state, and told him the trouble and asked him to get in touch with the Attorney General the next morning and do what he could for us, and he promised me that he would and he told me later that he did get in touch with the Attorney General the next morning by means of the telephone.

Now, my friends. I do not, and have not claimed any credit for getting the Attorney General to change his mind or opinion, for I know that I did not directly, for I was not known in the matter, but so far as I know, the little weak effort that we put forth there that night in the very short time that we had might be the cause of us having a newly elected Republican ticket in this county today. There is one thing you may rest assured of, and that is the fact that the Attorney General's opinion was changed over night and that the little conference we had with him the next morning did to change his opinion. The Attorney General's opion was changed when we saw him the next morning for in effect he just let us in his office long enough to ell us that he had changed his opinion of the day before and why he had changed it.

In the Judge's letter of explanation of his conduct in the matter he steps aside enough to tell you about the error in the certificate of nominations. Personally I think the error too insignificant to be discussed by men, but since it is in, and the facts not before the people, I will explain.

I will say first that I consider it just a typographical error that was not made intentionally and which occurs, more or less, every day in the ordinary course of business and probably would not have amounted to anything had it not been noticed and correct nevertheless it happened.

The certificate of nominations was prepared by Mr. Dennis and me, and I wish you to know the one we prepared was correct as to names, while there was a certificate prepared by another party and signed by us that was incorrect, which I will here explain as follows:

On the day the count was had we were unable to obtain a printed certificate, it appearing that the company that printd the election supplies did not send certificates of results or nominations for the canvassing board to make its report on. We searched for the certificates before the beginning of the count and after the count was over I went to the Judge and asked if he had found the certificate and he said he had not, then I asked him if we may have an old certificate that we may copy from and he said he did not know where there was an old one, and turned and walked away, whereupon Mr. Dennis and I took the code and made us a certificate as best we could, and as we understood the law, and as I understand from information Judge Reynolds, Lawrence F. Gerald, and Percy Pitts got together at some later date and decided that there was a possible error in the signing of said certificate, whereupon Mr. Pitts asked permission to copy said original certificate that it might be properly signed as they thought it should be so in the copying, which I understand, was done in Mr. Pitt's office, the name of W. L. Sanders was changed to W. I. Sanders. I signed this copied certificate without closely examining it upon the assurance of Mr. Pitts that it was correctly copied and verified.

I understand from information that it has been said that I told the people at the meeting in Mr. Dennis' office, "that the Judge told me about the situation at fifteen minutes before five o'clock that afternoon and that five o'clock was the last minute that the ballots could be printed."

I wish to state that I did not make that statement neither do I believe that I made a statement that would cause a fair minded honest man to get that idea. If there be any honest man or woman who dubt this statement and will investigate for themselves I will be glad to furnish them with the name of every man that was there so that they may investigate properly.

Now Mr. Editor, if you will further indulge me I would like to say a few words relative to your editorial in the same issue of the paper under the caption, "Foolishness in Politics will result in failure."

It is true that you did not call my name in the article, but as you remember you told me verbally afterwards that I was the man you were striking at mostly or words to that effect, therefore, on this statement I proceed.

I realize that I make mistakes, and I welcome honest, fair, and constructive criticism as much as any one, and hereafter when you wish to criticise me for my mistakes or my conduct in any way, just call me by name and go to it. I can stand it even though it be very humiliating to a man whose ability and possibilities are limited like mine for a great master mind as you apparently possess, to get on to him. However, I would like for you to understand that every thing that I did and said in this ballot matter was honestly done and said. If I made any mistakes it was honest ones. I did not do one thing and say another, and if it were all to be done over again as it was then I would do and say the same things.

I told the people that night and early next morning because the Judge told me about it and ask me to let the boys know it and I could not let them know it without telling them. After we got back from Montgomery that day I do not remember going to any one and telling them about it, but when the people came to me and asked me about it I told them as I understood it and when they asked me what I thought about it, I told them. I would have told you or any one should you have come as a pretended friend desiring information, and my ideas, and I would do it again for I based my ideas on what I saw and read.

As to the filing of papers in the previous elections you know just my position, for I told you when I came to you the next morning trying to find out what you did when you were manager in the 1928 election, after I had failed to find the desired information in the Probate Judge's office.

I purposed telling the people that I did not remember filing my announcement or anything of the kind under Section 588 after the primary, just as I told you and, if I made the statement to any person without qualifying it as to my memory I did not intend to do so.

When you represent me as sending any word to any body or by any body relative to this matter, you misrepresent me and if you will just present one responsible person that will tell me I sent any word to any one by him or them or any one that can establish the fact that I sent him or them any word about the matter, then I will take my hat off to you. I did not send any word but word was brought to me from all over the ccunty. I am persuaded to believe that you know, and did know at the time you wrote your editorial, how the word was spread. If you read the papers you no doubt know just how. In fact, you mailed the word all over the county yourself, and you know it.

I did not accuse Judge Reynolds of anything that I remember of. I told several people, who seemed to be honest and interested, what it appeared to me to be and I based that on what I saw and read.

I do not recall speaking of it as being a new thing never heard of before, but I might have done so and if I did I had in mind the fact that the Probate Judge had waited until most night of the last day on which a person could qualify to let it be known that he would not print the ballot without the authority from the Attorney General of the State. I know that was a puzzle to me and I made some inquiry among the leading Republicans of the county, and there has not been a single person to tell me they knew aboot it. Now if this happens ferqoently in the county, or has often happened heretofore, and I made the statement I was wrong, but if it has not, there was ground for the statement. You may be your own judge.

When you characterized me as a "Loose Tongue, one who creates foolishness or stirs up strife and endangers the Republican party," the only thing I will say is the people to whom you write know us both and are competent to judge for themselves.

Mack, I have been as loyal to Judge Reynolds as leader of the Republican party as you or any other man, and I have been as loyal to the Republican party as Judge Reynolds or you either.

It has never been necessary for you, in your paper or any other way, to tell the people of this county that I was going to support the Republican ticket in an official election. You nor no other man has ever heard an expression of dissatisfaction from me as to a candidate nominated by the Republican primary of this county.

I admit that this whole affair about the printing of the ballot was foolishness, but who could help it? When it comes to candidates for Governor of the state; candidates for Attorney General of the State; candidates for seats on the Supreme Court bench of Alabama and candidates for practically every other state office, people of this type and standing make a mistake or follow a practice, why should little fellows like we be such ungrateful wretches if we made the same mistake?

I desire to say here that what little service I have rendered the party, if any at all, has been rendered in as humble a way as I know how to render it, and I do not believe that you can point to a single act of mine that will justify your intimation that I am trying to usurp authority and control of the Republican party in Chilton County. I for one still think the people are competent to look out for, and select their leaders when the time comes, and I am willing to risk my part of it with them.

I may further say that the whole motive that prompted me to do and say what I did do and say to keep the very thing going that I judge has contributed to a great measure in making your business a success and furnish you food and comfort for you and yours, and if this be your way of expressing your appreciation for the little service. I will be forced to take it that way.

By the way Mack, I presume in your thorough examination of the previous election records in the office of the Judge of Probate you observed the apparent fact that the candidataes in the general election in 1930 could have qualified to the practice in this county on October the 9th, the day the error was discovered by the Judge, yes, and probably on the 15th day of October, the day we were told about the Judge's position, just as legally as the Republican candidates did in the general election in 1928.

Now Mack, I beg your pardon for taking this space. I hope it will never become necessary for this to happen again. I have tried to be fair to all concerned, for that is all that I ask of any man, and that is to treat me fair. But if I have not been fair, and am not fair in this I am ready to do what is fair. I hope that I have not said anything that would send daggers into any one's heart, as you both apparently wished to do me. But I have tried to rejoice and be exceedingly glad for fundamentally at least, your charges were and are false, and I am forced to believe it was all for the truth's sake.

If I can ever serve you call on me, and if you ever need me send for me.

Yours very truly,
J. Z. MIMS.

BETHSALEM NEWS

We had a very good attendance at Sunday School Sunday, though the weather was very unlikely. There is friendly rivalry started in our Bible Class. The men and women are going to try and out-rival each other. The men trying to gain the greatest number of men, and the women doing the same, in trying to get more women in their class. The side winning is to be given a picnic or some kind or social by the other side.

Our superintendent told of one man who was in sore need, and asked that each one bring a quart of corn next Sunday to help this poor man. We hope that every one coming to Bethsalem next Sunday will help in this.

Mr. Milford was in Clanton Tuesday, and stated that the loss sustained in the fire has left him and his seven children without anything other than the clothes that they wear. "We are in a bad fix," he said "and if anybody can help us, we will be thankful."

DENNIS URGES FARMERS TO COME TO MEETING

This is to appeal to all farmers that are not satisfied with the results received this year to attend the meeting to be held at the courthouse on Tuesday, January 20th, 1931.

I hope that every farmer and business man that can will attend this meeting and help suggest better plans for the year 1931 than we have used in years gone by.

We all realize that we need better planning and many changes in our farming methods in order to meet present low prices, and lack of demand for cotton, our present money crop. If you need suggestions, come. If you have worthwhile suggestions you are requested to come and let's all work together for better conditions in our County.—J. N. Dennis.

JACK GENTRY'S STORE ROBBED

One night last week burglars entered the store of Mr. Jack Gentry near his home on the Lay Dam Road, and proceeded to get away with practically everything in the place.

According to reports of this affair, it is said that the burglars gained entry to the store by cleverly manipulating a slinding window, after which it is said that they opened up the door of the building backed a truck up to the door and loaded up all the merchandise in the place and went away.

A later report says that some hunters in the woods a few nights after the robbery found some of the groceries which had been taken out of the store. It has also been stated that the robbers left a coat in the store, and that a clue to the identity of the persons may be obtained from this coat.

Review of the Year 1930 at Home and in Other Lands

Unemployment and Economic Depression Generally Prevalent—Steps Toward World Peace—Democrats Win in United States Elections—South American Revolutions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROSPERITY, which was "just around the corner" at the beginning of 1930, gave the world no more than an occasional glimpse of her face during the year. Business depression, increasing unemployment, continuing low prices for agricultural products and declining markets for securities prevailed generally.

Skilled observers professed to see war clouds again gathering over the Balkans, but notable steps were taken in the direction of world peace and disarmament. The United States, Great Britain and Japan signed the London naval limitation treaty, and toward the close of the year there were indications that France and Italy, settling their parity dispute, would make it a five-power pact. Some progress was achieved by the preparatory disarmament commission of the League of Nations. The revision of German reparations, known as the Young plan, was adopted by all nations concerned and put into effect, although Germany was not hopeful of its ultimate success. The evacuation of the Rhineland by the allied forces was completed.

China's long, bloody and confused civil war ended in victory for the Nationalist government. Popular and military revolutions upset the governments of five Latin-American republics.

Though governmental and other agencies in the United States strove throughout the year to relieve the unfortunate economic conditions, results of these efforts were slow in appearing. Consequently the voters went to the polls in November and expressed their dissatisfaction in the customary manner. There was a Democratic landslide that covered most of the country and the Republican party virtually lost its control of both houses of the congress that convenes in March, 1931. However, the national leaders of the victorious Democrats pledged their party to co-operation with the Republican administration in all measures designed to bring prosperity around that corner, and business was reassured by the promise that there would be no attempt for some time to revise the tariff act passed in June.

Industrial and financial distress in the United States was greatly increased by drought that prevailed all summer in the Mississippi and Ohio river states and extended as far east as the Virginias. National and state governments afforded speedy relief to the sufferers. As winter neared numerous organizations throughout the country went into action to alleviate the unemployment situation, their aim being to supply those out of work with jobs rather than charity doles. Public building and highway projects were started and speeded up, and great industrial and transportation concerns sought means to increase the number of their employees.

All in all, 1930 was not a happy year for the world.

INTERNATIONAL

THREE months of intensive debate, diplomatic negotiation, study of experts' figures and mutual concessions brought forth the London naval treaty, which was signed on April 22 by the delegates of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy. By this pact the first three powers agreed to the extension of the Washington treaty so that the reduction and limitation of their navies should apply to cruisers and lesser vessels. France and Italy failed utterly to reach an accord as to what their relative naval strength should be. Consequently they subscribed to only those parts of the London treaty that provided for a battleship building "holiday" and prescribed various rules designed to humanize submarine warfare.

France and Italy held intermittent conversations during the rest of the year, but could not settle their differences. The one insurmountable obstacle was Italy's demand that her right to naval parity with France be admitted, and France's flat refusal to yield this point.

League Receives Briand's Scheme.

In September the assembly of the League of Nations listened politely while M. Briand, French foreign minister, expounded his pet scheme for a federation of European states. Other statesmen cautiously praised the plan and it was accepted in principle by the assembly and referred to a special committee which will report to the 1931 meeting.

Twenty-eight of the nations represented at Geneva signed on October 2 a treaty guaranteeing financial aid to any signatory state that is the victim of warlike aggression.

Late in August nine of the smaller nations of central Europe held a conference in Warsaw and agreed on a concerted program of action mainly in furtherance of their agrarian interests. The pact was signed by Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Poland, Rumania and Jugoslavia. Lithuania was absent because of her political differences with Poland. France was quick to strengthen her friendship with these states by offering credits.

During the year there were many indications that Italy was drawing into close co-operation with Germany and Russia.

After being ratified by all the nations concerned, the Young plan for reparations was put into effect on May 9. Gates W. McGarrah of New York already had been elected president of the bank for international settlements created by the plan. On May 19 the last of the French troops in the Rhineland began moving out, the evacuation being completed June 30. A separate reparations settlement was signed in April by Hungary, Austria and the states in the little entente.

Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state of the United States, was elected a member of the World Court in September to fill out the term of Charles Evans Hughes.

The mandate commission of the League of Nations made in August its long awaited report on the Palestine conflicts between Jews and Arabs, placing the blame on Great Britain. In the fall the British government announced a new policy concerning Palestine which would stop for the present any further immigration of Jews into the Holy Land. Zionists everywhere protested vigorously and President Chaim Weizmann and other chief officers of the World Zionists organization resigned.

Russia's Great Conspiracy Story.

Early in November the government of Russia announced that it had uncovered a gigantic plot against the Soviet regime in which a number of "capitalistic" states were said to be involved. Among many individuals who were alleged to have a part in the conspiracy were Former Premier Poincare and Foreign Minister Briand of France and Sir Henri Deterding, British oil magnate. Eight Russian engineers were put on trial, confessed and were sentenced to terms in prison. Paris and London looked on the whole thing as a "frame-up."

Late in January Mexico severed diplomatic relations with Russia because of alleged Communist insults. In the United States the advocates of a policy of resumption of relations with the Soviet government were jolted by revelations that the latter had been selling wheat short on the American grain exchanges, aiding in the demoralization of prices. At the same time it became evident that the Moscow government was dumping grain in the European markets at prices far below the cost of production. The whole affair created a great stir here and abroad but nothing much could be done about it.

FOREIGN

GREAT BRITAIN'S Labor government struggled manfully throughout the year to solve the nation's economic problems, but found that this could not be done in a short time. Unemployment continued to increase, passing the two million mark in June, and industrial depression was little lightened if at all. However, no one seemed to have a better solution to offer than Prime Minister MacDonald and his ministers, so they held on to their power. They had the aid of a national advisory council, Chancellor Snowden devised a satisfactory budget that was by no means socialistic, and parliament passed some of the legislation asked by the government.

Two matters of vast import demanded much attention from the British empire's rulers. One was the effort to develop the empire as an economic unit, and the imperial conference which was held in London undertook this task. The various dominions were represented by some of their best minds and the discussions continued until well into November. But the results were extremely disappointing. The main issue was economic cooperation, and in this nothing was accomplished because the dominions and the British government could not agree concerning free trade, protection and preferential rates within the empire.

Problem of India.

The increasing independence of the dominions was marked by the tacit understanding that henceforth they shall have the right to accredit their own diplomats to foreign countries, and may communicate with one another and with Great Britain, not through governors general, but directly. It was decided to create a tribunal for the settlement of intraimperial disputes.

The future status of India within the empire was a question that troubled the British throughout the year, and it was complicated by the non-resistance rebellion conducted by Mahatma Gandhi and his numerous followers. As is their custom, the Communists took advantage of the situation to convert the peaceful revolt of the Indian Nationalists into riotous demonstrations, and the police and military forces had to handle not only these but also attacks on the northwestern frontier by tribesmen. Gandhi and many of his lieutenants were put in prison but their civil disobedience campaign never slackened. One of its frequent manifestations was the making of salt contrary to the laws. The All-India congress, consisting largely of Gandhi's adherents, decided to boycott the roundtable conference arranged for late in the year, because their demand was for the absolute independence of India.

The roundtable conference opened in London November 12 with much pomp and ceremony, the native princes, the Hindus, the Moslems and even the "untouchables" being represented by their ablest men—and by two brilliant women. The Indians made it clear they would accept nothing less than dominion status, and some of them bitterly attacked the British methods of rule in India. The problem before the conference and the government was so complex that there was no chance for its solution for many months. One definite decision reached was that Burma should be made a separate dominion.

In the Canadian national election on July 28 the Conservatives completely upset the Liberal government headed by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and secured a comfortable majority in the dominion parliament, and Richard B. Bennett, their leader, became prime minister. The new government took steps at once to relieve the unemployment situation and to help the farmers, one being the almost complete discontinuance of immigration from Europe.

German Fascists Win.

As in most other countries, political events in Germany reflected the prevailing discontent of the people, and there it was aggravated by the feeling that they were oppressed by the reparations. Chancellor Mueller and his cabinet resigned in March because of dissatisfaction with the ratification of the Young plan and with the budget and financial reforms proposed. Dr. Heinrich Bruening, Centrist leader, became chancellor and formed a ministry of members of the five middle parties. The National Socialists and the Communists kept up continual agitation and President Hindenburg dissolved the reichstag on July 18. In the elections which were held September 14 the National Socialists, commonly called the Fascists won a most surprising and tremendous victory. They increased the number of their seats in the reichstag from 12 to 107, and their popular vote from 800,000 to more than 6,000,000. Their titular leader is Adolf Hitler who, being an Austrian, could not be elected to the reichstag.

France, Spain and Italy.

One small provision in the finance bill brought a vote of lack of confidence in the French chamber of deputies in February and the Tardieu ministry was forced to resign. It was succeeded by a Radical-Socialist cabinet formed by Chautemps which was defeated on its first appearance. Tardieu then was recalled, and held on through a stormy summer and fall, but early in December the senate forced him and his cabinet to resign, and Theodore Steeg undertook to form a new ministry. France maintained her position as one of the most prosperous countries of Europe, and gathered an immense store of gold. She was largely preoccupied with national defense and went ahead with her plan for a powerful chain of fortifications on her eastern frontier.

Gen. Primo de Rivera, who had been dictator of Spain for more than six years, resigned on January 28, partly under compulsion, when faced with the threat of a military revolt. He was succeeded by Gen. D'amaso Berenguer. Throughout the year there were repeated strikes, food riots and violent demonstrations by students and in the middle of December a serious rebellion broke out in the northern part of the country.

Economy was the continual cry of the Italian government, Premier Mussolini being its spokesman, and his measures toward that end were put through with thoroughness and dispatch. They extended to the reduction of salaries of all governmental employees, who are remarkably numerous there, and all employers were urged to follow suit. In compensation the cost of living was brought down by the lowering of prices of food and other necessities. At the same time the Duce continued his program of extensive public works, like drainage and restoration of waste lands, giving employment to many men.

Carol on Rumanian Throne.

Carol, former crown prince of Rumania, with the aid of prominent Rumanians, executed a startling coup d'etat in June. From his exile in France he flew to his native country in an airplane and two days later the parliament declared him king and his little son, who had held the title, heir to the throne. Carol soon began planning for his coronation, but his estranged wife declined to be reconciled and the statesmen said the ceremony could not be held unless she were present or the marriage were dissolved. As a result of this dispute Premier Maniu resigned in October and Carol went ahead with his plans.

An interesting if not important event was the marriage on October 25 of King Boris of Bulgaria and Princess Giovanna, daughter of the king and queen of Italy.

Latin-American Revolutions.

Revolt flamed in four South American republics. Four men who had been virtual dictators were ousted. Four new governments were established. As a preliminary to these events there was a revolution in the Dominican republic in February, the immediate cause being the announced intention of President Horacio Vasquez to stand for re-election. After a few skirmishes Vasquez was forced out of office, being succeeded temporarily by General Urena. Elections were held on May 16 and Gen. Rafael Trujillo was chosen president and inaugurated three months later.

Bolivia was next on the list. There Dr. Hernando Siles tried, like Vasquez, to perpetuate his rule and was driven from office in May by the insurgents. He was permitted to take refuge in Chile, and his much hated right hand man, Gen. Hans Kundt of Prussia, fled back to his German home. A military junta took over the government, its chief being Gen. Carlos Blanco Gallindo.

Peru followed suit in August. The officers of the army led a movement against President Augusto B. Leguia who had held the office for more than ten years and considered himself almost irremovable. He was forced to resign, turning over his powers to a military junta, and later Lieut. Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro was made provisional president. Leguia had been recognized as an efficient business president and Peru made great material strides during his regime, but the revolutionists accused him of "denial of civil liberties" and also of nepotism and the sale of concessions. He was imprisoned to await trial.

Late in August President Hipolito Irigoyen of Argentina was warned by his minister of justice that a revolution might break out immediately. A few days later the prediction was fulfilled, the high army and navy officers leading their commands in a revolt that speedily ousted the aged chief executive, who was seriously ill. Only in Buenos Aires was there any popular opposition to the revolution, and this was soon quelled with some bloodshed. Gen. Jose Francisco Uriburu, chief of the insurgents, became the provisional president on September 6. Irigoyen for years had enjoyed great personal popularity in Argentina, was president from 1916 to 1922 and was elected again in 1928. But he had become senile and sick and lost his hold on the people.

Vargas Rules Brazil.

Brazil's revolution broke out early in October and was in a way a war between the states, the leader of each striving to seize the central government. The term of President Washington Luis was soon to expire but his favored candidate, Dr. Julio Prestes, president of the state of Sao Paulo had been elected, allegedly by fraud. The defeated liberal candidate, Dr. Getulio Vargas, former president of the state of Rio Grande do Sul, started a revolt to prevent the inauguration of Prestes, and the movement spread to state after state, all the insurgent armies converging on Rio de Janeiro, the national capital. The government resisted stubbornly, but considerable parts of the army and navy deserted it and after a few weeks of bloody fighting Luis was ousted. The members of the junta that took over the government at once began quarreling and scheming, but Vargas promptly came up from the south with a large force of gaucho soldiers and his authority was recognized. He was installed as provisional president on November 3.

Pascual Ortiz Rubio was inaugurated as president of Mexico on February 5 and selected a strong cabinet under whose rule the country promises to prosper. Especial attention is being paid to reorganization of agriculture and to education.

DOMESTIC

WITH less cause for complaint than the peoples of most other countries, the inhabitants of the United States were nevertheless dissatisfied and pessimistic. Overproduction by farmers and manufacturers and timidity of consumers resulted in business depression and unemployment that lasted throughout the year, despite all efforts to restore prosperity. The great drought played its evil part, affecting conditions in the entire country.

President Hoover's administration had another exceedingly difficult year. In the senate the Democrats were reinforced by the radical Republicans and the coalition fought many of the Chief Executive's policies. After more than six months of debate the senate passed the Smoot tariff bill, embracing two features that were obnoxious to the President. These were the export debenture provision, carried over from the old farm relief legislation, and a clause transferring the flexible tariff power from the President to congress. The house of representatives eliminated these features, the senate was forced to yield, and on June 14 the so-called Hawley-Smoot tariff measure was finally enacted. It reached the highest protective level of any tariff law ever passed, with an average rate about 20 per cent above that of the Fordney-McCumber bill of 1922. In its entirety it was satisfying to nobody, but President Hoover signed it because he saw in its flexible provision the means of righting its injustices. Protests against the higher duties were received from many foreign governments.

Veterans' Pension Act.

There was another long and bitter wrangle over the veterans' pension bill. As first passed by congress it was wholly objectionable to the administration and was promptly vetoed, partly because it granted compensation for disabilities not incurred in active service and partly because it went "beyond the financial necessities of the situation." The house sustained the veto but the senate repassed the bill with some amendments. These were rejected by the representatives and a measure fairly acceptable to the administration was passed and signed.

Kitchen Shower for Home Economics Department

How many of us know that cooking and the study of foods is of vital importance? We all do, and we want the girls in our school to learn the very best there is to know about this subject. In order for them to know foods thoroughly they must apply the principles to recipes. In order to do this we must have equipment. It would be a small practice on your part to give a piece of equipment to the department which would mean a higher average rating for our department as well as enable the girls to have the necessary and much needed equipment, to carry on the food and cooking classes. You will have the priviledge of bringing or sending donations to the high school on Thursday afternoon, January 22, at 3:30.

Below you will observe a list of the needed equipment. "Look this over and notify Miss Brown just what piece or pieces you wish to give and in this way we will get the equipment needed. We will appreciate your donations and cooperation and expect to have many of the friends of the school present at the shower.

The equipment that is needed is as follows: 1 baking pan, 4 earthernware mixing bolls, 1 can opener, 8 cereal dishes, 8 cups and saucers, 2 platters, 3 salt and pepper shakers, 3 vegetable dishes, 4 dish pans, 2 enamel double boilers, 3 large kitchen knives, 3 paring knives, 5 measuring cups spatulas, 1 sink strainer, 3 strainers, 1 food chopperr, 2 towel racks, 6 knives, 6 forks, 3 tea kettels, 2 kitchen cabinets, 1 oil stove and 1 fuel mirror.

Drs. Ezell and Haskew visit school

We were all delighted to have Dr. Ezell visit us last week and also Dr. Haskew this week. Both of them gave us splendid talks about semester examinations that will begin next Thursday morning. They show how, by constantly working all the year, that any pupil can prepare himself for his work in his classes as well as a citizen for life. His talk was based on the "five wise and five foolish virgins." "Make up your mind that you can do a thing," said the speakers.

P.-T. A. Meeting Tuesday afternoon

Our regular P.-T. A. met Tuesday afternoon. One of the largest crowds we have had this year was present. Some splendid plans were laid out for next year. A detailed report will be made later.

Semester Examinations will begin Thursday morning

Everything is pointing toward semester examinations. We are pleased with the spirit shown in the coming semester examinations. Some smile and some don't, but the majority seem to say, "the hills flatten out when we get nearer to them."

A quotation on the lips of everyone in school was given us last week by Dr. Ezell which is as follows: "Feed the mind by means of study of worthwhile books."

SENSIBLE ACTION ON THE LEAGUE COURT

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations has put the League Court question on the shelf for a year. It ought to stay there. The Senate has domestic problems and responsibilities of the most urgent and difficult nature to deal with. That it should also undertake to decide the issues involved in adherence to the Court is obviously inexpedient and improper.

All this we are confident is realized in the Senate and even in the White House. The highly organized internationalist claque at Washington will try to bully the Senate nito overruling its committee. We hope the Senate will have the spirit and common sense to ignore it. The nation wants Congress to give its best thought to the national situation, to consider well our serious social and economic difficulties, to weed out quack proposals and take such action, and such action only, as wise deliberation suggests for the restoration of normal prosperity. When, as promptly as possible, that is accomplished the nation will be grateful for an adjournment of legislative activity until the next regular session.—Chicago Tribune.

A new campaign is being started in Europe having for its purpose persuading Uncle Sam to cancel the debts the allies piled up during the war. But there is no counter offer to cancel the titles to the valuable real estate which the debtor nations acquired during the same war. We might do a little trading.

JOCKSON'S VIEWS OF SCHOOL SYSTEM

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to our school system. There is some dissatisfaction over the county about the transportation of the children to and from school. We cannot expect people to be satisfied when a school bus stops at a school patron's house and picks up his large children and transports them to and from the schools of our county, and leave the little tots to tramp through the rain, mud and cold. Such a system is discriminating against the little child, in favor of the larger ones. A system like this will never be satisfactory. I cannot see how the officials of any county can take the tax payers' dollar to discriminate against the little children in such a way.

What did Christ say in regard to little children? "Forbid them not to come unto Me; for such is the kingdom of heaven. I wonder if the Board of Education has ever read the scripture. Surely they have not; otherwise Chilton County would not have such a discriminating bus system. There is another scripture which says: "Are not My ways equal and your ways unequal?" This is true, for there is no equalization in the Board of Education's bus system.

I hope the board will see if there cannot be some plan worked out that will give equal transportation to all children alike. It seems there is a drive being made to consolidate the rural schools in this county. As there are several school houses in the county that are in a bad condition, and no repairs being made, I fear this is a bad mistake the county board is making. Is there is more satisfaction in the districts where there is no transportation at all than there is in the consolidated districts where they are partially transported? The tax payers' money should be equally divided among all the children of the county, and each citizen should know how every dollar is being spent.

Section 123 of the school code requires the County Board of Education to publish a full and complete itemized statement of the receipts and disbursements of all school funds, and the refusal or neglect failure of any member of the County Board of Education to comply with the provisions of this section shall constitute a misdemeanor. Has this itemizer statement been publish? I haven't seen one. What about it board, do you have them? If so, please send me one to Clanton Rte. 4.

Yours very truly,
A. A. JACKSON, Clanton Rte 4.

COMMEND ACTION OF COMMISSIONERS

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you kindly allow me a small space in your most excellent paper to say a few words relative to the recent ruling of the County Commissioners Court in the matter of road work and road taxes for the ensuing year. As spokesman for the road subjects of Beat One, I wish to say that the act of the Court exempting us from road duty and road tax is received with much favor and rejoicing. It will be a great pleasure to us during the coming year to know that just when we most want to do something else, there will be no road overseers to warn us out to work the roads free, or force us to pay a tax in lieu thereof, when there is no money with which to pay. But instead, if we have the time and feel so inclined, there will be a chance for us to work the roads for pay, earning thereby a few, much needed, dollars.

Yes, the road subjects of Beat One take this method of publicly commending the Court for its action. Resolving to give the Court our heartiest cooperation in working out the new method of working the roads of the county, we trust that the coming year shall be a banner one for our roads.

Sincerely,
DELBERT BRAND, Clanton R 5.

HAVE YOU ANY OLD BOOKS?

If there is anyone in the county who has any Free and Treadwell readers that they are willing for children to have who cannot get them otherwise, please send or notify the Child Welfare Worker at Clanton. There are many children in the county who have not started to school on account fo no books and clothes, and these readers are greatly needed.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

The following paragraphs from Hiram Johnson's recent radio address would seem to indicate that Senator is not a champion of the World Court:

"The highly financed international organizations, with their florid and extravagant propaganda, are again in full cry, bludgeoning the Senate and demanding immediate ratification of the present protocols, which would make us a member of the Court.

"A decade has passed since our people had before them the League of Nations. In 1920 overwhelmingly they repudiated the League. In 1930 it is sought, indirectly and surreptitiously, to take us into the League.

"The same organizations, the same individuals, same newspapers, with exactly the same demands, arguments, animadversions, denunciations and misrepresentation that thundered for our entrance into the League of Nations ten years ago today in like fashion seek to drive us into a part of the League of Nations.

"The Court was intended to be, and is, the judicial tribunal of the League. The general policies of the Court are defined by the League. The judges are selected by the League. The expenses of the Court and the salaries are determined and paid by the League, and through its organization the Court is attached to the League.

"Once before we had this Court under discussion, and our nation's adherence to it was narrowly averted, and narrowly averted solely because the advocates of the court recognized the dangers inherent in it to our country, and themselves insisted upon a safeguadring reservation.

"The Senate reservation is plain, brief and unambiguous. The substitute for it is wrapped in words, lengthy, involved and disingenous. Internationalists assert the substitute does just what the Senate did. And yet these same internationalists denounce the Senate in unmeasured terms when the Senate reservation was adopted.

"Now, with beautiful language, soft and sweet, insidiously they say they offer us the same thing. The ordinary man in perplexity asks, if both are alike, what need is there for any substitute at all.

"Joining the Court would not contribute to world peace or a better understanding among the nations of the world. On the contrary, misunderstanding would be certain to result and strained relations to follow.

"The very position we occupy today, unless we are blind to passing events and deaf to the opinion so often expressed of us, makes it imperative that we do our part for peace and better understanding in our own way, free and unfettered from any European organization.

"Our problems and our policies are peculiar to ourselves. These we never should submit to any foreign tribunal. We have our tariff, immigration and prohibition policies and our great Monroe Ooctrine, the problem of the foreign debts due to us, the Panama Canal, about which there is the ever-recurring controversy as to tolls, and many others that no American in his right senses would tolerate interference with.

"It is neither wisdom nor statesmanship to complicate the situation. We are none too well thought of as a people and our policies as a nation are disliked, and yet we are asked to submit ourselves to a so-called court of fifteen judges, fourteen of whom are foreigners."

Final action on this important question has been postponed for a year. This will give the Senate and the American people ample time to find out whether the revised protocols, prepared by Mr. Root and his European advisers, give protection to the interests of the United States equal to that of the Senate reservation.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One report which will be greeted with genuine satisfaction by the majority of our people is that coming from Washington to the effect that President Hoover does not contemplate the calling of an extra session of the Senate after March 4 for the purpose of considering the World Court resolution and the so-called Root protocol. For many days there were reports in circulation, coming from internationalist and pro-League circles to the effect that the President contemplated the calling of such an extra session. Doubtless the wish was the father of thought. The announcement which came from the White House was to the effect that the President does not contemplate the calling of an extra session of the Senate for the purpose of considering the World Court. The reports to the contrary were characterized as being without foundation and made without any authority.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, it will be remembered, some time ago voted to postpone consideration of the World Court resolution until the session of the Senate in December, 1931. This action met with the general approval of the members of the Senate with comparatively few exceptions. The only noisy objection came from a few internationalist newspapers and professional League of Nations clackers.

There is certainly no reason, which the average observer can discover, for the consideration of the World Court resolution at this time. The present session of Congress is concerned with much more important matters. Aside from the appropriations bills, which usually take a great deal of the time of the short sessions of Congress, there is the question of relief legislation. And there is no discoverable reason why a special session of the Senate should be called after March 4 to consider the Court protocol. Certainly the country would like a long rest from legislation as soon as the essential bills are put through, and at any rate the chief concern of the country now is to get its business affairs back on the road to normalcy, a process which is far more important than any venture into European politics. While it is true that a special session of the Senate alone could not legislate, it is equally true that the Senate could consider anything it wished to consider, in addition to the World Court and the result of such a session might easily be disturbing to the business situation, which is none too stable as it is.

There will be plenty of time to consider the World Court resolution, and the effect of the changes made in the Senate by Elihu Root and his European friends after next December. In the meantime let us all pull together and help the administration in its wise and constructive efforts to put America back on the high road to prosperity.

"DOES THIS SEEM FAIR?"

"Does this seem fair?" is the title of the advertisement of the L. & N. Railroad, which appears in this issue of The Union-Banner. The question is applied to draw attention to the manner in which the railroads are dealt with in matters of taxation, as compared with the manner in which the operators of commercial busses are treated in the same matter, taxation.

In presenting its side of the argument, the L. &N. advertisement uses this expression:

Over 22 per cent, or $403,000,000, of the net revenue from the operation of the United States railroads in 1929 was paid into the public treasuries in the form of taxes.

In addition, 13.6 per cent, or $855,000,000, of the gross receipts of the railroads was spent to maintain their own private roadways in order that the public might travel in greater comfort and ship with greater safety.

These huge sums were exclusive of the interest on the heavy investment in these proprties—roadway, rails, ties, buildings, etc., that the railroads built at their own expense.

Compare these amounts with those paid by busses and trucks engaged in common-carrier service directly in competition with the railroads. Unlike the railroads, they do not contribute adequately in taxes to the support of our courts, schools, and other public institutions. They do not share properly in the cost of construction and upkeep of the highways. Generally they select their class of traffic and assess their own rates, and are virtually free from the exacting requirements as to supervision of their operations, etc., now imposed on the railroads by government and state authorities.

Such a situation is manifestly unfair and unjust, and unless corrected will seriously impair one of the nation's most vital instruments of progress. Common equity demands that the thoughtful consideration of the public be given to these problems so that efficient railroad transportation may be sustained. All the railroads want or can reasonably ask for is a field of endeavor that affords equal opportunity for all.

The question of the busses and railroads is one that comes right home to the people of Clanton. We are situated on the main line of the L. & N. Railroad, and all along this line between Birmingham and Montgomery there is the paved State and Federal Highway which is working alive with commercial busses, both passenger and freight.

The railroad offers passenger and freight service to the community of Clanton. The busses offer such service also. Every time a citizen of this town has a freight shipment to make or receive, he has the choice of using the L. & N. Railroad or some one of the busses. Every time one of us has a trip to make, we have the choice of going either on the railway cars of the L. & N. or on one of the various passenger busses.

Had you ever stopped to think what your decision on such little matters mean. It is a little matter to you; but it is a great big matter when you look at it from the standpoint of the railroad or the bus operator, or the State of Alabama.

The Union-Banner is frank to say that we do not believe the railroads are getting a fair deal from the State of Alabama, which, after the railroads have built their own railway systems and rolling stocks, requires them to contribute taxes to the public treasury; while at the same time the State has built the paved highways, and allows the commercial passenger and freight busses to operate on the roads without paying taxes in proportion to the advantages which they are getting from the State.

Not only is this a question that every citizen ought to become interested in; it is a question that members of the legislature of Alabama ought to be awakened about.

A REAL NAVY

Secretary Adams is appealing for appropriations to build up a real navy. He has just outlined his plan before the House Committee, which obviously has the approval of the President. The plan contemplates a "navy second to none" and starts the government on the road to the agreed upon London treaty for parity.

Immediate legislation is asked by the Secretary of the Navy so that needed fighting vessels can be laid down during the fiscal year beginning July 1, next. This will represent the first year's installment of a five-year program contemplating the expenditure of more than a half billion dollars in an eight-year period.

If the Adams program is adopted in its entirety, the Secretary says the American government and private yards will be working on new naval vessels valued at 300 millions during the 1932 fiscal year, beginning in July.

Chairman Britten of the House Committee is doing his part to advance the naval program. Since there has been expressed considerable doubt as to the findings and agreements of the London conference, these activities serve to encourage public confidence in the agents who have represented the interests of America in a fundamentally important relation. Indications at present are that the nation's first line of defense is much to be improved and strengthened.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Mr. F. W. Denty, of Birmingham, was among the visitors to Clanton last week. He spent a few days and nights here, passing a bit of time with several of his friends. As he talked to me he said with a longing: "I wish my wife and I were able to keep house again, so we could come back and live in Clanton." I know that would be a delight to Mr. and Mrs. Denty; but they have not yet lost all the joys of life. They live with their daughter and son-in-law, and the grandchildren.

And last Saturday morning Clanton was treated to a short visit by the Right Honorable and Altogether Celebrated character known as Judge Enoch Foshee, now a citizen, or perhaps I should say resident, of Lowndes County. There is a certain month in the year of which it is frequently said it came in like a lion and went out like a lamb. Thinking of that expression I will say of Judge Foshee, he came in just like Enoch and went out just like Enoch. You know how that was. If he wanted anything in your place he took it, and all hte time was so busy talking you did not have a chance to stop him.

Mr. Foshee is now living on a dairy farm in Lowndes County, which he is operating for the owner. He takes care of 70 cows, and believe me, he says, it takes work for me and my crowd to do the job. He says he likes it, though, and is well pleased with the success he has attained.

W. A. Reynolds was in Clanton last Monday. He told me he has had a great flood of approval of the things he said about our economic situation in last week's Banner. He promised us he would try to get back up here for the farmers meeting next Tuesday. When Mr. Reynolds talks on such subjects as farming and sawmilling, he talks out of a wealth of experience, and we might say also, an experience that has brought him a fair measure of success. People of Chilton County know of his experience and his success, and therefore they give attention to what he has to say.

And while I am so close to the subject of the meeting next Tuesday, I want to urge all our people to come to that gathering. It will be at the courthouse at ten o'clock in the morning. A preliminary conference conducted by Mr. Stapp, was held Monday night, to outline some plans for the meeting. Every farmer, banker, business, and professional man ought to attend this meeting.

Monday night I had the pleasure of attending the celebration of the American Legion in Montgomery. The occasion was in honor of the visit of Commander O'Neill, to the capital city of Alabama. It was a great jubilation of war veterans from all over Alabama. And a good mixture of wives and daughters of the veterans added very greatly to the congeniality of the crowd. One was impressed with the friendly spirit of Montgomery in providing entertainment for the visitors. Mayor Gunter, as well as high officials of Montgomery County and the State of Alabama, were on hand to assure everybody that they were welcome as guests in the city.

This meeting of the Legion Monday night brought to a climax I guess the record of Governor Graves in disappointing a gathering at which he was programmed to appear. I have attended many functions in the last four years at which I expected to see our Governor, and he has made one hundred per cent in disappointing me by not being there.

The mystery of an airplane ride has been wiped out of the lives of many folks in Clanton in the last week. The plane which has been here has had a liberal patronage at the popular price of 75 cents a ride. The customers included folks of all ages. It is amusing, in fact right interesting, to hear a boy of eight years describe his ride in the plane, and think of what his daddy of forty years would have done about the same age in his life if he had met an automobile in the road. And if an airplane had soared across the heavens, all the natives would surely have jumped in the river.

As the old negro said in his sermon, the yarth do move. I guess that was the same preacher who came forth, ascended the rostrum, and took his text from the seventh chapter of Judas, and announced his text as "You have been tried, but you wont do."

Uncle Tom Littlefield sitting in the lobby of the courthouse dressing off an axe handle. He sat right there and finished, sold it and delivered it. Never saw the courthouse used for an axe handle factory before, I said. That's nothing, replied Uncle Tom. You are liable to see anything happen now. If you are here next Monday morning you will see Walter Gillespie become Sheriff, and you never saw anything like that before, either, I bet. That ended our confab.

Monday was a raw day in Clanton. It was rainy and cold. As I went up and down the streets I saw a number of children barefooted, with not even a coat or a hat. When I witness such as that, I am compelled to loosen up a bit for our chest fund.

I took a little stroll out to West End, and found Luther Williams all set up for business with a grocery store where Jim Scroggins was burned out a few weeks ago. Mr. Williams has a nice new place, well stocked with fancy groceries, and he is very frank to say that it is business he is looking for. If you are handy to West End, Mr. Williams will be glad to have you come around to see him.

Percy Pitts, our Representative in the Legislature, was mixing with 'em, going and coming Monday night at the Legion banquet. Percy is one of the most popular members of the Alabama House, in spite of the fact that he is one of only three Republicans in that body. Percy Pitts is absolute pizen to those who say that a Republican can not be recognized in Montgomery as a member of the legislature. You ought to go down and see him get around amongst the boys some time.

Perhaps it is just as well that the consideration of the World Court prtoocols should go over until the next Session of Congress. There would not have been time for a thorough discussion at the short session, and there would have been pressure to get the question out of the way with inadequate consideration.

The more thoroughly the matter is discussed, and the better the country understands the Court and its relations to European politics and the League, the less likely the Senate will be to vote in the light of sentiment rather than of reason.—Kansas City Star.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

The wife of Mr. Aaron Dennis gave him, on last Friday a birthday dinner that was a most happy occasion for all those present.

She had as guests Mr. Jasper Dennis, father of Aaron, and his wife; Mr. T. E. Kelley, wife and daughter, Miss Delilah, parents and sister of the hostess.

The dining room was most beautifully decorated, and the table was beautiful with silver and glassware. The repast was all an epicure could ask for. The crowning piece being a lovely pyramided cake, artistically covered with white icing and beautifully adorned with 27 fancy little lighted candles that told the tale.

Some Interesting Figures Are Given

Letter From Lawrence to Pitts Shows Comparison Between Common Schools and Higher Institutions.

Some interesting figures concerning Alabama's educational operations are contained in a letter addressed to Representative Percy M. Pitts by County Superintendent of Education, Buford Lawrence. The figures are in the nature of a comparison between the per capita appropriation from State funds for higher education and education in the common schools.

These figures more clearly emphasize the oft-repeated assertion that the State of Alabama does not help the boy or girl to get started in their educational training; but reserves most of its help to aid them in finishing up. Which, it is often said, seems to be putting the shoe on the wrong foot.

The letter of Mr. Lawrence to Mr. Pitts says:

Complying with a promise to you in a conversation yesterday, I am writing to give you the following figures about the appropriations for educational purposes as found in House Bill 318 of the Legislature of 1927. The figures given show the enrollment in the different institutions of higher learning as found on page 214 of the annual report of 1929 and for rural education on page 188 of the same report.

The enrollment referred to above is for the year 1929 and reveals the following facts:

Florence had an enrollment of 2,677 and received a total appropriation for the quadrennium just closing of increased funds of $440,000 which gives a per capita of $164.36.

Jacksonville had enrolled 2,401 students with an appropriation of $440,000, which gives a per capita for the quadriennium just closing of $183.25.

Livingston had an enrollment of 1,078 with a total appropriation of $440,000 and a per capita of $408.16.

Troy had 2,072 with an appropriation of $540,000 and a per capita of $260.61.

Alabama College had an enrollment of 2,083 with a total appropriation of $1,383,495.09, and a per capita of $664.08.

The University had an enrollment of 8,055 with an appropriation of $2,138,923.12, and a per capita of $265.53.

The enrollment shown above is for all extension students or any other who had any sort of claim as being a student of the institution. The appropriations as stated above are the total appropriations for the quadriennium just closing and constitute extra monies over and above any they had previous to 1927.

Common schools, including high schools and cities, had enrolled 638,358 with an appropriation of $9,231,200 which gives them a per capita for the quadriennium of $14.46.

I am sure the above figures are sufficient to convince any one that the common schools have not been taken care of on a bisis with the higher institutions of learning. I wish it understood that I have no ill will toward the higher institutions of learning. I am happy that the State of Alabama saw fit to put into operation such a splendid system, but I am humiliated by the figures above and feel that it is only just and fair that the common schools be provided for in a better way.

I appreciate your interest in the common schools and assure you that I will appreciate, on behalf of the children of this great state of ours, anything you may be able to do. Not for me, but for the children of the state, in the legislature which is about to convene.

FRED CALLOWAY HURT LAST FRIDAY BY MIXER

Fred Calloway of Clanton, was seriously hurt last Friday while engaged in his work as mechanic for the State road crew, near Mobile. It is stated that Mr. Calloway was at work repairing a cement mixer, when he received a blow on the head that rendered him unconscious. He was carried to a hospital in Mobile, where his condition was found to be serious.

Notification was sent from the Mobile hospital to his wife, brother, Spurgeon Calloway, and father John Calloway, in Clanton. They left immediately for Mobile to see him.

They were permitted to bring him home Saturday. Since he came home he has been under treatment of local doctors and it is said this week that he is improving favorably.

For several weeks past Mr. Calloway has been working for the State as mechanic at a road building camp in Mobile County. He is a well-known automobile mechanic, who has worked at his trade here for many years past. He has many friends who hope that he will soon be able to get out and go back to his work.

LAWLEY NEWS

The W. M. S. of Rehoboth Baptist Church now has twenty members. Fourteen were present at the regular meeting on the first Sunday afternoon. An interesting and impressive missionary program was rendered.

Mrs. J. S. Dunlap is now chairman of program committee, and this committee is doing some splendid work in preparing the programs. If the women of this church will only cooperate with their leader, Mrs. Perry Hicks, great things will be accomplished during the new year.

Mrs. Robert Yarn, leader of the Junior B. Y. P. U., entertained at her home last Saturday afternoon at a social. Most all the members of the Junior union were present. The sun was shining so warm, that many outdoor games were enjoyed by the children, after which cake and hot chocolate was served. The children had a grand time, and they will never forget this hospitality shown them by their leader, Mrs. Yarn. This community is indeed very fortunate in having Mrs. Yarn as the children's leader, because she has this particular work ever on her mind, and really loves the children, wants to see them trained for noble leadership which will be theirs in the future.

The P.-T. A. here will have a fish supper at the school house next Saturday night. A big plate will sell for 25 cents, which will be worth lots more. Chicken will be furnished those who do not like fish, so everybody is invited. The money from the sale of the plates will go for the benefit of the school.

This community is really proud of their literary teachers, Mr. Harry Raley, Mrs. Virginia Jones and Mrs. Sarah Cottingham. For they are doing everything possible for the betterment of Lawley school.

Mr. Lum Hicks is now operating his saw mill here, which gives work to several men who really need the work.

Rev. John W. Dean, pastor of Rehoboth Church, preached two very inspiring sermons last first Sunday. This church now has a monthly printed bulletin, for which we are very grateful.

In all the organizations of this church, many great improvements have been made since Rev. Dean has been pastor. The church is now going forward in a great way.

Everybody remember the fish supper Saturday night, January 17th, at Lawley school.

At the request of Dr. Jackson he was elected an associate member of the Association.

Dr. Frank Willis Barnett, of the Birmingham News, was present and made a splendid talk on the necessity of cooperation of the farmer and he stated the desire of the News to work more closely with the farmer, than in past years.

Mr. J. F. Hill of Portland Tennessee was present ready to give the benefit of his long experience in growing, curing and marketing of sweet potatoes.

There was a large representation of farmers present and a great amount of good might result from this meeting. A number of fertilizer people were present, and they appeared to be at a loss as to the probable prices of fertilizer for the spring use.

Rev. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the Methodist Church in Clanton, will preach next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Isabella church, and urges the presence of that community at that time.

Mrs. Tunstall Here In Welfare Work

State Child Welfare Director Gave Inspiring Talk To Over 200 People At Courthouse

The need for everyone working together during these times of depression is very necessasy. Mrs. Tunstall clarly brought out the fact that with our laws as they are at present, our only method of obtaining money for relief is through public subscription and that each community must accept its own burden and all pull together until we can see brighter skies.

There were over 200 people at this meeting which was presided over by Judge Reynolds, who stated the nature of the meeting; and the Child Welfare Superintendent made a report of her year's work. Practically every Beat in the County had one or more representatives present who told of the conditions in their community. Conditions in some localities were worse than others and many were reported in real need; and also many children were reported out of school on account of not having any clothes or books.

The aim of this meeting was to inform the general public of the needs as found in the county and also something of the nature of the work during the past year; also for volunteers in putting over the drive during this and next week for funds for aiding the destitute of the county.

Material was given to volunteers who were asked to act as chairmen of their community to get other helpers they might like to have on their committee to assist them in soliciting money, second-hand clothing, food, etc.

County Agent, C. E. Stapp, stated that Wednesdays will be chicken shipping days and that anyone wishing to give hens may bring or send them to his office and they will be given the best of market prices for them and in doing this the people can be helping the less fortunate of the county.

As these chairmen from the different communities send in the reports, their lists with the subscriber's name and amount will be published in the weekly papers.

The cost is Small Wherever You call

Talking to out-of-town relatives or friends is the most pleasing and satisfactory means of communication. Telephoning is just like being there in person and the cost is surprisingly small. When using Day Station-to-Station service you can talk a distance of one hundred miles for approximately sixty cents and by using the same service after 8:30 at night you can talk that far for as little as thirty-five cents. The cost of talking greater distances is correspondingly small.

People everywhere are daily experiencing enjoyable chats with relatives and friends in other cities. You, too, can afford such pleasures. Remember "the cost is small wherever you call."

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Rudolph, their little daughter, Helen, and Misses Hulda and Adelaid Rudolph, Mr. Hugo Rudolph's sister, all of Manitowoc, Wisconsin, most pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Howard last week by a call on their way to Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, where they will spend the rest of the winter. Mrs. Rudolph was a neighbor and a school mate of Charlie Howard and his sister, Anna Phalin.

Mrs. Phalin and Tom, of Tuscaloosa, came over to visit with the Rudolph's, as they did not think that they had time to drive to Tuscaloosa. They all had a jolly time talking over childhood and getting reacquainted. It had been 31 years since they had seen each other.

The second number of the Thorsby Institute Lyceum course will be held on Saturday, January 24, at 7:30. It will be the Scottish Concert company. Dr. Ensminger, one of the Trustees, spoke at chapel Thursday morning, as did Dr. Sparks, formerly secretary of the Home Mission Board of the Christian church. Since the merger of the Christian and Congregational Churches, he has been associate secretary with Dr. Dana in the Rural life and church work.

On Friday Dr. Smith and Dr. Baker of the State Department of Education visited the Institute. They expressed themselves as pleased with the school. Dr. Smith said the reason that the inspector did not come around so often that it was not necessary because the school had such a good reputation with the State Department that it has not been thought necessary to visit so often. He was very much interested in the library training Miss Fairbanks gives the pupils. During the year she takes each English class one period a week for six weeks and gives instructions in library work. He said that not many of the high schools of the state do not have a regular librarian or the library facilities. In most schools of the state the teachers have to take turns in taking the library certain periods of the day.

The music recital of the Thorsby Institute will be held the afternoon of January 31 at the dining hall. Further announcement about it will be made later.

Christian Endeavor was held at the Congregational Church January 11, 1931 at 6:30 p.m. The topic was, "My idea of what a young man ought to be." Chivalry, constancy, neatness and cheerfullness were some of the points discussed. The girls lead the discussion. Miss McKee played the violin solo entitley, "Mighty like a Rose." by Nevin."

The topic for next Sunday night will be, "My idea of what a young woman ought to be." All are especially invited.

...SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

By GRACE VIALL GRAY

TASTY LUNCHEON DISH

Something a bit "different" for luncheon is always welcome to the housewife who finds herself getting into a rut in this respect. A happy suggestion is banana fritters served with lemon sauce. They are appetizing and piquant, yet substantial enough to constitute a one-dish meal.

The first step is to make the fritter batter. This is made by beating an egg with two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of melted fat.

Banana Fritters are easily made with self-rising flour. Served with a lemon sauce they make a tasty luncheon dish.

Add two-thirds cupful of milk and one cupful of self-rising flour, sifted once and added slowly.

When the batter is ready, take six well-ripened bananas, remove the skins and fiber, and cut in halves lengthwise and again crosswise, if large. Sprinkle with cinnamon and lemon juice and dip each piece of fruit separately into the batter.

Drop into deep fat hot enough to brown a small cube of bread in one minute. Cook the fritter until a pale brown, then drain on unglazed paper and dust with confectioner's sugar. Serve with lemon sauce.

This sauce is made as follows: two tablespoonfuls of self-rising flour blended with two-thirds cupful of sugar. Add one cupful boiling water slowly, stirring well to prevent lumps from forming. Add the juice and grated rind of half a lemon and cook until the mixture thickens. Serve hot.

Self-rising soft wheat flour is used in these fritters because it is more economical. With it fewer eggs are necessary (use only one egg for each cupful of flour). Besides it is cheaper to have a miller combine the flour salt and baking powder at the mill than for each individual homemaker to do so in the kitchen. The miller gives the user the advantages of wholesale carlot prices on these materials. So self-rising flour is more economical to use in home baking and furthermore the results are more certain.

LUTHER WILLIAMS OPENS STORE AT WEST END

Mr. Luther Williams, well-known young business man of Clanton, has opened up a new grocery store at the Jim Scroggins old stand in West End. Since the fire a few months ago the Scroggins place has been rebuilt, and it makes a nice store.

Luther Williams was formeriy the agent for Shell Gasoline in Clanton. Later he was with Buck Roberts in the Sinclair distribution business. For several years he was with the Brown Oil Company at Montevallo, before that concern sold out to Shell.

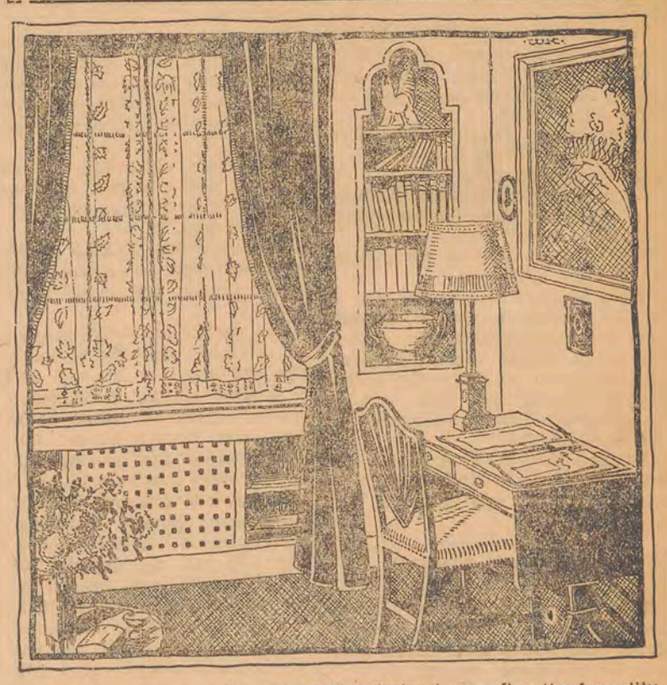
A native of this county, Mr. Williams was reared west of Clanton a few miles. He invites his friends to come to see him in his new store, and of course, if you need groceries, it will be his particular delight to sell them to you.

JOHN T. JONES, DECEASED

On Thursday morning, January 10, the beautiful spirit of John T. Jones, of Plantersville, Alabama, made its flight to the great beyond.

Mr. Jones was a faithful member of the Plantersville Baptist Church. Plantersville has lost one of its best members in losing Mr. Jones. He was ever ready to work and was an efficient assistant Sunday school teacher. As a Christian, Mr. Jones lived it. As a husband the word "faithful" fades into oblivion before the radient light of his service. Every thought and deed was lived for that which was right and for his family. As a husband and father no service was too great for him to render, nor any sacrifice too hard for him to endure.

As a friend he was ready to do any deed of kindness which he could, but being a mail carrier for more than 20 years, he was unable to render the personal service he would like to have done.



He married Miss Maud Vinzant, and to thi sunion there were four children, two boys and two girls, of whom all survive. He leaves to mourn his loss, a wife, four children, one grandson, his aged father and mother, two brothers, and a host of friends and relatives. May they all catch the light of his unbroken trust and as they cross the river, one by one, join him at the pearly gates.

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Bro. A. H. Mahaffey. The following were the Pall Bearers: Messrs. Will Apperson, J. W. Friday, Charlie Levens, O. H. Barnes, Walter Herrod, and Walter Stoudemire. The body was laid to rest in Plantersville cemetery.

Loved ones, weep not for, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."—A friend, Mrs. C. C. Gray.

Mr. Dovard Clackler motored to Montgomery Sunday afternoon.

Style Trend For Windows

Net curtains in a new Georgian period design here soften the formality of the over-draperies and reflect the gracious atmosphere of the room.

THE well-dressed window, like the well-dressed woman, keeps pace with style. And in style details make up the correct whole. In curtains these all-important points are design, color, mesh and arrangement. With these satisfactorily solved, the window becomes, literally, well-dressed.

Heretofore glass curtains have been a difficult problem in carrying out the "period" room treatment. The fact that net curtains are hung straight against the pane stresses the design. If the motif is alien to the furnishings and wall-treatment, it spoils the unity of the room. If it is "just something neutral," the room becomes commonplace.

Net curtains authentically styled to period interiors are now seen in the shops in a considerable variety of designs. The ever-popular Colonial interior, for instance, will be enhanced by curtains featuring historic motifs. A variety of such timely designs have appeared "raught" in a natural color that simulates the unbleached tints associated with those early days. Or for the home in the English country house manner, there are designs in a new shade known as "pongee" to recreate the charm of Georgian days.

The new patterns seem sufficiently varied to meet all tastes and lighting requirements. Where wallpaper of pictorial interest is used, for instance, a more set pattern is required for contrast. For the room where daylight is precious, there are designs in light tracery. Still other patterns grow heavier in design toward the bottom so that an objectionable view may be concealed.

The usual mesh is ten point; that is to say, there are ten threads to the inch.

IN MEMORY OF ORA DEVAUGHN

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Devaughn last Sunday, January 4th, and carried away the spirit of their charming daughter, Ora, to the great beyond. She leaves to mourn her loss, a father, mother, two sisters, and three brothers.

Ora had just reached her 21st year and had always been cheerful and friendly, meeting everybody with a smile. She was also very smart and industrious, carrying on her daily work about the house with a willful mind and never grumbling or complaining. Indeed, to know Ora was to love her. She numbered her friends by her acquaintances. Just why the Lord called her away so young, we can't tell, but doubtless He saw that He could use her better in the heavenly home than here. We believe that the Lord wants the friendly folks like Ora to make up His kingdom, in fact Christ was that way on earth. His enemies thought one of the worst things they could accuse him of was, "He is a friend to the sinners." We are proud of Christ. He did not deny the accusations.

We have evidence that Ora was ready to meet her Lord. She joined the church quite young. While she was sick she made the remark that she would not get well, and didn't seem to dread death.

So weep not for her, dear parents, brothers, sisters and friends, but let's strive to be ready when death calls us away, so we may all meet her in that heavenly city, where all pain, sorrow, grief and dissapointment will forever be past away. All will be joy and peace and happiness forever with the Lord.

The remains were laid to rest the following day, January 5th, at Maple Springs cemetery. Rev. Parrish and Limbrick, officiating.—Her friends, Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Popwell.

Did you ever try Dr. Miles' Nervine? Just two teaspoonfuls in a half glass of water will quiet your over-taxed nerves and bring you a feeling of calm and peace.

SAFE FERTILIZER METHOD URGED FOR THIS SEASON

Recent discoveries reveal that better stands of cotton are obtained when only a small amount of the nitrogen fertilizer is put down at planting time. Heavy applications of fertilizer containing quickly soluable material applied before planting may kill many of the younger plants. As a result, in thousands of fields not enough plants are left to make the crop profitable.

Every successful farmer knows that a uniform stand is the key to growing a profitable crop. Good soil with fertilizer and cultivation cannot do their best work without plenty of plants well distributed over the soil.

Growers cannot avoid the danger of killing the young plants by putting down only a small part of the nitrogen fertilizer at planting time and applying the larger part of it as a side-dressing at the first cultivation after chopping. This method not only assures a better stand, but enables the farmer to withold a part of the fertilizer expense until many of of the weather hazards have passed. Furthermore, experiments and experiences of practical growers have proved it to be the most effective time to apply quick-acting nitrogen to the crop.

The farmer who applies all of the fertilizer at planting takes unnecessary chances over which he has no control, and should the stand be poor he cannot get full returns from the fertilizer. Taking such chances in 1931 is dangerous, and should be avoided by holding back three-fourths of the nitrogen fertilizer and applying it as a side-dressing after a good stand has been assured.

CENTER HILL

The year of 1930 is past and 1931 is here. Let us hope it will be a better year than the one just past. Things look gloomy now. The weather bad, roads bad, lots of sickness and some deaths. They say it is always the darkest just before dawn. Let us hope that the dawning of a brighter time is near.

Mrs. Joseph E. Cobb has been seriously ill at her home but is slowly improving.

Mr. R. H. Long died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jeff Ellison, Sunday, January 4th. His remains were carried to Calera January 5th, where the funeral service was held with burial in Calera cemetery. Mr. Long was well known in Shelby County and the northern part of Chilton County. He was an able writer of the Calera Independent. He leaves to mourn his loss several children and other relatives and a host of friends.

We were made to feel sad when we heard of the death of Mr. Tom Jackson. As he was known far and near as a singer and lover of music. With the passing of Mr. Jackson, is gone one of the best of the old time singers and workers to keep the old time singing going.

And with the passing of Mrs. Susie Johnson of Mars Hill community on December 31, there is another one of the lovers of the music of our forefathers gone. She was loved by all who knew her.

Mr. Bernice Childress is ill at his home with measles.

Mr. B. L. Cobb, justice of the peace, is kept real busy with his justice work. Mr. Cobb says he has about 15 cases set for the 15 and 16.

Remember the cooperative singing society meets with Mars Hill next Sunday afternoon if the weather will permit. The society meets as follows: First Sunday, Oak Grove; second Sunday, Providence; third Sunday, Mars Hill; fourth Sunday, Center Hill.

CHEVROLET MOTOR CO. HAS MUCH INCREASED OUTPUT

December production of the Chevrolet Motor Company was 64,018 cars and trucks, more than twice the 26,000 units built last December and by a wide margin the biggest twelfth-month in the company's history, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, announced here today upon his arrival for the opening of the automobile show.

Employment of the company, which has registered gains since the introduction of the 1931 models in Novemebr, stood at 32,101 for the week ended December 27, a gain of 347 over the previous week, Mr. Knudsen stated. During the current month the employment figure is expected to climb to 40,000 men, Chevrolet's normal operating force.

December is the second successive month to register a new high production figure, November with an output of 45,000 Chevrolets exceeding all previous Novembers. The January schedule calls for the manufacture of 70,500 units and the tentative figure set for February, despite the short month, stands at 70,400 sixes, according to the Chevrolet executive.

When production of the 1931 models got under way, employment in the manufacture division of the company was 26,000, Mr. Knudsen stated. Since that time old employees have been added gradually, and with nearly 10,000 more scheduled to get back to work in January, all regular employees will be back on the job.

Mr. Knudsen said that the increase in production schedules is predicted on the highly gratifying reception of the 1931 cars, as is evidenced by the demands of dealers for cars for immediate delivery.

MT. PLEASANT WINS OVER COLLINS CHAPEL

The Mt. Pleasant basket ball team won a rather one-sided victory over the Collins Chapel boys last Friday. 26 to 10 being the final score.

The Chapel boys played hard and earnestly, but their pass work and defensive playing was not strong enough to cope with the swifter Mt. Pleasant boys.

Both teams committed several fouls, but fortunately no player was eliminated.

Curtis Traywick, the clever little forward for Mt. Pleasant again played a great game, netting the ball for 17 points. Burnett, his running team-mate looped the ball for 5 points Littlejohn, center for the winners, succeeded in getting most of the tip-offs. H. Bean was high scorer for the losing team.

Mt. Pleasant plays Stanton Jr High next Friday, January 16, on the Mt. Pleasant court. The teams are evenly matched and the game promises to be a thriller. Everybody come.

C. E. Stapp went to Demopolis Tuesday in the interest of the work of the Kiwanis. He stopped at Selma on his return Tuesday afternoon and attended a district meeting in the interest of the Boy Scout work.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

Beginning January 14 and extending through the 24th, the annual mid-term examinations will be in progress. Much midnight oil is being burned these nights in preparation for the examinations. Oh, for a life free from examinations! Such is the sigh of many men and women, but as we all know, classes must go on, and also the examinations.

Graduation exercises will be held on January 24th, when some hundred degrees will be awarded.

The end of examinations will be celebrated with the mid-term dances given by the Cotillion Club, January 26-27-28, with Jimmie Green's Chicago orchestra furnishing the music.

Kennamer May Be Made U. S. Judge

Alabama Delegation Vivist Washington to Push Attorney's Nomination

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.—Republican hosts of Alabama Tuesday gathered in Washington in a drive for appointment of Charles B. Kennamer as United States Judge for the Middle District.

Headed by Dr. J. C. Swann, customs collector at Mobile and chairman of the Republican State Committee, a delegation called in turn upon Charles P. Sisson, assistant attorney general in charge of appointments; Walter Newton, secretary to the president and President Hoover himself.

Judge D. D. Street, Republican National Committeeman, who has been the foremost applicant for the middle District judgeship which has been vacant since the death of Judge Henry D. Clayton 13 months ago, has eliminated himself from the picture and has thrown his support behind C. B. Kennamer, now district attorney of the Northern District.

Once before, last spring, Judge Street became convinced he could not obtain the appointment and endorsed Kennamer only to reenter the contest last summer with bright prospects for landing the office.

It has become evident in the last two months, however, that, owing to opposition from some members of his own party in Alabama and to his age, Judge Street cannot get the nomination. But he remains in high favor with the administration and it is extremely doubtful that anyone can obtain the judgeship without his endorsment.

Though he may be able to land the post for Kennamer, that remains to be seen, for there was considerable opposition to Kennamer's confirmation for another term as district attorney a year ago.

Nevertheless, whoever is named Federal judge must bear the stamp of Judge Street's approval.

Owing to the illness in his family, Judge Street did not accompany the delegation pushing Kennamer's name at the White House and at the Department of Justice Tuesday. Kennamer was in Washington but naturally did not accompany his fellow Republicans in their visit to endorse him for the judgeship.

Besides Dr Swann, the delegation was composed of Judge J. B. Weaver of Double Springs, probate judge of Winston County; J. A. Stafford, of Mobile, marshal of the Southern District; H. G. Ashley, of Ashville; B. L. Noojin, of Gadsden; Douglas Smith, of Montgomery; J. F. Braunin postmaster at Andalusia; Judge W. A. Claridy, of Wedowee, probate judge of Randolph County; R. S. Carledge, postmaster at Mobile; J. T. Johnson of Oneonta; Alex C. Birch, of Mobile, district attorney for the Southern division; J. G. Bass, postmaster at Birmingham, and his son, J. N. Bass.—Montgomery Advertiser.

IN MEMEORY OF MISS THERESE ELAINE FRANZ

Theresa Elaie Franz was born near Nashville, Tennesse, June 20, 1917, and died January 10th, 1931, in Clanton, Alabama. She was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Franz, the Treasurer of the Alabama Conference of Seventh Day Adventists and is survied by her parents, one brother and two sisters. Theresa possessed a most cheerful and lovable disposition, and was the most helpful and industrious child that it has ever been the joy of the writer to meet. With her, performance of a task was a pleasure. She was a zealous little Christian and her daily life was faithfulness itself. At the time of her death, she had over a five year record of unbroken daily study of her Sabbath school lesson and attendance at sunday school was nearing her sixth year goal.

We bow our heads and hearts at the action of the grim reaper, and we thank God that He was so kind as to give us such a treasure to love and enjoy for over thirteen years, and our hearts go out to Him in the deepest gratitude that in that not far distant future we shall meet her again, glorified with wonderous immortality, endowed with a life that measures with the life of God.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Pastor Wayne B. White of Birmingham and a quartet of good singers from the S. D. A. church of that place.

In counting all the precious boons
With which the feast of life is spread,
O let us not forget that chief
Among our treasure is our dead.
Let us give thanks that they have lived
And our lives such radiance poured,
That with sunshine of the past,
Our later, lonelier years are stored.
And that removed from longed share
In these brief festivals of earth,
We feel their living presence still,
The angels of our home and hearth.
A light surpassing sun or star,
A breath more sweet than bursting flowers,
The ministry of a child so loved,
Asleep in Jesus, and yet forever ours.

—A. B. Russell.

MRS. SARAH SUSAN MULLINS DIED

Mrs. Sarah Susan (Robinson) Mullins, age 82 years, died at her home at Jumbo Sunday night, after an illness of several weeks. She was the wife of the late Oliver Mullins, who died May 4, 1928.

Burial was at the Mullins cemetery, near the home, Tuesday morning, in charge of Mell Martin. The funeral was conducted by Rev. S. J. Ezell, assisted by Rev. W. P. Lowery.

Mrs. Mullins is survived by two sons, C. Reese Mullins, of Clanton, and O. R. Mullins, who lives at the home of his father and mother. There are two sons deceased. They were Tipton Mullins and Ross Mullins, both of whom were prominent in business and professional circles of Clanton.

Two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Mullins survive. They are Mrs. J. C. Jones, of Clanton, and Mrs. Ruth Kate Shepherd, of Birmingham.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Mullins is one of the of the most prominent in the history of Chilton County. Mr. Mullins was himself a man of great worth in his lifetime. He was possessed of unusual talents, an honored leader among his neighbors and associates, and always a champion of the higher and nobler ideals of life.

The sons of this family have made a lasting mark in the past history of our county. The oldest, the late lamented Tipton Mullins, was for many years one of the most brilliant lawyers of Chilton County. He was truly a great man. C. Reese Mullins has been a prominent and influential business man and citizen of Clanton since reaching the years of young manhood. Another son, Ross Mullins, died a few years ago when he was in the bloom of a successful career as a merchant and business man of Clanton. The youngest son, Reed Mullins, has remained at the old home of his parents, engaged in the noble and sacrificial labor love, taking care of his mother and father in their declining years.

Lawrence Urges Attendance At Farm Meeting

My attention has been called to a meeting to be held at Clanton on Tuesday morning, January 20th at 10:00 o'clock for the purpose of discussing better methods of farming and farm management.

Our county agent is doing all that he can to improve farm conditions in Chilton County, but his efforts will succeed only in the proportion of cooperation received from the farmers and business men, including bankers, of the county.

If farming has been a losing proposition and we must live from the farm, some sort of change must be had from our old way of doing things. This is an agricultural county and if agriculture fails, the county fails. We must confess that some men have made money farming.

Much has been said recently about the aid the Federal Farm Board will be able to give. At this meeting we will have an opportunity to find out more about this, and it is hoped that every farmer in the county will avail himself of the opportunity and as stated above we hope that the business men of the county will attend. If there is something better than we have been having we need it. Let us give the county agent and other men who are seeking to help us an opportunity.

Trusting that the year 1931 will be a better year for the county than we have had in the year just gone by, I am, yours very truly.

B. LAWRENCE.

NOTICE

On Sunday, January 18, 1931, the roll will be called of the members of Walnut Creek Church. All the members that possibly can are requested to be present.

TO MY GOOD FRIENDS

Of all the great surprises I have ever had in my life, here is one which beats them all. The radio which my good friends gave me last week; something that I will never forget if I live a thousand years. And so I take this way of thanking all my good and thoughtful friends for such a wonderful gift, so appreciable that even words in the dictionery cannot express how much I have and will enjoy it. I would like to thank each one who contributed individually, but the doctors orders keep me home so I would be glad for every one to come out and enjoy the radio with me some time. And as I tune in I will think of each one of you good friends and what your thoughtfulness has brought and meant to me. I especially want to thank Mr. Edward Howard who has taken so much of his valuable time installing and seeing that the machine was in perfect shape. He is certainly a real radio expert.—Robert C. Here's your Chick insurance

Jazz ALL MASH STARTER

ONE FEED
ONE BAG
ONE COST

WITH COD LIVER OIL and DRIED BUTTERMILK

The money you paid for those chicks . . . and the money you expect to make out of them . . . both depends on the care and feed they get now!

There is no chance to go wrong now on feeding. When you start your first hatch on Jazz All Mash Starter you know your chicks are getting MASH and GRAIN in exactly the right proportion. The two are scientifically balanced and blended in one bag!

You know that each mouthful contains ANIMAL proteins and from the right source . . . dried buttermilk.

That's real protection . . . real insurance . . . but it isn't all:

You know that each day your chicks are getting plenty of LIQUID SUNSHINE from pure refined Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. And you know why liquid sunshine is so important . . . there's Vitamin "A" in it to make them grow . . . and its rich content of Vitamin "D" is the best preventative known for rickets.

And no wonder they relish it . . . Jazz All Mash Starter is as fresh, tasty and nutritious as many foods served on your own table. There's a Jazz dealer near you. Ask him for our new booklet, "Proteins and Profits," which gives complete feeding directions.

Fresh Tasty! Nutritious! With these ingredients no wonder they relish it: Dried buttermilk, ground No. 2 wheat, pure ground oat groats, mixture of ground No. 2 yellow corn, gray wheat shorts, 1½ per cent sterilized pure bone meal, pure refined cod liver oil, 1 per cent charcoal and ½ of 1 per cent salt.

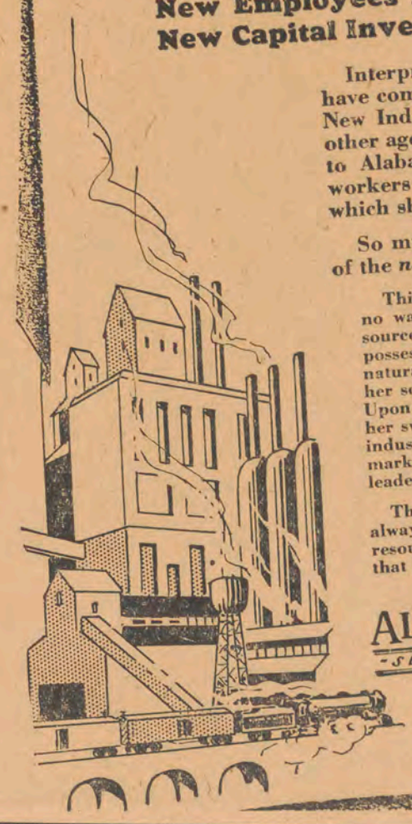
an ENCOURAGING INVENTORY

THIS is inventory time—the month when business checks up on past achievements and takes stock of present resources to appraise future prospects.

Following the customary plan of business, let's take an inventory now of Alabama's past achievements, and present resources and seek to appraise Alabama's future prospects.

To make a true accounting of Alabama's progress, we must go back not one year but six—to 1925—the year that marked the real beginning of Alabama's recent era of industrial expansion and the year that also saw the formation of this company's New Industries Division.

Alabama's inventory for this six year period 1925-1930 would read about like this:



New Industries Established 136
New Employees in New Plants 24,319
New Capital Invested in Industry $68,000,000

Interpreted, these figures mean that new plants which have come into our state thru efforts of this company's New Industries Division, Chambers of Commerce and other agencies, have added nearly $25,000,000 annually to Alabama's buying power by putting 25,000 more workers on plant payrolls. This is an amazing record which should bring a thrill of pride to every citizen.

So much for the past. What of the present? What of the next six years?

This depression, from which Alabama is emerging, has in no way impaired or reduced the fundamental, bed rock resources on which past progress has been built. Alabama still possesses an illimitable and virtually untouched wealth of natural resources, the greatest possibly of any state. Beneath her soil are many million tons of coal and ore and limestone. Upon her hills and plains are many million feet of timber. In her swift flowing streams lies the energy to turn the wheels of industry and bear the products of her factories and farms to market and among her citizens are men with qualities of leadership to direct the march of progress.

These are Alabama's stock in trade. It is a stock which is always in demand. During these next six years these natural resources will be in greater demand than ever before. And that means inevitable progress and increased prosperity.

Bilious, Dizzy, Drowsy Feeling

"WHEN I was a child, if I did not feel well, or if I had a cold, my mother gave me Black-Draught," says Mrs. Orpha Hill, of Wofford, Ky. "When I was married, it became a family medicine in my own home, as it was in my mother's.

"I take it for headache and especially for constipation. When I get bilious, my skin gets yellow and I have a very bad taste in my mouth, and a drowsy feeling all during the day. My eyes burn and I get dizzy, or my head is 'swimming.' When I take Black-Draught, it seems to drive the impurities out of my system and I feel fine. I am seldom without this reliable remedy."

if "Nobody Works but Ol' Man River"

Or A Gas Pipe Line —from Louisiana

What Will Happen to the Payrolls Which Have Made Alabama Prosperous?

"VISIT a great hydro-electric plant and the first thing that will strike you," says a recent advertisement of the General Electric Company, "is the astonishing absence of people. Alone, almost unwatched, the water flows, the great turbines revolve. Nobody works, apparently, except Ol' Man River." With equal force it might be said, that when a natural gas pipe line is once laid, few people work, except the meter readers who collect the toll and send it from the state.

Alabama's greatest worry now is this very fact that so many of her citizens are not working, because they can't find work to do. And Alabama's greatest need is payrolls and MORE PAYROLLS. More people working! More people earning! More people spending! When "nobody works" we have hard times.

Normally Alabama's coal and coke industry employs more people, and creates larger payrolls than any single industry in Alabama.

ALABAMA'S COAL AND COKE INDUSTRY NORMALLY EMPLOYS ABOUT 28,500 PEOPLE and indirectly furnishes steady work at good pay to many thousand railway operatives who haul this coal and coke from mine and oven to the market. And work for brick, cement, lumber, iron and steel industries which manufacture products that the coal and coke industries use. And work for the farmer, who finds his best home market in the coal fields of the state!

Whether you are head of an Industry or Home, you can do your part to help relieve Alabama unemployment by using that fuel which creates the most employment for the most Alabama people—Alabama Coal or Alabama Coke.

This is No. 5 of a series of advertisements published by Alabama Coal and Coke Producers.

POWER COMPANY'S BUDGET 10 MILLION

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 31.—The Alabama Power Company will expend approximately $10,000,000 in Alabama in its 1931 construction and operation program. Thomas W. Martin, president, announced here today. The extension of transmission and distribution systems for the connection of new customers and communities will absorb the bulk of the $5,000,000 set aside for construction purposes.

The remaining $5,000,000 will be expended for operation. Including materials, supplies, wages and taxes.

"Our construction and operating budgets for 1931 have been established as essential to provide adequate and efficient service to our customers," Mr. Martin stated. "In addition, we plan to sell increased amounts of preferred stock, electric equipment, and electric service to the people of Alabama. This, we believe is tangible and substantial evidence of our faith in the soundness of conditions in the state, and of our feeling that 1931 will bring an improvement in the business situation," continuing, Mr. Martin said: "We will still pursue our policy which has been followed since the organization of the company of purchasing Alabama materials and supplies where practicable. By far the greater part of our expenditures in 1931 will therefore be made in Alabama."

MEETING JANUARY 20

Farmers Will Discuss Safe Program For Year 1931

On January 20th, at 10 o'clock there will be a county-wide meeting held at the courthouse in Clanton, Alabama.

The object of this meeting will be to discuss a safe farming program for 1931, and to have a discussion by a representative of the Bureau of Economics of Washington on the farming outlook for 1931. County Agent Stapp attended a conference along this line at Auburn, December 29th and 30th, and reports that outlook and discussions would indicate very little possibility of farmers making more than a mere living in 1931, and this being true every farmer should begin planning to make plenty of food for the family and feed stuff for the livestock.

Farmers, merchants, bankers and all others interested in the agricultural outlook for 1931 are urged to attend this meeting on the 20th and see what the probable cotton price will be next year.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, LAST DAY TO PAY TELEPHONE FEES

Saturday, January 17th has been set as the final day for the payment of central fees to the Peoples Telephone Company. The central operator, Mr. Lomer Giles, is giving good service, and if the people will fix up the lines and pay the fee, the service is here for you. Of course, service cannot be given with the lines down and buried up in the mud.

The above date gives two Saturdays; so this is enough time for all to pay up. Don't put it off until the last day, for you may not be able to come to town then. Attend to it at your first convenience.

No one who has not paid his central fee will be let through the central after January 17th. The fee is very reasonable this time, and everyone can surely arrange to pay by Saturday week. If you do not pay by that time, please be so kind as to cut your phone from the line until you do pay; and do not sponge on your neighbor by asking him do your telephoning.

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:7-20

GOLDEN TEXT—Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and John the Baptist.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and John the Baptist.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Courageous Reformer.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Message of John the Baptist.

I. The Degeneracy of the Times (vv. 1, 2).

The Jews had sunk to a very low level of civil, moral and religious life. Luke carefully enumerates the civil and religious rulers in order to show the profligacy of the times and therefore the need of a messenger to call the people back to God and virtue. Caesar has been described as "talented, ambitious, cruel, licentious, infamous, inhuman." Civil rule was divided between four of Rome's vassals. Pontius Pilate a little later attained notoriety by unjustly and in a cowardly manner condemning Jesus to death. Herod, the son of Herod the Great, was a murderer. Annas and Caiaphas were corrupt ecclesiastical rulers.

II. The Nature of John's Ministry (vv. 3-6).

Out of the wilderness John flashed forth, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins (v. 3). The baptism was a sign of repentance. His ministry is declared to be a fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy. He is described as one calling upon the nation to prepare for the coming of the Messiah. The only hope for the world is God's salvation through Jesus Christ. The valleys of righteousness need to be filled. The mountains and hills of sin need to be brought low. The crooked ways of commerce need to be straightened, and the rough ways of society and nations need to be smoothed. Let men accept Jesus Christ and all war and contention will end. Men will then love each other.

III. The Content of John's Message (vv. 7-18).

1. A denunciation of sin (vv. 7, 8). He called the people "a generation of vipers." He charged them with being essentially wicked and deceitful. Knowing the subtle hypocrisy of these Jews, he demanded evidence of their sincerity.

2. An announcement of judgment (v. 9.) He declared that the ax was laid at the root of the tree and that the tree not bringing forth fruit was to be hewn down and cast into the fire. John made it very plain that for their sins they should be called into judgment. To be brought face to face with judgment has a sobering effect upon men. Paul's preaching of a judgment to come made Felix tremble (Acts 24:25). While John preached sin and judgment, he accompanied it with the assurance of pardon on condition of repentance.

3. Instructions to the inquirers (vv. 10-14). (1) The people (vv. 10, 11). Each man was to turn from his besetting sin and show love and kindness to his fellow men. Clothing and food were to be given to those who had need. The people were to turn from a life of selfishness and greed and do unto others as they would be done by. (2) Publicans (vv. 12, 13). These taxgatherers who were guilty of greed and oppression were not asked to give up their occupation, but to exact only that which was appointed by law. (3) The soldiers (v. 14). These were probably the policemen of that day, at least men on military duty. They were to refrain from false accusation and doing violence to men, and to be content with their wages.

4. Testimony to Jesus (vv. 15-18). The people were musing in their hearts as to whether John was indeed the Messiah. When John perceived this he, with fine humility, declared that his mission was so lowly by comparison with that of Christ that he would be unworthy to perform the menial act of a slave in loosing the lachet of his shoes. John baptized with water, but Christ would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire.

IV. John's Imprisonment (vv. 19, 20).

Because of his reproof of Herod for his lewdness and other sins, John went to the dungeon and eventually was beheaded. God's faithful prophets are usually despised by the world, and some are even imprisoned, burned, or beheaded.

Faith

It is the wind that carries the ship across the waves; but the wind is powerless unless the hand of the boatman is held firmly upon the rudder, and that rudder is set hard against the wind. This is the attitude of steadfast faith to divine omnipotence. We hold the rudder; God fills the sails. It is not the rudder that carries the ship, but it is the rudder which catches the wind which carries the ship. And so God keeps us in perfect peace while we are stayed in him.—A. B. Simpson.

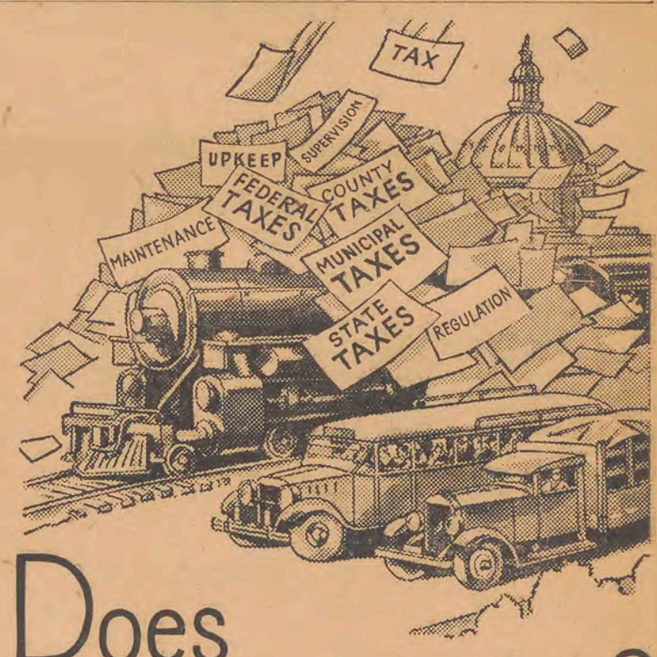
Have you passed the noonday of Life ?



Then make the down road happy by keeping your strength and health. An unfailing warning of a rundown condition is the diminishing of the red-blood-cells.

A DEFICIENCY of red-cells in the blood is usually followed by physical exhaustion, loss of appetite, underweight, nervousness and pimples and boils. When your red-blood-cells are only 80% you are NOT yourself—60% is very dangerous. Common sense suggests that every possible step be taken to correct such a condition. Take S.S.S. before each meal. It will build up and enrich your blood, give you new life and vitality! Your appetite will pick up—you will feel like yourself again! Keep the down road bright by keeping your red-blood-cells fighting for you. Get the large size. At all drug stores.

THE OLD RELIABLE L&N (LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R.R.)

Over 22%, or $403,000,000, of the net revenue from the operation of the United States railroads in 1929 was paid into the public treasuries in the form of taxes.

In addition, 13.6%, or $855,000,000, of the gross receipts of the railroads was spent to maintain their own private roadways in order that the public might travel in greater comfort and ship with greater safety.

These huge sums were exclusive of the interest on the heavy investment in these properties—roadway, rails, ties, buildings, etc.—that the railroads built at their own expense.

Compare these amounts with those paid by busses and trucks engaged in common-carrier service directly in competition with the railroads. Unlike the railroads, they do not contribute adequately in taxes to the support of our courts, schools, and other public institutions. They do not share properly in the cost of construction and upkeep of the highways. Generally they select their class of traffic and assess their own rates, and are virtually free from the exacting requirements as to supervision of their operations, etc., now imposed on the railroads by government and state authorities.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

Such a situation is manifestly unfair and unjust and unless corrected will seriously impair one of the nation's most vital instruments of progress. Common equity demands that the thoughtful consideration of the public be given to these problems so that efficient railroad transportation may be sustained. All the railroads want or can reasonably ask for is a field of endeavor that affords equal opportunity for all.

REYNOLDS REPLY TO MIMS LETTER

Probate Judge Gives Explanation of Ballot Question

Editor Union-Banner:

The long letter of Mr. J. Z. Mims in last week's paper prompts me to make another statement in regard to his actions as manager of the Republican Campaign in Chilton County last fall. What I shall say here will be somewhat a repetition of my explanation of the question that was raised about the printing of the ballots and not so much an attempt to answer the long letter of Mr. Mims in last week's paper. The statements of Mr. Mims last week do not deny the law and practice that has been observed in the conduct of our campaigns in former years.

In my letter to the Union-Banner of October 23, 1930, I proved by the records on file in my office that Mr. Mims. as chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee had not complied with the law in making the necessary filing of papers in the Probate office, as he himself and others in like capacity had done in campaigns in previous years. I feel now that my proof of Mr. Mims' failure in that respect was sufficient for anyone. In fact, I take it that it was sufficient for Mr. Mims himself, inasmuch as he does not make any denial or explanation, or raise any question as to my position on this matter. In his letter of last week, he simply excuses himself and asks the people who might be concerned about this question to likewise excuse him on the ground that his failure to comply with the law and the former practice was justified because he did not remember.

At the outset I wish to make it clear to those who read this that last October I was engaged in performing my duty under the law in running the business of the office of Judge of Probate of Chilton County. Mr. Mims at the same time was supposed to have been looking after his duties as Chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee in Chilton County. The candidates had appointed him as chairman, and as such he was charged with the duty of seeing that the candidates had properly qualified and of looking after the question of filing the papers within the proper time and especially the duties concerning which this squabble has come about. When I commenced to get the material together to prepare the ballots, as the law charges me, I then discovered that this declaration had not been filed by either political party, and as I have done hundreds of times before in my office, I submitted this matter to the Attorney General of Alabama for his opinion. When it appeared that his opinion would be against placing the candidates upon the ticket it was then that I came to Mr. Mims the very same day and submitted the matter to him and told him that we had better get some attorneys and all parties interested and go to Montgomery and submit this matter to the Attorney General and see if his opinion could be changed. Mr. Mims insinuates that I did not tell him of this matter until a late date. I told him of the same just as soon as I came from Montgomery, and as I have already explained, the next day was the first day that I could commence under the law to print the ballots, and if Mr. Mims had known of the matter even for several weeks prior to this then under the law the situation would not have been changed.

I readily agree with you that as regards this newspaper controversy, it is quite foolish. However, I have always taken my duties in office seriously and I hope that you took your duties as Chairman of the Campaign Committee seriously. There can be no denial of the fact that you were charged more with the duty of seeing declarations filed than any other person in the county, except possibly the candidates themselves, and even they placed their case in your hands for proper management. Now when the proper paper was not filed and I went to you concerning this matter, the point that I am now resenting and that I resented in my former article, was the insinuations cast around by several, and I am reliably informed by you that I was the person who had failed to perform a duty. It seemed to me to be a case of your failure to perform a duty you were charged with and then you try to pass the responsibility on me. Of course, I realize that you, as Chairman, did not desire to be held responsible for the probable results of what this failure might have been. However, I think when you met that night and heard other insinuations cast which attempted to hold

"WHAT IS IN MAN" AND "YESTERDAY, TODAY, AND TOMORROW"

Rev. J. Robert Bean of Bessemer will fill his regular appointment at Friendship church next Sunday and Sunday night. His subject for the 11 o'clock service will be "What is in Man?" At 6:30 Sunday evening he will talk on the subject: "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

Brother Bean wishes to say to the church, and community: "Please make an effort to attend both services, and pray earnestly for me, that I may preach the Gospel in such a way that someone will hear and believe, and also that the church may be edified. If I preach the Gospel tell everybody, if I fail, tell me.—J. Robert Bean."

CENTRAL SINGERS MEET NEXT SUNDAY P. M. AT FRIENDSHIP

The Central Singing Siciety will meet in its regular session next Sunday afternoon at Friendship Church, near Clanton. It is hoped that a large crowd will be present. Singing will begin at 1:30, or as early thereafter as possible. Don't stand back on bad weather, for there will be singing unless it is extremely bad.

Last Sunday was disagreeable to be out, nevertheless the singing at Maple Springs was right good. The members of the Central Singing Society believe in carrying on, and nothing ordinary is going to interfere with them. Luck, if there is such a thing, has been with us during the nearly five months that the society has been functioning, as not a single Sunday afternoon has been missed. We hope to continue this way—only we expect to improve all along.

Try and meet us next Sunday afternoon at Friendship. If you are a singer, we need you, and if you are an interested listener, we will be glad to have you.

NEW COMMISSIONERS TAKE OFFICE

Two new county commissioners took their places on the board Monday. They are Uncle Jim Mims of the Second District, succeeding T. A. Maddox; and Joseph E. Cobb of the First District, succeeding John Bean.

The two new members sat with the court in a business session the first of this week.

It is not exactly correct to say that Uncle Jim Mims is a new commissioner. He has served on this job one term in the past, and it is not a new experience for him. Mr. Cobb has never held public office before.

Both are Republicans, who were elected last November. They are good men, and the people of Chilton County feel that the county's business will be well administered from their hands.

TELEPHONE THE SHERIFF

It may be of interest to the people over the county to know that Sheriff Gillespie has already had installed in his home a Peoples telephone. So anyone wishing to get in touch with him may do so over the Peoples system. Mr. Gillespie says that he hopes to have a phone put in his office at the courthouse also in the near future. There is Bell connection with the Sheriff also.

Dudley Collins Goes Back To His Farm

Bought Two Fine Horses and Gave Up Sheriff's Office Happy

Dudley Collins was right ready to go back to farming, just as soon as he delivered the Sheriff's office over to Mr. Gillespie Monday at noon. He had waiting for him at that time two of the finest kind of black horses, which arriyed here from Montgomery Monday morning.

Mr. Collins appeared much relieved and very much pleased to get out of the Sheriff's office and headed back toward the farm. He has one of the finest farms in Chilton County, right close to Clanton, and another large tract down in Beat 16, which he expects to develop and improve in the future.

He has held office in Chilton County for several years in the past. But all the while he has carried on extensive operations. His success in both official acts and farming business has been noteworthy.

At the time he delivered the office over to Mr. Gillespie, he also turned over the keys to the jail, moved out of the Sheriff's house next to the jail, and drove off with the horses and household goods, back to the farm, evidently a very happy man, with great hopes for the future.

International Harvester Co. Celebrating 100th Anniversary of McCormick Reaper

Arrangements Being Made For Entertaining Farmers of Chilton County At Clanton. Date and Other Details Will Be Announced Right Away

One hundred years ago, 1831, Cyrus Hall McCormick invented and successfully tried the world's first reaper at Steel's Tavern, Virginia. It was to us of the present day a very crude affair, but really contained practically every basic principle of the present grain or hay machines. The invention of the reaper stands along with Eli Whitney's invention, the cotton gin, as one of the basic patents of agriculture. After the reaper, if not directly from it came the long line of machines whereby agriculture has been changed from the sheerest drudgery to the greatest of all industries—the machines that have conquered wilderness and desert, built new empires, founded new civilizations, set millions of men free to create new industries, converted yesterday's luxury into today's commonplace of comfort.

Historians have hailed the invention of the reaper as a prime factor in the great westward movement, the development of transportation, and the great industrial revolution. This revolution swept the United States and the world. Millions of people were enabled to leave their farms,, settle new territory, and build great cities. The percentage of persons engaged in agriculture to the total population gainfully employed has decreased from about 80 per cent during 1831 to less than 2 per cent at the present date, which indicates clearly the increase in the producing ability of the average farmer. One readily realizes that this offers the opportunity for the remaining population to engage in the development and production of the many comforts and luxuries now enjoyed by all of us.

Throughout the United States and the world the International Harvester Company and distributors of their products are celebrating this advent which has meant so much to civilization. At certain points in every state and county special programs commemorating the invention of the reaper are being planned. Representatives of the International Harvester Company are at this time contmeplating such a program at Clanton, in cooperation with the local McCormick-Deering dealer, C. E. Hornsby. If the plans contemplated are carried out with respect to Clanton, the program will consist of motion pictures, short instructive talks by officials of the Harvester Company and others. They would also have on display an exact reproduction of the original reaper.

More detailed announcement as to the date and place for the proposed meeting will be made at an early date.

The following is the tentative program which will be followed in carrying out the celebration proposed for Clanton:

10:00—Introduction. (a) Short talk by County Agent. (b) County Agent to introduce dealer. (c) Dealer to introduce Branch Manager or assistant Branch Manager of International Harvester Company.

10:15—Talk, invention of the reaper, by Branch Manager or assistant Branch Manager.

10:45—Film, romance of the reaper.

11:35—Registration of farmers and distribution of centennial medallion souvenirs.

11:50—Announcement of lunch by dealer.

12:00—Lunch.

1:00—Film, power farming in the South; preliminary remarks by O. I. Cunningham, advertising man, International Harvester Company.

1:40—Talk, importance of after sales service, by E. L. Freeman, service manager, Birmingham branch, International Hervester Company.

2:00—Adjournment to dealer's store for open discussion on care, adjustment and operation of machines, especially power farm machines.

High Spots in Miller's Inaugural Address

"The sunlight of prosperity will soon appear through the clouds of adversity if we will all work and pull together and have faith, hope and charity."

"There should be neither deadheads nor semi-deadheads on the state pay roll; the barnacles on the ship of state should be scraped off."

"The imperative duty placed by the Democratic voters of Alabama rests on the state officials, elected by popular vote, to see that their offices and departments are run economically, efficiently and without useless employes and deadheads. I am confident this splendid State Legislature will secure it by necessary legislation and patriotic state officials will lend their strong hands to insure the desired results."

"To obtain permanent results I shall recommend to the Legislature the enactment of the necessary laws to enable a scientific study and survey by experts in government and the results of such study of our government to be laid before the Legislature for its consideration."

"A big corporation that functions with success has only one head to which all the subordinates are administratively responsible. If Alabama as a government succeeds financially in its executive department, it must conform to and be governed by business principles."

"The children of Alabama must be educated. The school terms must be lengthened so they will be uniform and of the same length for all children as far as practical."

"The educational trust fund created by statute and raised by taxation for the benefit of the schools and children of Alabama must be decreased. The funds thus raised for education must be increased, not by additional taxation, but by abolishing every useless office, discharging each unnecessary employe of the state and by appropriating salaries given them to the children of Alabama."

"Good roads are a public necessity. The great trunk highways commenced, running north and south, and east and west, should be completed, if practicable, with federal funds now available. The patch system therein should be cut out and at least two or more highways completely paved now."

"The 2-cent gasoline tax, given to the counties should be used exclusively for road building or road maintenance."

"The convict lease system should not be restored. Road construction by convicts in different counties should be encouraged."

"Taxation has reached the maximum."

"The prohibition laws in Alabama are second to none in the Union. Prohibition is no experiment. It is a noble principle written permanently in our national constitution and on our state statutes. They should not be weakened."

"No law can be enforced by any official with good results when he, by his words or by his acts, aids or abets violation thereof."

"Sheriffs are elected to enforce the law. That is their prime duty and the burden is on them. Why should we employ expensive law enforcement officers to do what the statutes and the constitution require of the sheriffs? Discharge the expensive, unnecessary state law enforcing officers. Abolish one set and require performance of duty by the others."

"A majority rule by the double primary should be restored by statute to the Democratic party in Alabama."

"Confederate soldiers deserve and should receive our love and care, attention and maintenance as they make their final march to their great reward."

"New industries within and from without the state should be encouraged and invited to locate in Alabama."

TELEPHONE BOARD OF DIRECTORS WELL PLEASED WITH CONDITIONS

The Board of Directors of the Peoples Telephone Company met in a called meeting in Clanton Tuesday of this week. After attending to some business matters, the Board took a kind of view of conditions of the system, and expressed themselves as very much pleased with the prospects of the company for the coming year.

More work has been done on the lines in the country for the past three weeks than has been done before in three years; and people are now able to get central service who have not used their phones in months. Phoneholders on other lines are now engaged in getting their phones and lines in order. New posts have been purchased by the company to be used inside the corporate limits of Clanton, and Mr. Lome Giles ,the linesman and operator, is working on the lines in Clanton and getting them in better shape.

Several paid up their dues last week; but there are still others who need to pay. After last Saturday, if you have not paid your central fees, you will not be allowed service through the central; so the Board of Directors urges all phone holders to pay your fees at once, so that you may get a full year's service.

O. R. ROBINSON, President.
T. E. WYATT, Secretary.

ERNEST MOORE HAS BOUGHT OUT THE WATKINS CAFE

Mr. Ernest Moore, well-known and experienced cafe operator has bought out the Watkins Cafe, near the courthouse, and took charge of the operations of the place Monday of this week.

Mr. Moore extends an invitation to his friends all over Chilton County to come to his place to eat when they are in Clanton. He will make special arrangements to take care of the needs of the people who have occasion to come to court. His place is near the courthouse, and is the handiest place for the courthouse visitors to eat.

The service will be anything that you can ask for, and above all, Mr. Moore assures the public that he will put out something good to eat.

SENATOR HEFLIN'S DROUGHT RESOLUTION

The following is Senator Heflin's resolution which passed the Senate January 15th directing the Secretary of Agriculture to use the money appropriated for drought relief in all counties where relief is needed. The fund to be used among families in counties where the drought was not general the same as in counties where the drought was general.

Resolved, that the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby notified that when the Senate voted for the drought relief measure it was the intent and purpose that the funds so provided would be used to afford relief to all families suffering from the drought, whether they live in counties where suffering is general and where there is great distress and destitution, or in counties where the distress caused by the drought is not general.

Resolved further, that it is the sense of the Senate that the relief here provided should be granted wherever the conditions and facts justify it, and the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby requested to see that that is done.

Walter Gillespie Is Now Sheriff Here

James Gillespie and W. A. Norris Get Places As Deputies

At noon Monday, Walter Gillespie was sworn in as Sheriff of Chilton County, suceeding Dudley Collins, who retires to his farm after four years in charge of the job of enforcing the laws of Alabama in this County.

Other than the assumption of the office by the new Sheriff, there was no particular matter of interest attached to the event besides the announcement by Mr. Gillespie of the names of the men he had chosen to assist him as deputies.

The Chief Deputy is James B. Gillespie, son of the Sheriff, who will have charge of the clerical work of the office mainly.

The Second Deputy is W. A. Norris, a young man of outstanding appearance and highly recommended ability. He is the son of Rev. E. A. Norris of Corinth. Deputy Norris, together with Sheriff Gillespie himself, will devote his attention to the matters which the force will be called upon to look after in all parts of the county.

SCHOOL FEES ARE HELD TO BE LEGAL

Supreme Court Reverses Opinion of Attorney General McCall

The Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of the Alabama School Code which provides for the charge and collection of matriculation and incidental fees in the public schools of Alabama. This decision therefore reverses the recent opinion of the Attorney General of Alabama which held that such fees were unconstitutional and could not be collected.

The decision of the Supreme Court therefore, comes as a distinct relief to the schools of the State, because under the ruling of the Attorney General, the collection of all incidental fees and matriculation fees was stopped, and the expenditure of moneys already collected was temporarily stopped.

With particular reference to the matter, County Superintendent, B. Lawrence has received a letter from State Superintendent, Harman which we quote as follows:

"You will observe that this decision reverses the opinion of the Attorney General of Alabama and confirms the constitutional and legal rights of boards of education to impose and collect matriculation and incidental fees, the decision being based on sections 182 and 467 of the Alabama School Code of 1927."

Superintendent Harman adds that it is immediately in order now to expend any funds in possession of treasurers, which funds were received for incidentals and matriculations prior to the rendering of the opinion of the Attorney General.

In regard to the question of enforced payment of incidental or matriculation fees, the State Superintenedent says:

"It is not legal or proper to exclude pupils from school, or to resort to other disciplinary measures in order to enforce payment of this fee by pupils of compulsory attendance age. In the case of pupils of compulsory attendance age, procedure for the collection of fees must be against the parent or guardian, not against the child. In my opinion, in the case of pupils who are not compulsory age, the method of collecting the fees will lie largely with the local school authorities."

While he says that legal process for the collection of fees may be properly instituted and carried out, the State Superintendent closes his letter with this significant statement: "Let me say that in view of the present economic situation, I advise that you exercise your legal powers in this matter with discretion, fairness and moderation."

It is worth while to note that the decision of the Supreme Court and the explanations of the State Superintendent of Education completely clarifies the legal section of the question of incidentals and matriculation fees; yet on the other hand, it does not solve the problem that is faced by many people who have children to send to school, and have not the money with which to pay the fees.

STRAITON AND JACKS PUT UP NOVELTY SHOP

They call it the Clanton Novelty Shop, but in fact it is a carpenter shop. J. D. Straiton and Ed Jacks are the operators of this new place, in a building near the Wade Ice Plant. A reference to their advertisement in The Union-Banner will give you an idea of the class of work these men are prepared to do. Their line includes building or repairing houses or furniture, gumming and filing saws, repairs of all descriptions on screen doors and windows. They will furnish estimates free on any job.

Mr. Staiton is an experienced carpenter and wood worker, who has had many years experience in his trade in the Birmingham district and at Greensboro. Ed Jacks is well-known about Clanton. He is a home man, and a carpenter of recognized ability. These gentlemen will be glad to serve you.

DR. NAPOLEON JOHNSON IN BIRMINGHAM HOSPITAL

Dr. Napoleon S. Johnson has been sick at South Highland Infirmary in Birmingham, for the past week. It was stated Tuesday that he would probably not be able to get out for several days yet.

His many friends in Clanton and Chilton County hope that his condition will soon be back to normal, and that he can return to his family and friends in Clanton.

GUARDING THE DAIRY HERD AGAINST COLD

Bad Weather Will Cause Immediate and Costly Reduction In Milk Which Cannot Be Recovered

As this is being written a storm is raging outside my home. Just now it is snowing. This morning it was raining. A cold northwest wind is blowing. The streets are filled with slush, the trees are bending under the weight of icy coverings, and sidewalks are as dangerous as a newly waxer floor.

Somehow my mind wanders out over the country side to pastures and barnyards and sheds and straw stacks. I see cattle huddled against any kind of shelter they can find, their poor feet slipping and sliding over the treacherous ice. How I wish they might all be in warm barns, with an extra thickness of bedding for the night, with every crack and crevice filled, storm windows locked tight and everything possible done to make them comfortable.

The above protection is essential in all the northern and central portions of the United States, while in the extreme south a dry shed with tight north and west walls will usually suffice as protection against storms of winter.

And I wish for all that not alone because of my affection and sympathy for animals, but because I know that unless the cows are protected their milk will fall off at an alarming rate.

The dairy cow of today can be compared to a delicate piece of machinery. She has been experimented with and improved upon by means of selective breeding until she is today the most efficient, and naturally the most sensitive, instrument we have for manufacturing milk.

Therefore it is not only inhuman, but plain neglect of good business principles, to allow a dairy cow to suffer from cold and wet and the many inconveniences of the winter season. The inevitable result is less milk.

There is normal decline each fall and winter which cannot be helped. But by stabling the cows early, protecting them from storms and cold. This falling off can be held to a minimum.

Extra care in feeding during the cold season is of prime importance. As one writer has pointed out, a good dairy cow is one of the hardest worked animals on the farm. It has been estimated that a cow producing five gallons of milk a day does as munch actual labor as a 1,500-pound horse at heavy work.

That is a little hard to believe until you stop and analyze it for a moment. A horse draws heavy loads, works in the field all day, travels miles under harness. A cow leads a lazy life in comparison. But do not forget that a cow is using up a tremendous amount of physical energy. She consumes huge amounts of food. Many times more than a horse. That food is converted into milk, which means a work just the same as pulling a load.

Along with proper housing goes proper feeding as a means of protection against weather changes. We will have a good deal to say about feed in subsequent articles. The point we are interested in right now is a proper balance of rations during the time the cows are off of pasture, and confined to stables because of cold.

The cow must have plenty of bulk in her rations at all times because she is built that way. In the summer time grass is consumed, which is bulky. In the winter a cow may get all the food value she needs in the grain she eats, but unless there is enough roughage to go along with that grain it will not satisfy the appetite. Furthermore, the digestive organs will not be able to change that grain into milk unless it has the roughage to help in the process.

It is a well known fact that in herds where the same grain ration is fed, the cows which give the most milk are the ones which eat the most forage.

A good rule to follow is to give the cows all the roughage they will eat, and add to it an amount of grain that is necessary to meet the nutritive requirements.

CONCORD—BILLINSLEY

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Culp from Pleasant Grove were present at our Christian Endeavor on Sunday night. We were indeed glad to have them with us, and we invite them to come again.

Our program was very good. The topic was, my idea of what a young woman ought to be. Brother Culp made a very commendable talk from this subject, which was enjoyed by all present.

After the program he preached for us. He had for his subject, "Jesus is passing by." The service was well attended.

Our Christian Endeavor is putting on a contest between the two groups, which will last one month, in which the losing side will entertain the winning side. The contest is to try to get members to attend regular, be punctual, read the Bible daily, contribute more, and bring in more new members.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Coggins from Pleasant Hill community attended the preaching service here Sunday night. We are always glad to have visitors with us at any time.

Miss Sallie Shaw returned home Saturday after spending some time in Coosa County.

Mesdames Tom Weldon and Willie Tindoll visited Mrs. Minnie Gorfard, who is very sick, last Sunday afternoon.

Brother Headley was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Lawrence last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Cowart and little daughter, Olideen, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shaw.

BETHSALEM SUNDAY SCHOOL

We had a fine service Sunday, both in Sunday school and in church. All officers and teachers were present, and each class was well attended. We feel so grateful and thankful to the Lord for his goodness to us in giving us such good services in the beginning of the New Year. There was five added to the church, one by experience and four by letter. Our pastor, W. P. Lowery, preached a fine and inspiring sermon, which was enjoyed by all. In fact each feature of the day was inspiring, the singing, the children's offering, the response to the supeirntendent's request as to the bringing of the corn. There was 23 quarts brought. We ask that everybody will come out and enjoy these good things with us.

MR. PARKER AND MR. HARRIS

The shadow of sorrow lingers in our community. Our hearts were made sad by the death of Mr. Peter Parker. On Saturday afternoon last, Mr. Parker was laid to rest in Plantersville cemetery. He died in Fairfield, Alabama. This good man was known and loved by many in this community. He and his good wife kept a hotel at Riderville for the E. E. Jackson Lumber Company for many years. Mr. Parker was 80 years old. He leaves his wife, four children, 15 grand children and one great grand child.

On Sunday morning when we rached the church we found out about the death of and funeral services of one of our home friends, Mr. Frank Harris, was to be at Stanton at 11:00 o'clock. Mr. Harris had been in bad health for some time. For two weeks he had been unconscious. He died at the home of his son, Eugene, in Bessemer. He leaves four sons and several granchildren. The sons were all present at his funeral. He was laid to rest by the side of his wife, who had preceeded him several years ago, also several sons. Friends, let us emulate the good deeds of these men so it can be said of us, "Well done, thou good and faithful servants."

Weep not, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."—A friend.

JESUS TEMPTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 4:1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus True to God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus True to God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Overcome Temptation.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Conflicting Ideals.

I. The Place (v. 1).

The wilderness of Judea. The first man, Adam, was tempted in a garden with the most pleasant surroundings. The second man, Jesus Christ, was tempted in a barren wilderness, surrounded by wild beasts (Mark 1:13). Adam shamefully failed, involving the whole race in ruin (Rom. 5:12); Christ gloriously triumphed, bringing justification of life as a free gift upon all who believe (Rom. 5:18).

II. The Purpose (v. 1).

Christ was led into the wilderness by the Holy Spirit. His temptation was Messianic. Men today are not tempted as he was, but the same methods are employed by the Evil One. The time had come for the Redeemer to enter upon his mediatorial work. Therefore, he went from the place of anointing and heavenly recognition as the Son of God to meet and to spoil the enemy of God and men (Heb. 2:14).

1. It was not a preparation for his work but rather his first conflict with the enemy. In his baptism we have the symbolic act of the dedication of himself to the work of redemption through the work of the cross.

2. It was not to see if Christ would stand fast, as to whether he would fail under the most crucial test. Being the eternal Son of God, incorporated with the perfect humanity, sin and failure were impossible.

3. It was to exhibit Christ as an object upon which we may rest our faith with unshaken confidence. He came as the second man, the head of a new race, the very source of its life. The temptation was, therefore, a demonstration of the inseparableness of the divine and human natures in the incarnation.

III. The Method (vv. 2-12).

Christ as the world's Redeemer sustained a threefold relation—Son of Man, Son of God, and Messiah. Therefore, Satan made each one a ground of attack.

1. As Son of Man (vv. 2-4). Satan made his first assault upon him as a man by appealing to the instinct of hunger. Satan urged him to use his divine power to convert a stone into bread. The temptation was in satisfying a right hunger in a wrong way. To have yielded in this case though his hunger was desperate would have been to renounce the human limitations which he had taken for our sakes. To do right in a wrong way is to sin.

2. As Messiah (vv. 5-8). Here the temptation was to grasp his rightful dominions by false means. The Devil offered to surrender unto him the world if he would adopt his methods, would worship him. The force of this temptation was in the fact that the kingdoms of the world are Christ's by God's covenant with him. Satan has forfeited his right to rule. God's method by which Jesus was to possess the world was his sacrificial death on the cross.

3. As the Son of God (vv. 9-12). Here Satan tries to induce Christ to presume upon God's care. He quoted a Messianic psalm to induce him to so act. To do the spectacular thing in order to get notice is to fall into Satan's temptation. For Jesus to have placed himself in danger in order to get God's special help in delivering him would have been to sin. To test God as to whether he will keep his promise is the greatest distrust.

IV. Christ's Defense (vv. 4, 8, 12).

It was the Word of God. He met and repulsed the enemy with "it is written." In the most crucial hour of the world's history Christ quoted from the Book of Deuteronomy, which the rationalists of the day reject as not being fully inspired.

V. The Issue (v. 13).

Satan was vanquished. He could not stand against God's Word.

Let the Light Shine

Christian, rest not until thou knowest the full, the unbroken shining of God in thy heart! To this end, yield to every stirring of it that shows thee some unconquered and perhaps unconquerable evil! Let the light shine upon it, and shine it out!—Andrew Murray.

Enmity With God

Friendship of the world is enmity with God because the leadership of the world is directly against godliness; and for this reason it is out of the question for any child of God to forsake the ways of godliness and conform to the sinful ways of the world. —Doctrines of the Bible.

FAMOUS LIBERTY BELL MAY SOON RING AGAIN

Famous Bell, Silent for Ninety Six Years, May Ring Again On Washington's Birthday

The famous old Liberty Bell, that rang so joyously to announce the Declaration of Independence, and which tolled so sadly when George Washington died at Mt. Vernon, may again ring from Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, on Washington's next birthday, February 22, 1931.

Efforts are being made by officials of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission to arrange for a nation-wide hook-up on this date and have President Hoover press an electric button in Washington which will start the nation's most historic bell ringing again after a silence of almost one hundred years. It is proposed to have the bell strike thirteen times, once for each of the thirteen original states.

According to noted Philadelphia historians, the last ringing of the bell was on July 8, 1835, in honor of the funeral services of John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States, who died in Philadelphia on July 6, 1835. While the bell was being solemnly tolled, it suddenly cracked. An attempt was made to repair it in 1846 for the celebration of Washington's birthday ceremonies but this attempt failed. It is believed however, that while the cracked bell will not give forth its once famous tone, it will nevertheless ring sufficiently loud to be heard by all radio listeners, if it is tapped thirteen times on the anniversary of Washington's birthday next month.

THE AGE OF A WORKER

That Muskogee, Okla., contractor who advertised for a number of bricklayers and specified that they must be more than fifty years old, seems to have good sense, even if he is running counter to the general trend in industry.

"Old men are the best," he says. "They know more, do better work, and do it more easily. This stuff of turning men off at forty-five, as many do, is piffle."

It would be hard to pick any flaw in that argument. Indeed, it is rather likely that industrialists generally will return to that point of view in the next few years. The craze for youthful workers has gone beyond all reasonable bounds, and a reaction is certain to come.—Muncie, Ind., Press.

FACTS ABOUT THE ALABAMA COAL SITUATION

In normal years Alabama coal production is about 20,000,000 tons. During normal years Alabama's coal and coke industry gives employment to about 28,500 Alabama men, with a payroll of about $34,500,000. In normal years the coal industry also creates the major portion of the tonnage hauled by Alabama railroads, producing gross revenues for public carriers of about $16,500,000. In normal years the Alabama coal industry also furnishes the biggest home market for Alabama farm products, and spends large sums with Alabama industries and supply houses for equipment and machinery.

In 1930 Alabama's coal production was but 14,500,000 tons or about 28 per cent under normal years. Railroad transportation of coal dropped from 265,000 cars during normal years to only about 199,000 cars, with a loss in gross revenue to Alabama railroad estimated at about $4,500,000. Instead of operating six days a week as in normal years, Alabama mines operated last year only one to three days a week. Since 1919 over 400 Alabama mines have shut down. Last year alone over 100,000 acres of coal lands were sold for back taxes.

Today Alabama's coal industry is frankly in a critical condition. This position has been brought about by several causes. A major factor in the situtaoin has been the competition from coal from East Kentucky, West Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, which is being sold today within the nearby natural trade territory for Alabama coal. In the Tennessee-Kentucky field, coal production increased from 34,000,000 tons in 1917 to 65,000,000 tons in 1929, or 93 per cent; in the Virgiia fields from 10,000,000 tons in 1917 to 13,000,000 tons in 1919, or 26 per cent, whereas Alabama's tonnage decreased from 20,500,000 tons in 1917 to 14,500,000 tons in 1930, or about 28 per cent. In 1930 Alabama coal also met competition for the first time within the State from Louisiana gas.

The problem of the Alabama coal industry is the problem of the state. It is Alabama's problem, because the welfare of so many thousand Alabama people hangs directly on the welfare of the Alabama coal industry. When Alabama mines are closed down, Alabama's greatest treasure is locked up and Alabama's greatest payroll source is cut off. Damage to the Alabama coal industry is damage to the whole business structure of the state.

Alabama should give serious consideration to her coal situation in the effort to discover ways and means of assisting this important key industry and relieving the general distress brought about in great part by its present crippled condition.

FARMERS TO PLANT GOOD COTTON SEED

In an effort to reduce the penalty of $7,000,000 imposed on Alabama cotton in 1930 because of short staple and poor quality, farmers are expanding their program for planting better cottonseed. The aim is to rid Alabama of cotton having a staple shorter than 7-8 inch.

As a result of the program a large quantity of seed of D. P. L. 4-8 and Cook 1627 varieties will be planted, according to J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist of Auburn. "These varieties have been leaders in tests conducted by the experiment station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute," he said.

This is one of the most important problems facing farmers of the state, according to President Edward A. O'Neil of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation. He is authority for the statement that short staple and low-grade cotton cost farmers of the state $7,000,000 in 1930.

Through their county organizations, farmers have placed orders with breeders for large quantities of good seed. These seed will be planted next spring and in the fall gins will be cleared of all seed of other varieties and only seed of th good variety ginned. In this way large quantities of good seed will be made available for planting in 1932.

ALABAMA COAL MINING IN SECOND CENTURY

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 18.—Coal mining is now beginning its second century in Alabama. According to the Birmingham News it was in December 1830 that the first coal was mined in this state. This marked the beginning of an era of industrial development, and sicne then more than half a billion tons of coal have been mined in this state. The total output is estimated at 564,000,000 tons.

Only 13,200 tons were mined in 1870, but since then production has gained rapidly, amounting to 380,000 tons in 1880; 4,090,409 tons in 1890; 8,273,262 tons in 1900; 16,139,228 tons in 1910; 17,391,437 tons in 1920; and in 1926, the peak year thus far, the production was 21,508,812 tons.

"We are burdened with unfair taxation," said President Edward A. O'neal of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation. "Our property tax system is out of date and there is need for equalization of taration in order that the farmer will not be called upon to pay many times his relative share."

Madison is leading Alabama counties in cotton pooled with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association. Total poolings for this county to date are 13,707 bales. Lauderdale is second with 9,896 bales and Dallas third with 7,792 bales.

Rat extermination campaigns sponsored by the Farm Bureau and county agents are moving on their victorious course through various Alabama counties. The fight is being prosecuted on a wholesale basis. In Guntersville more than 1,000 rats were killed. Powdered red squill, which kills rats only, is used.

100,000,000 Cubic Feet of Natural Gas a Day

Sidetracks 27,000 Cars of Alabama Coal and Coke a Year . . . . . .

YOU can't read a chapter of Alabama history without immediately recognizing the important role which Alabama railroads have played in Alabama's past agricultural and industrial development. They are equally a major factor in our state's present welfare. ¶ Alabama coal and coke are normally the largest single source of revenue for Alabama railroads. ¶ Alabama's coal tonnage is normally about five times as great as the cotton crop of the entire South! ¶ The Natural Gas line which runs thru Alabama from Louisiana has a capacity of one hundred million cubic feet of natural gas per day. This is the equivalent of about one million three hundred and fifty thousand tons of average Alabama coal or coke a year. ¶ The transportation of this supply of Louisiana gas requires practically no labor after pipe lines are once laid. ¶ The transportation of its equivalent in coal or coke requires over 27,000 freight cars annually, gives employment to many railroad employees and produces gross revenues for the railroads of about $1,700,000. ¶ This simple example illustrates the close relationship of coal and coke to the prosperity of the railroads. There is an equally close tie between the prosperity of the Coal and Coke industry and scores of other industries and businesses. ¶ Any damage to the coal and coke industry means damage to the railroads—damage to the the farmer—damage to the State and yourself. ¶ To help bring back prosperity to Alabama—burn COAL or COKE!

This is the sixth of a series of advertisements published by Alabama coal and coke companies about Alabama coal and coke.

FORESTRY ESSAY CONTEST EXCITES SHARP INTEREST

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 19.—Enthusiasm over the forestry prize essay contest sponsored by the Commission of Forestry in co-operation with land owners of the state has reached the fever point in many sections, judging from the mass of letters and other communications received at the office of the Commission of Forestry for high school students, teachers and principals.

The trip to California and return promised by lumbermen of the State, which is one of the prizes, possesses a strong lure to young America in Alabama. The boys and girls of the State are anxious to view, not only the natural and industrial wonders of the golden west, but also the scene of the successful expeditions of Alabama's football warriors. The visit to Washington, D. C., is also a lure to the essay writers. However, the best prize of all, a year's schlarship at one of the collegiate institutions of the state, seems to be the stimulus of the most strenous efforts. All the prizes are of a worth while nature, and they are so regarded is demonstrated by the energy with which the high school students are gathering and collecting information on forestry.

There is still time for new entries in the contest, since the essays may be handed in at any time on or before February 25th. After this date the contest will be closed. Persons desiring special information on forestry or on terms of the contest may obtain these by writing to the State Forester, Montgomery, Alabama.

MORE PROFIT IN HOGS THAN COTTON

"Hogs for market are more profitable at present than cotton," reports F. W. Gist, statistician of the Department of Agriculture who states that "one-third of the farmers are of necessity singing 'nine-cent cotton and 20-cent meat' while two-thirds have no pigs for next year's meat and six out of ten have no sows to breed from."

Commenting upon the fact "with cotton at 77 per cent of its 1910-1914 price and hogs at 114 farms cannot grow cotton to buy meat," Mr. Gist said.

"Sixty-one per cent of the farmers in the state have no brood sow, 66 per cent had no pigs, and 32 per cent had no hogs for pork, in November last. One-third of our farmers are of necessity singing "nine-cent cotton and 20-cent meat," while two-thirds have no pigs for next year's meat and six out of ten have no sows to breed from. In the shortage of brood sows and pigs northern counties are seen to be outstanding, in some of them more than 90 per cent of farmers reporting none. With cotton at 77 per cent of its 1910-1914 price and hogs at 114 farmers cannot grow cotton to buy meat. And certainly hogs for market are more profitable at present prices than cotton."

Miller's Inauguration Held In Montgomery Monday

Governor's wishes for a simple inauguration were carried out when he became the 39th Governor of Alabama on Monday, January 19th, at high noon, near the spot where Jefferson Davis was sworn as president of the Confederacy on February 18, 1861. The oath was administered by Chief Justice, John C. Anderson, of the Alabama Supreme Court.

The parade, shorn of frills, consisted of two automobiles. In the first was the Governor elect, B. M. Miller, and Governor Bibb Graves. In the second was General William P. Screws and Major Everett H. Jackson, flinked by aides on motorcycles. Surely the parade could not have been made simpler.

At 1:00 p.m., a luncheon was given at the Whitley Hotel by 350 citizens, in honor of the Governor. This was followed by a public reception at the Exchange Hotel at 8:00 p.m.

The inaugural ball was opened at the City Auditorium commencing at 9:00 p.m., and ending at midnight, concluding the inauguration.

On the first days session, a joint resolution was introduced by the Mobile senator and a representative would create a joint committee to investigate the destruction of the public highways by the busses and trucks.

According to the State auditor, S. H. Blan, Governor Miller inherited a deficit of $14,465,995 from the late Graves regime when he took over the reins of the State Government. However, it is stated when a complete checking of the State's accounts is completed that three or four millions may be added to this amount.

Features of the first three days of the 1931 Alabama Legislature was the unanimous declaration of the House Committee that it was solidly behind Governor-elect Miller and the first skirmish was won by the Black Belt leaders of the state who have staved off all efforts to re-apportion the Legislative representation for the past 30 years.

On the first day of the Senate's session, Senator Coleman Shepherd, of Walker, was defeated by an 18 to 13 vote by the maneuvers of the veteran seators, McDowell and Teasley, who attempted to permanent committees of an apportion and reduction of the created in the permanent organization. Undaunted by this rebuff, the youthful senator said that the fight had just begun.

On the second day the Senate perfected the permanent organization with the election of 28 standing committees.

Both houses jointly declared the State officials for the ensuing four years constitutionally elected after duly canvassing the returns of November 4th, General election.

Speaker Turnstall is using the gavel that he used in the 1903 Legislature which was presented to him by Jesse C. Adams, clerk of the House of Representatives at that time.

After an interesting contest, when the Senate invoked, the majority ruled, the following pages were elected: Steve Nolan, John S. Tillman, Bryan Darden, George D. Hodges, Herbert Johnson, and Neal Davis.

At Friday morning's session of the Legislature, two important resolutions were passed by suspension of the ruler.

A resolution calling upon Secretary of Agriculture, Hyde, to advance to the drought stricken farmers of Alabama to buy seed and fertilizer for the ensuing year.

The other resolution calling upon Congress to take immediate action on the Muscle Shoals, introduced by Representative, Charles Carmichael, son of the former speaker, Carmichael, follows:

Whereas, the government of the United States, its executive and legislative departmens, have had under consideration and discussion for many years the power and nitrate plants known as Muscle Shoals, and the proiperty has not been devoted to the purpose for which it was originally intended; namely, the making of fertilizer; and the property has likewise been witheld from profitable handling as a power proposition; and

Whereas, the long discussion and lack of action has been productive of great loss to the government.

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Alabama, the Senate concurring, that the Congress of the United States be urged to make disposition of this vexed question at the present session of Congress.

Be it further resolved, that the Congress of the United States be urged to provide for the use of the plants in a manner which shall carry out the original purposes for which they were built and preserve the governments rights to and use in event of public damage.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resclution be sent by the clerk of the House to the President of the United States, the presiding officer of the United States Senate; to the speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and to the Senators and Representatives from Alabama.

Just before adjournment Friday, Senator Shepherd, asked leave to take up Governor Graves' nomination of General John C. Persons for Commander of the Alabama National Guard, which was held up on the second day, he asked to defer the fourth day, which was granted by unanimous consent. General Person's nomination was confirmed by a vote of 32 to 0.

Lieutenant-governor, Hugh Merrill was nominated as a trustee of Auburn, from the fourth district and was confirmed by the same vote on motion of Senator Shepherd.

The Governor's nomination for other Auburn trustees was passed to the fifth Legisative day.

We are very proud to sav that our school is progressing. Everybody seems to enjoy the work. We are proud of the teachers. We think that everybody is pleased with the work they are doing.

Our P.-T. A. is progressing nicely too. We are going to put on a play in the near future. The name of it is "Aaron Slick from Punkin Criak." We hope to have a good crowd present.

Last Friday afternoon we had a spelling match, which was of much interest. In the Elementary grades, Pearl Delene Patterson was the last one spelled down. In the Junior grades, Osmond Glenn.

Our basket ball team is losing interest. The boys haven't practiced any in about three weeks. They haven't decided whether they are going to devote their time to practice basketball or for play day.

Alpha Mae Gray, one of the 3rd grade pupils, was operated on Saturday afternoon for appendicitis. She is reported doing fine now. We all hope that she will soon be able to come to school again.

Mrs. Branch and her grand daughter, Mildred Maddox, went to Montgomery Monday to attend the inauguration ceremonies.

HOOVER DISAGREES WITH MODIFICATION

Washington, Jan., 20—The long-debated report of the Wickersham commission, broadly upholding constitutional prohibition by leaving the door ajar for basic revision, was put on the crowded calendar of a divided Congress Tuesday by President Hoover.

The president agreed with the commission that the dry amendment should not be repealed. He disagreed with a suggestion that revision might be the better part of wisdom. He pointed out to the lawmakers that all the commissioners favored large expansion of enforcement facilities, and said he hoped Congress would consider that at some appropriate time.

Reverberations Foreseen

Arrival of the report on Capitol Hill set off explosions there that promised to be heard on the next election.

Senator Borah, Idaho, an advocate of prohibition, said repeal or no repeal of the 18th amendment was the issue and demanded that it be taken to the people.

"I should like to see those opposed to the 18th amendment present their alternative and let the people choose between them in an orderly and proper fashion," he said.

Senator Blaine (R), Wisconsin, an opponent of the dry law, introduced a resolution for a substitute prohibition amendment similar to that the commission outlined. His proposal would give Congress the power to regulate liquor traffic, but not to prohibit.

After the first storm of words subsided, Congress turned back to its burdensome legislative task. The report was sent to the judiciary committees of the House and Senate with indications that it would remain there until next session, at least.

Women Read Most

Women read far more than men, according to the manager of one of Great Britain's largest lending libraries. Women of all ages, he stated recently, are enormous and rapid readers. They will read anything—however good, however light, and no novel is too "strong" for them. Men are not like that. They read either very good books or literature of the very lightest kind. Strangely enough, he added, men who would be considered the most "highbrow" often delight in the most "lowbrow" literature. Men who are harassed by important affairs, including many distinguished statesmen, often seek relaxation in books which hold their interest without demanding any close concentration on their part.

Optimist

A little fellow of 5 years fell and cut his upper lip so badly that a doctor had to be summoned to sew up the wound.

The mother, in distress, could not refrain from saying:

"Oh, doctor, I fear it will leave a disfiguring scar."

Tommy looked up into her tearful face and said:

"Never mind, mamma, my mustache will cover it."

Improved Ice for Rinks

Max Heinrich Gurth, a Berlin chemist, claims to have invented what he calls opal ice. It consists of water boiled with certain chemicals. The formula is secret. It is not a refrigerant. It is for the preparation of skating surfaces in rinks.

An agent recently called on a north side mother trying to interest her in a set of books. Junior was peering through the pages so the caller showed him some pictures under "Mental Test." One picture was that of a wagon without the "handle." After asking Junior several questions the woman enlightened him by saying that the wagon didn't have a handle. Turning to a picture of a pig without a tail the youngster studied it intently for a few moments and said, "Why, the pig doesn't have a handle, either."—Indianapolis News.

That many Americans have traveled in Europe might be deduced from the trails of European names throughout the United States. Paris and Berlin are each to be found in 15 states, while seven undeveloped Londons, ranging in size from 100 to 4,000 population, might be visited in a domestic grand tour. Arkansas is the proud possessor of all three, and in addition has a Peking. Peking is to be found in four other states also.—Cleveland News.

THREE QUESTIONS

Three questions have bothered us ever since we wore three-cornered pants; they were answered the other night:

Noah and his crew in the Ark were sailing along nicely—the two dogs were down below, playing, when they discovered a small leak. One dog put his nose in the hole while the other yipped for help. (That's the reason a dog's nose is cold.) Pretty soon Mrs. Noah wandered in anw saw that the hole was getting larger, so she stuck her elbow in the hole and called for Noah. (That's the reason a woman's elbow is always cool.) Noah came along, but forgot his hammer and saw, so he sent Mrs. Noah after them—and sat on the hole till Mrs. Noah returned—and that, my friends, is the reason a man always backs up to a fire.

Copy of Letter To Mr. J. Z. Mims From W. M. Wyatt, Editor of Union-Banner

Clanton, Ala., Jan. 20, 1931
Mr. J. Z. Mims
Clanton, Ala.
Dear Sir:

I will endeavor to find a few words to suitably express myself in regard to the long letter of yours in last week's Union-Banner in which you sought to drag a few skeletons out of the political closet, and rattle again the dry bones of the last campaign in Chilton County.

First, I want to make it clear that I do not feel very vitally concerned about your political ambitions, but since it appears to me that it is chiefly there that the shoe is pinching you, I will try to give you my interpretation of your situation.

I lay no claim to possessing the master mind which you so graciously credited me with in you letter of last week. I do think though, that I have a few grains of common sense and the ability to see some things once in a while. I am satisfied to consider myself in the class of average citizens, with no political ambitions to worry me personally.

It is simply as one of those average citizens that I have seen and interpreted your actions in the last campaign, as well as your statements in last week's paper. Here I take the opportunity to give you the benefit of a few of my observations.

Concerning the details of the controversy between you and Judge Reynolds about the printing of the ballots in the last campaign, I am not concerned. The only interest I have in it is that interest which is common to any Republican in the ranks of the party of Chilton County. I am entitled to my opinions about the matter, and I have the right to express my opinions, both as to yours and Judge Reynolds' position in the controversy. And I assure you that my opinions have been formed from my understanding of the facts in the case and the statements which I have seen and heard.

Before I proceed any further I want to say that so far as the editorial about which you attacked me is concerned, I am still of exactly the same opinions which I expressed in that editorial. If you do not know that such foolishness in politics as was injected into the recent campaign will result in failure for and destruction of the Republican party in Chilton County, then it is my opinion that you do not know the first lesson in politics. But if you continue to proceed in your attitude, I think that you will soon come to realize a few things without anyone having to tell you.

Now a few words about the racket that was raised over the question of printing the ballots of the last campaign. I am convinced beyond any reasonable doubt that you were the arch-conspirator in the effort that was made to brand Judge Reynolds as a traitor to the Republican party, and to make the people believe that he had invented a new scheme to keep the names of the Republican candidates from being printed on the election ballots. I say I am convinced that you were the leader of that movement, because it is a proven fact that it was you who had failed to discharge your duty under the law as chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee. I am further convinced that instead of being willing to bear the resonsibility for your own error, you became busy and very much interested in trying to make it appear that Judge Reynolds was the one who had gone wrong.

You impress me somewhat by your insistence that you were honest in what you did about the ballot printing racket; that you acted honestly; and that if you made any mistakes, the same were made with honest intentions; and that if you had to go through it again, you would do just as you did before. Therefore, I understand that you insist that your mistakes ought not to be pointed out or held against you, because you are honest.

I am willing to grant you all you ask for about your honesty. But at the same time I want to say that it is my own private opinion that your mistakes in the ballot printing controversy and subsequent transactions relating thereto, as well as your own failure to comply with the law as chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee were also mistakes that were born of ignorance of the law and your duties under the law. Then your inefficiency and incompetency was further accented by the actions and statements which you made in seeking to lay the blame on the shoulders of Judge Reynolds.

It is perfectly clear to me that you badly bungled your job as chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee. Your lack of knowledge of the law, and your failure to comply with the law got the whole Republican ticket in a bad situation. Instead of doing what I would consider the honest thing—admitting your mistakes and ignorance—you sought to make the candidates and the people believe that you were without fault and blameless, and that Judge Reynolds was the black sheep, the traitor who had poisoned the camp.

In my opinion, Mr. Mims, the trouble with you is that you have been so busy running for Probate Judge for the last few years that you have not taken time to do anything else efficiently. You claim to have been offering yourself as a sacrifice for the interests of the Republican ticket last fall. But when you came to the real test when the sacrifice which you profess to have been willing to make was staring you in the face, you dogged it and tried to offer up the political life and influence and honor of Judge Reynolds as the sacrifice.

The facts stand undisputed that Judge Reynolds was acting properly under the law when he raised the ballot-printing question. And further he has proven to my satisfaction that he was making all the effort he could to save the candidates from the embarrassment which your neglect would cause them and the Republican party. Judge Reynolds explained his position in this matter in his letter of October 23, 1930. You have made no denial of his statements nor the records he cited. The facts stand against you and convict you of ignorance of the law and neglect and incompetency in the performance of the duties which the Republican candidates had entrusted to you. You only insist that you acted honestly. I wonder if you think the law excuses ignorance just because it is claimed the ignorance was honest.

You say in your letter last week that I am the one who sent word all over this county about the ballot-printing racket. I presume you refer to the clipping about the matter which was taken from The Montgomery Advertiser and printed in The Union-Banner. I am sure you already know, if you have not forgotten, but I want to remind you here that the said clipping from The Advertiser was given to me by Mr. Charley Foshee and Mr. Buford Lawrence. When they gave it to me, one or both of them said: "We want to see if you have got nerve and backbone enough to print this in The Union-Banner." I met what I considered their challenge by telling them I would publish it if they requested me to do so. They made a verbal request to that effect, and the piece was reprinted in the next issue of The Union-Banner. If you wish any further explanation as to the motives which these gentlemen had in wanting the piece printed in The Union-Banner, perhaps they can enlighten you about it.

Now, lastly, back to the editorial you referred to. I repeat that foolishness in politics will result in failure. I claim to have sense enough to see that the Republican party in the future in this county can not be successful if each leader in the party, if each county official with his own group of political friends and followers, is separated, hostile, and vengeful against other leaders, officials and their friends and followers. Such a condition will be ultimately inevitable if the spirit that was nursed in the last campaign is allowed to continue among us.

If the Republican voters of this county ever take a notion to elect you as their Probate Judge, I will not object after they have so acted. I can stand it if the majority say so. But I want to repeat again from the editorial of last October: If the men who are leaders of the present campaign would have us take the thing that came from them last week as a sample of their own ability to be fair and perform the task of leading the Republican party, we are bound to say that it looks like a poor specimen of leadership to put in the place of that which Judge Reynolds has given his party throughout his long and honorable career.

Now, if you want to know again who that expression referred to, I will repeat here, as I did when you came to see me in person about it, that it refers to you and the nauseating manner in which you pretended to manage the last Republican campaign.

Yours very truly,
W. M. (MACK) WYATT.

The following were exempt on three subjects: Esther Lee Dennis, Ruth Maddox, Sallie Mahan, Eloise Rasberry, Myrtle Robinson, Dorothy Sessions, and Ethel Wilkerson.

Those exempt on two subjects are Viola Mae Carrol, Sarah Green, Herman Harris, Mary Heard, Eloise Jones, Elizabeth Stanley, Mae Vinson.

SEE BOOST FOR COTTON FROM INSTITUTE WORK

An enlarged market for cotton as a result of increased consumption of mohair fabrics, for the warp of which cotton is used, is looked for by southern growers following announcement of the establishment of the Mohair Institute.

Institute headquarters are to be in Chicago. A. C. Gage, editor of the Angora Journal and internationally known mohair authority, is the director.

The Institute will seek to further the interests of the American mohair industry, which has experienced tremendous growth since the World War, said Mr. Gage. Researches will be directed toward improving the quality of the fleeces of American mohair goats and in developing new uses for the fabric that goes back to the Bible.

Turkey is the original home of the Angora goat, but the United States now has more mohair producing animals than any other country in the world. There are Angora goats in each of the 48 states, with Texas by far the largest producing state. Improved range practices in recent years has resulted in a finished product superior to that produced in the old world.

Mr. Gage formerly was secretary of the National Mohair Growers Association. In the past four years he has traveled more than 100,000 miles in the United States and Canada in behalf of the industry.

Mohair has been found by the United States Department of Agriculture to be the longest wearing fabric known. The physical nature of the fibre is such as to lend itself to colorings of every hue. It is widely used in the upholstery of moter and railroad cars, good furniture, in making of quality rugs, robes, draperies, clothing and many other articles. It is estimated that 100,000,000 yards of mohair fabric is in use in today's automobiles and 12,000,000 yards in railroad cars, in which it is used almost exclusively. The natural resiliency of the smooth fibres of mohair pile, their tendency to spring back into a vertical position, makes for greater comfort and riding ease by preventing sliding around in the seat with the motion of the car. Attempts by automobile manufacturers to substitute flat fabrics of inferior wearing quality in automobile upholstery have met with disfavor on the part of the motoring public. Its use in the upholstery of furniture has enjoyed greater popularity, too, since a process to make the fabric mothproof was adopted some years ago.

KUDZU IS GOOD HAY AND GRAZING CROP

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 18.—Kudzu for hay, for grazing, and for soil improvement is being recommended by the experiment station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn. The recommendation is based upon the fact that kudzu is more promising than any other perennial plant being grown in Alabama for hay and grazing. It withstands drouths exceptionally well.

To acquaint farmers with facts about kudzu the experiment station has published a new bulletin on it. The authors are R. Y. Bailey, assistant agronomist, and E. L. Mayton, assistant in agronomy. It contains a vast amount of general information about kudzu ad also spedific facts about research studies with it to date.

During a 6-year experiment at Auburn kudzu produced an average yield of more than two tons of hay per acre without fertilizer, Mr. Bailey and Mr. Mayton report. When used to enrich soil a crop of kudzu plowed under in 1919 increased the average yield of two crops or sorghum hay by 2,536 pounds per acre; 4 crops of corn by 19.3 bushels per acre; and 7 crops of oats by 7.9 bushels per acre.

The flavor of kudzu hay is relished by livestock. The nutritive value of it is high. It is relished as a grazing crop.

To get started with this crop Mr. Bailey and Mr. Mayton advise farmers to buy enough crowns to make a small planting from which crowns can be obtained for planting larger areas. This method requires more time but very little money is involved.

Contrary to a general opinion, they say that kudzu is not a pest. It may be eradicated by heavy grazing followed by plowing. At Auburn no trouble was encountered in preventing its spread to adjacent land over a period of 25 years.

BETTER HOMES WEEK METHOD SUGGESTED

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 19.—As an advance suggestion on the observance of "better homes week," April 26-May 2, Miss Helen Johnston, state home demonstration agent for Alabama, is suggesting that tours be conducted and that arrangements for the same be made in advance. Unless such arrangements are made tours will be of less value, she explained.

Last year county home demonstration agents of Alabama conducted 17 tours and more than 700 persons participated. The tours were mapped out in advance to enable those enjoying them to see what had been done to get the information desired.

Special mention was made by Miss Johnston of the tour conducted in Limestone County under the direction of Mrs. Marion Spidle, home demonstration agent. The tour was sponsored by the county council of home demonstration clubs and 14 projects were visited. They included renovating and improving and beautifying the average farm home.

At one home built-in conveniences were studied; at another the party saw a modern poultry house with brick brooders; and a third party saw an attractive and comfortable living room in a tenant house. Elsewhere they saw demonstrations in renovating and refinishing an old house.

The trip ended with a visit to the home of County Agent and Mrs. J. T. Belue to the agricultural school at Athens. This is a demonstration home.

AUTOMOBILE SALES SHOW INCREASE

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 18.—Increase in the sale of passenger automobiles in November as compared to October is shown in the "Alabama Economic Review," which is published by the Bureau of Economic Research and the Department of Agriculture Economics of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. On the other hand, November 1930 sales were far below November 1929.

FARMERS OF STATE POOL 178,999 BALES

For cooperative marketing Alabama farmers have pooled with the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association twice as many bales as they had pooled at this time a year ago, and more than they have pooled in any previous year.

Figures released Tuesday by Allen Northington, secretary-manager of the association, show that poolings to date this year total 178,999 bales. This compares with 89,608 bales at this time in 1930. He expects delivery to pass 200,000 bales before the end of the season. Poolings for the 1929-30 season totaled 161,551 bales.

Alabama stands fourth in the amount of cotton pooled, being exceeded by Texas with 597,856 bales, Georgia with 225,430 bales, and Oklahoma with 209,699 bales. North Carolina is in fifth place with 169,667 bales.

Cotton pooled in the South is being sold through the American Cotton Cooperative Association, set up in 1929 with the help of the Federal Farm Board. Deliveries to this association from all the state associations to date total 1,975,445 bales.

This is more than twice as much cotton as was pooled in the South last season.

DRIFTING DOWN THE RIVER

A homemade boat is slipping down the waters of the Mississippi river, leisurely and quietly. It isn't going anywhere in particular and it has all the time in the world to get there.

And on the deck an old man with his feet propped against the rail. J. W. Preston is 70 years old. Once he was an automobile upholsterer. His shop was always crowded with work to do. But every now and then he would leave his tasks at East St. Louis, Ill., and go down to the river bank. He would see the shine of a light far out. Then he would renew his vow that some day, when he was old, he, too, would be a vagrant of the waterways. He would be lulled to sleep by the steady splash of waves, he would have stars for candles, and the wind across the waters for an evening song. Some day.

And now the time has come. Preston goes drifting down the long brown river, doing the thing he has always wanted to do. He and the river have lots of time. Neither is in a hurry.

Preston isn't any different than most other men. Nearly every man who has passed the eagerness of youth starts to dream dreams, and the last one is based on the peaceful way in which he shall rest a little while, so he can be ready for the last clear call. Most of them never achieve the period of waiting. Preston did.

We all desire a period of dreams, a time of laziness, at the ending of the way. We want to take a deep breath; to see a far light; to close our eyes and feel the current carrying us on and know that we don't have to touch the oars. We can drift and drift and drift, and if we miss one port we'll make another.

So many of our adventures must take place only in our hearts. So often we are so busy we haven't time to think of them during the productive years. But there comes a time to all of us, as it did to Ulyses, that first rover of the waterways, when we want to sail beyond the sunset till we die.

And because Preston has a period of usefulness behind him he can enjoy the heritage of laziness which is his. He has earned the right to drift on gold-brown waters through the day and black channels touched with drifted silver in the night.

We are glad that he wasn't afraid to make his boat and start down the river. And we hope that when he heads for the final shore it will be just as the dawn breaks on the river.

An old man who had the lazy wanderlust somehow could catch the pulse of a new adventure more easily if his boat swung into harbor as he drifted from the night.—Alabama Journal.

MORAL ECHOES

By D. W. Haskew

There is one thing in Clanton I greatly miss, and that is the ringing of a church bell on Sunday morning. It may be old fashioned to have a church bell to peal out on God's holy day, but somehow I like that sound to echo in the place where I live. The ringing of the church bell attracts the mind, and it calls in mellow tones for people to gather into God's house for worship. There is something in that call that thrills my very soul. That was a good day in kingdom service when the bells would fill our towns with music just before the hour of devotion. It would do my heart good every Sunday to hear the bells calling—"Worship today, worship today." Why not let the church bells come back?

When I was a boy on a farm in West Alabama we had a team of mules that were good pullers. We could put a bale of seed cotton on the wagon, and those old mules would pull it up a long, steep hill. On reaching the top the mules would be out of breath, and every muscle would be quivering because of the strain. They were physically unfit for speed and all because they had just gone through with such a hard pull. The membership of the churches in Clanton are good pullers. You have just carried your churches up a tremendous financial hill, and the most of you seem to be out of breath, but friends, let's catch our breath as soon as possible and be ready for speed. We crave to see the churches crowded with worshippers. You have pulled well on finances, now let's pull equally as well in building up our church loyalty.

I saw a man the other day who had a deformed body. If that man had been like the most of deformed people he would have taken his place at home and done nothing, or he would have gone out on the highway to beg for a living. His condition was such that he could have made an appeal for help, and he would have gained the sympathy of all. Did he do it? Not on your life. This man found out something that he could do and he did it. He became more than self-sustaining. He made an honest living and he was loved for it. When I see a deformed man making good, I can not help but think that there is something radically wrong when a strong healthy man is out beating his way through life. There is more in the man than there is in the land. If we have a will to do, something is going to be done.

A patient went into the office of the doctor, and the doctor gave him a thorough examination. He found no bones broken. He found no disease linking on to the constitution of the patient. There were no germs to be found in his blood. Finally the good doctor decided that the pateint was just run down, and needed a tonic. This was prescribed and the patient went out to take the tonic for weeks to follow. In a short time the patient found new life and soon was healthy and strong again. There is nothing deadly linking to the spiritual life of our community, but it is evident that our church life is in need of a spiritual tonic. The run-down condition in church life indicates that a tonic is needed. Take the tonic of church attendance and see if you will not find yourself growing in strength and health.

The pastor passed the yard where a little boy was busy at play. The preacher asked: "Sonnie, what are you doing?" The little fellow replied: "I am playing Sunday School. I am superintendent, my doggie is a pupil, the cat also, and this calf is a pupil." About six months later the preacher passed the same play ground and saw the little boy still playing Sunday School, and he noted that the calf was not present. He inquired: "Henry, what has become of your calf?" "You speak of Buck," replied the boy. "Why parson, that calf thinks that he is too big to come to Sunday School now." That is what some of the boys and girls are thinking in Chilton County. Buck thinks that he is too big to go to Sunday School.

OUR NAVY—IT MUST BE MAINTAINED

Many congressmen give willing ear to the protests against naval expenditure partly because there is no political advantage to be gained by appropriations in time of peace for national defense and partly because of the apparent political profit to accrue from expenditure of the national funds for other purposes. There never has been and never will be enough money in the federal treasury to satisfy all demands upon it. In the scramble for allotments therefrom national defense, lacking the support of political interest, commonly gets the worst of it—in peace time. When war breaks there is, of course, lavish outlay and feverish repair of the peace-time neglect. The hasty last-minute preparation costs vastly more than would have been required for the steady maintenance of adequate defense that would not only insure our national safety but measurably safeguard the international peace.

The new program of naval construction presents the old, old question whether we shall maintain our defenses adequate, or neglect them and accept the risks that such neglect historically invites. Shall we build our navy to treaty strength—establish in actual fact the naval parity which we have demanded as essential to national safety; or shall we rest content with naval inferiority and by failure to provide replacements and balancing units surrender the position for which we have so long contended and the national security whose insurance has been the objective of all our efforts to bring about treaty agreements limiting and regulating naval power?

This newspaper now as always favors adequate national defense. The maintenance of a strong and sufficient navy, measuring up to the standard prescribed by our treaty agreement, seems to us both wise and a necessary national investment. Congress should make whatever provision is required to that end without partisan division. For protection of the nation's safety and peace is one of the first and greatest of its obligations.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

WHY THE RUSH?

Internationalist newspapers and propagandists are now busy in a campaign seeking to get the President to call an extra session of the Senate to consider the World Court protocol after the regular session of Congress adjourns March 4. The fact that the Senate in extra session need not confine itself to international relations and might easily have a disturbing influence on the business situation at home counts not at all with these internationalists who have their feet in America and their hearts in Europe.

One of the favorite arguments used for the calling of an extra session is that if the consideration of the Root protocol is postponed until next November the 1932 election and its preliminary campaign will be so close at hand that the World Court question will "get into politics." The Baltimore Sun sums up this argument of the internationalists by saying: "To wait for the full session is to risk plunging of this whole subject into the turmoil of pre-1932 partisan politics certain to be in full cry at that time.

The internationalists have good reason to want to avoid any nation-wide discussion of the question whether the Root agreemet, so called, is an effectual substitute for the reservations attached by the Senate to the World Court reservation and rejected in Europe. In each and every instance where the question of entangling commitments has been put up to the American people the internationalists have been decisively beaten. They will be beaten again unless they can get the matter settled before it gets too much public debate.

The Senate passed the World Court resolution with reservations safeguarding the rights and interests of the United States. European nations rejected these reservation, with the help of Elihu Root European diplomats cooked up another protocol. They say this is "just as good" as the Senate reservations, but fail to explain if this is true, why they didn't accept the reservations. The internationalists do not want to have to make too many explanations in the coming campaign and therefore feel that the quicker they can put it over the better. Nobody is in a hurry but the professional internationalists and their newspaper support in America.

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Now that the year 1931 is upon us the people of the United States are naturally wondering whether prosperity will return to us before the year 1932 rolls around. The predictions at the beginning of this year are much more cautious and tempered than those which were made for us by the experts, economic and otherwise at the beginnnig of the year 1930. Twelve months ago, although we had just passed through one of the biggest stock market upheavals in history, there was almost unbounded optimism. We were told that the market crash was only a corrective process, that business remained fundamentally sound and that with the coming of the violets we would be on the high road of prosperity and progress once more. The predictions turned out to be entirely too optimistic. There was indeed a temporary pickup of business in the spring months. But it didn't last. Prices of farm products and other raw materials kept slumping and by June it was evident that depression was still with us in an increasing degree of severity. There followed the drouth, revolutions in Latin-America, political upheavals in Europe, Russian dumping, and plenty of things calculated to bring us to the brink of despair.

Now the year 1931 has been completed and the time has arrived for the customary prophecies. These are much more cautious than a year ago. There are still optimists wso believe that before the present year rolls around conditions will have gone far toward the normal again. But the pessimists are more numerous than the optimists, and they are just as sure now that 1931 will be a bad year as they were certain twelve months ago that 1930 would be a big year. Having been mistaken then perhaps they will be mistaken again and 1931 will not be so bad as they think.

This is a consummation devoutly to be wished, and is a reasonable expectation, too. For while the more conservative guessers do not believe that we will soon arrive at the dizzy heights of 1928 and early 1929 again, they feel that a change for the better is coming before many months. While they do not believe that business in the first half of 1931 will be so good as it was in the first half of 1930 with its premature recovery, they are confident that the last half of 1931 will be better than the last half of 1930 of lamented memory and that when we begin to compare current business with the poor records made in that period we will see that we have really turned the corner.

In the meantime it is some consolation to remember that we have been through worse times and have had far worse New Years, even though most of us are entirely pessimistic just at this time. The New York World on the first day of the year editorially called attention to the fact that fifteen years ago, on New Years day "millions of young men were crouching in dirt and darkness, were freezing and dying on long battle lines" and that nobody then could "see the end of the interminable horror." Certainly we have reason to be thankful that that dark and gloomy New Year Period is behind us.

It is perhaps encouraging to know that we have dispelled our illusions, that we have again come to the realization that the way to acculmulate wealth or a modest competence is not by speculation without labor, but by sober thought and honest hard work. It is on the latter of these foundations that real prosperity is built. For a time in 1928 and 1929 many of us thought that wealth was to be acquired in some new way by simply buying securities and waiting for them to go higher. We have now learned better, and if we profit by the lesson the suffering and discomfort will not have been in vain. As the World well concludes, there is now hope because "We begin to tell ourselves that illusions are not foresight, that ignorance is not courage, that guessing is not thought, and that as we go back to work we shall get no further than the knowledge of our realties extends. There are no panaceas. There are no phrases to save us. There are no miracles. There is only the courage to be intelligent and sober."

Voice of the People

BUS LINES AND THE RAILWAYS

Bus passenger and motor freight lines have increased within the past five years. What can be said in their favor? They serve people and communities who reside off the railroads; they provide more frequent schedules; their rates are somewhat lower, sometimes they provide a slight saving to patrons. What can be said against them? Locally they employ no labor, and they pay not one penny of license or taxes to either county or town through which they operate, they use our highways which were built from taxation and spend not one penny for their maintenance, they buy not one penny's worth of anything in Chilton County and they have no payroll in Chilton County; while the Louisville & Nashivlle Railroad last year had ninety-three employes in Chilton County on their payroll and the aggregate sum earned was $79,728.81, the major portion of which was spent in Chilton County. They paid in taxes last year $7,566,457. They paid the town of Jemison $212.37; Thorsby $693.93; Clanton $214.50; and Coopers $183.74 or a total of $1,304.54 in city taxes. The motor lines did nothing to develop this county, own not one foot of land in this county, did not pioneer its development. They waited until the county was settled, and prosperous, and did not come then, they waited until the people taxed themselves to provide smooth concrete highways to replace muddy dirt roads, went to every trouble to construct and pay for their roads, then, and not until then, did the motor bus and truck lines start competing with the railroads, and the competition is unfair. Now that the railroad earnings have fallen enormously as a result of dull business and this unfair competition, it would be a good time for the interstate commerce commission which fixes all railroad rates, to unbridle the railroads as far as interstate rates are concerned in order to allow them to compete with bus and truck lines. The railroad could afford to carry passengers at two cents per mile within the state instead of the present of three and a half cents per mile, and compete with the bus travel which is cheaper than railroad rates. The railroads should have the right to reduce their rates within the state to what they desire, so that they can meet the competition which is a violation of our present laws for railroads to charge a higher or lower rate than the lawfully published rates prescribed by the interstate commerce commission. This is a progressive age. Sentiment plays a small part in the keen business strife and competition, however, the present competition under present conditions is unfair.—W. C. ERWIN.

WANTS TO KEEP UP WITH MIMS

THE GREATNESS OF A NATION

Of approximately 20 million families living in the United States probibly less than one-third own the houses in which they live. President Hoover has a committee, headed by Secretary Robert P. Lamont of the Department of Commerce, working upon problems of home ownership. History may record that this particular endeavor rated among the most important of Mr. Hoover's administration.

It is trite to say that the home-owner is desirable because he may be expected to make the best citizen. Democracy has no firmer support, no safer guaranty of stability, than that coming from a home-owning citizenry.

But the influences springing from home ownership have many applications scarcely less important, all of which, combining, make for the general welfare and the safety of the nation. The backing of the home-owner is depended upon for the furtherance of every worthy movement. His signature is recognized as valuable when attached to a petition. He wants his community to thrive and improve because he expects to remain in it.

Business counts upon the home-owner. The local business men desire his acquaintance and friendship. The homeowner is interested in good government, in the efficinecy of the police and fire departments and in the progress and success of the school system. The grand total of such desires and influences and support make the prosperity and greatness of a nation.

President Hoover very wisely directed his committee to study systems of financing house construction in the interests of home ownership. This is one of the basic factors in the problem.—Detroit News.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

The Chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency thinks that the present industrial depression is largely due to the financial policies of the Federal Reserve in dealing with foreign countries.

He says it was the original purpose to have America pay virtually all of the German indemnity by buying the reparation bonds which, he further adds, Germany was not morally or legally bound to pay.

This was the plan cleverly interwoven in the Versailles Treaty, says the Congressman, and he deplores the fact that our government opened the doors to the sale of even a limited number of these bonds to the American people.

The Chairman makes the positive assertion that this policy has been supported and carried on by the international bankers and their agents and that by financial control of newspapers and magazines they have succeeded in misleading public opinion.

Some day perhaps one of our Senate committees will make a thorough investigation and tell us all about it.

In our national forests one hundred thousand deer enjoy the protection of the government.

Five hundred years before Columbus landed in America, the Indians of the Southwest were enjoying a fair degree of culture and prosperity.

Four hundred and forty-two cities in the United States have adopted the City Manager plan. The experiment was first made in 1912. It has proved to be the most efficient method ever found for the government of American cities.

Rev. S. U. Turnipseed preached two interesting sermons at the Methodist Church last Sunday.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

This thing we call life has lots of places in it where folks are called upon to sacrifice something. It may be a call to sacrifice even one's very own self. It sounds good for people, therefore, to say that they are willing to sacrifice their part.

But when we come to think seriously about the sacrifice business, I think we ought to analyze it about this way. Everybody can not go along all the time without the call to sacrifice coming to somebody. Then, what if the call comes to one who has not been sincere in his claim of willingness to sacrifice?

Well, what happens to the soldier who, when he faces the fire and shell and hell of battle, throws down his gun and runs?

The other day I had occasion to answer a call to the home of Mrs. Kate Anderson. I love Mrs. Anderson. I have always loved her. Even besides her, I have a number of warm friends in her family, her sisters and her brothers. I enjoyed talking to her. Mrs. Anderson writes little pieces of poetry.

She doesn't exactly write them. She says she makes them up. As she sits in her room by a cozy fire, she thinks beautiful lovely thoughts, and they shape themselves through her mind into lovely little verses. She gave me this one:

Bear with the faults of your fellow-man,
As a Christian ought to do;
Don't think hard of your fellow-man,
Because he won't put up with you.

While I was there she said over another verse to me, and it was more lovely than ever. I am saving it until I get proper time, and I expect to fill this whole column with the thoughts it gives me.

Another bowling alley going in at the Nivens old market place. This makes two for Clanton. Somebody suggests that we ought to have at least four to take care of the rushing business. But maybe two alleys will get us over to the warm days when we can go to the miniature golf course.

A friend out on Route 7 writes and asks me to explain my Judas paragraph of last week. He says after looking up some Bible references on the subject, he has come to the conclusion that the negro preacher must have been drinking. I don't know about that, but I imagine there must be something wrong with a fellow who would even look for the book of Judas in the Bible.

Here is how I got the Judas paragraph: In the report of a certain sermon by a distinguished negro divine, the writer said he came forth, ascended the rostrum, read his text from the seventh chapter of Judges, and announced his subject: "You have been tried, but you won't do."

When the type setter composed the piece of copy he merely made the name of the book Judas instad of Judges. I guess he thought the name of the book ought to sound somewhat like the subject; and perhaps Judas popped into his mind as the outstanding character of the Bible who was tried and wouldn't do.

I thank my friend for his letter asking for some more light on the Judas subject. I am glad you like our column, Bill. Any time you have a thought or suggestion, pass it along.

I know where you can get you some nice, fat, black, smutty pine knots one of these cold nights. There are plenty of them piled up right on the corner in the heart of Clanton, at Marion Gore's store.

Well, I have often wondered what I would do if my house caught on fire some night. I tried it one night last week. Here is what I did: I fought fire to beat the dickens, and happily succeeded in putting the blaze out of business before it had done very much damage.

Ed Bruce stepped into the hall of fame again this week by bringing a watermelon to our office. Thought the thing had gotten me into trouble. G. F. Harper, of Thorsby saw it and said a place that displays watermelons at this time of the year is harboring a suspicion sufficient to command the investigation of our new county Sheriff.

Ernest Moore is back in the resturant business again. He has bought the business of Mrs. Watkins, near the courthouse. He is preparing to take care of your appetite when you are in town. His slogan will be: When you come to court, park your appetite at Moore's Cafe.

Everywhere you look there is a mule for sale. I think it is unfortunate that some of the surplus mules are not hogs. There is a scarcity of hogs on the farms of this county that is acute.

Tuesday morning it looked like the aftermath of an election at the courthouse. The whole place was full of folks who had come to the hard-times meeting. There were so many that it was not possible for all of them to get in the courthouse. I wished for Tom Heflin's loud speaking apparatus so we on the outside could hear what was going on inside.

"Favor Change of Eighteenth Amendment," says newspaper headline. Our printer's devil read it and asked: "Which one is that?" That boy's got information for you.

Suggested motto for motorists: Drive slowly and see the world; drive fast and see the next world.—Louisville Times.

When Mr. Hoover comes to deal with the next Congress he is likely to think that his troubles with this one were trifling.—Milwaukee Journal.

MORE LAWS—MORE CRIME

There will be no solution to the crime problem until it is attacked from the standpoint of fundamentals. So long as political-criminal associations are possible, so long as technicalities make it easy for clever lawyers to gain acquittals for the most dangerous law breakers, so long as conflicting laws and dubious legal procedure is permitted to impede justice—crime will continue rampant.

Those who advocate more restrictive laws as a cure seem to fail to realize that nothing sound can be built on a shaky foundation. A multitude of authorities have attempted to point out the flaws in our legal system, our prison system and the like, but for the most part they have spoken to deaf ears. Our much vaunted American efficiency is apparently impotent in the matter of crime correction.

Mr. Coolidge gets a dollar a word for his writings. Who remembers the old days when a President had no chance for promotion.—Akron (Ohio) Beacon-Journal.

Certainly the gloom is thick enough in most places to be cut with a knife. The more optimistis of the "experts" tell us that this is always the case at the end of a panic and is an indication that we will soon be on the upgrade again.

THORSBY SECTION

(S. E. Norton, Manager)

The Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Chilton County will meet in annual session at Thorsby Baptist Church for an all day session on Thursday, January 21st; opening at 10 a.m. It is hoped there will be a full attendance.

The three Circles of the Baptist B. Y. P. U. will hold a joint meeting in their church, opening at 2 p.m. Wednesday January 27th. Remember the day and date for this important meeting.

The community union prayer meeting for January will be held at the Thorsby Baptist church at 7 p.m. this week, Wednesday. A cordial invitation is extended to all the people of Thorsby to attend this meeting.

Next Sunday, January 25, will be regular morning and evening services at the Thorsby Baptist Church.

Miss Alta Each, leader of the Jr. Christian Endeavor Society, which meets at the Congregational church at 5 p.m. each Sunday, reports a good attendance in spite of the very unfavorable weather conditions. A cordial invitation is extended to all children of Thorsby not already enrolled in a similar organization.

The illustrated lecture given by Rev. J. E. Each last Sunday evening at the Congregational church on, "The challenge of the Mining Camps" was a graphic portrayal of the rough life and influences of these elements of pioneer life. Many of which have beginnings of the settlements which are now thriving cities. As an indication that these lectures meet with public approval, we may say the house was well filled.

The annual meeting of the Ladies Guild of Thorsby was held Friday afternoon, January 16th, at the home of Mrs. C. S. Howard. Reports of the officers for the past year were read, and officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: Mrs. Hattie M. Gerald, president; Mrs. J. E Each, vice president; Mrs. S. E. Norton, secretary and Mrs. E. W. Butler, treasurer.

The annual meeting of the United Protestant church of Thorsby, was held at the church Wednesday evening, January 14th. Reports of officers of the church and its various departments showed the church to be in a flourishing condition and having no debts, except a desire to be of service to as many as possible in the community and the larger field of home and foreign missions.

The ladies of the church served a bountiful supper, as usual, preceding the meeting, something in the way of a "love feast" which was greatly enjoyed by the goodly number present.

When it came to election of officers for the ensuing year, Mr. Norton, whose name was proposed for clerk, got up and stated that having served the church in some official capacity for more than a quarter of a century, and now being so physically handicaped that it was impossible for him to perform the duties of the clerk's office, he very much desired to be relived and see some younger person given the office. Mrs. H. M. Gerald and William Each were nominated, and Mrs. Gerald was elected by substantial majority. When it came to election of treasurer, Mr. Butler was nominated, having served for many years, he also requested that he be relieved and a younger person given the office. He placed in nomination Mr. J. L. Mixson, cashier of the Bank of Thorsby, who was elected.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Foss spent Monday in Birmingham.

Miss Naemi Turnquist is leaving the bank in Thorsby, where she has been employed for several weeks, to accept a position in the City National Bank, in Selma, where she gets more pay and better prospects for promotion.

For deacons, E. W. Butler and A. N. Laurell were elected. Mrs. S. E. Norton and Mrs. C. C. Peterson were elected deaconesses to succeed themselves, and Carl C. Petersen was elected a trustee for three years to succeed himself. Mrs. H. M. Gerald was elected Sunday School superintendent and Mrs. S. E. Norton assistant superintendent, in charge of the primary department, to succeed themselves.

Miss Sadie Shannon, of Montgomery, spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Nels Petersen, in Thorsby.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gray spent Sunday in Prattville with Mrs. Gray's mother.

Mrs. Nels Petesen has been quite ill for the past two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Franklin, with Peggy Mims, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Collins motored to Montgomery Sunday evening.

Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Lowery have been on the sick list for the past two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Walker and Mrs. Lee Pate motored to Deatsville Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Whitey and Mr. Carl Posey of Birmingham were Saturday guests of Mrs. T. W. Robinson.

Stoughton Bice has secured a position in Montgomery, and left Monday to begin work.

Olite, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Bice, who was quite ill last week, is better.

Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Wood spent Friday in Birmingham.

Mrs. J. W. Powers, who went to New Orleans to spend Christmas with her mother, has been in a hospital there for an operation, and is expected home in about two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hayes, Miss Caroline Skinn and Robert Carlson made a trip to Gadsden last Wednesday.

Rev. and Mrs. E. H. Carleton of Birmingham were spend the day guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Laurell on Monday. Rev. Carleton was formerly pastor of the Laurell's before they moved to Thorsby.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Hansen had as dinner guests last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Johnson.

Hal Broadhead of Clanton enrolled January 19th as a freshman in Thorsby Institute.

Miss Bertha Littleton from Birmingham spent the week end in Thorsby visiting her sister, Mrs. Emmett Billingsley.

Mrs. A. P. Villadsen of Tuscaloosa has been spending the past week at the home of her mother, Mrs. T. W. Robinson.

Miss Ruth Gerald of Birmingham spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Hattie M. Gerald.

The Ladies Guild will meet this week, Thursday, with Mrs. Evelyn Christ. All are cordially invited.

Mr. I. S. Gerald and five young men friends from Birmingham came to Thorsby Saturday for a day's hunting.

Miss Ella Howard spent the week end in Clanton with Miss Helen Diefenderfer.

Word was received in Thorsby last week of the death of Clara Gerald, wife of Guy H. Gerald. Both were formerly residents of Thorsby, and well known here.

On Saturday night, January 24, the Scottish Concert Company will give the second lyceum course in the Thorsby Institute auditorium. The company will be dressed in kilts and will present folk songs, folk dances and comedy. Those who have seen this company in other places recommend it very highly. Single admission, 50c for adults; 35c for students, in either the public school or the institute.

The company consists of three women and one man. Miss Mary McMahon, the most famous of all Scottish sopranos in America, starred with Sir Harry Lauder in his last New York City engagement in the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York. Miss Louise Graham, Scottish dancer, has won over 200 prizes for her dancing and best dressed lady highlander. She was solo dancer with Princess Pat's Band. Her dancing features include highland fling, shean trews, Irish jig, Scotch reel and others. Mr. Alec Kelvin is now one of America's best known Scotch comedians. He is a winner also in competitive bagpipe playing, and a well known figure for many years in the music halls of England and Scotland. Miss Doris S. Kimbal, accompanist, is the fourth member of the group. In the last year and a half this quartet has filled more than three hundred engagements.

BACK FROM CALIFORNIA

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to write a little about our trip to California. We don't hardly know which end to start at. Might as well begin at Lousiana with bridge one-eighth of a mile long. Of course that is not much, but we just hop over into Texas, into the desert, where you go for miles and miles and don't see one thing but thorny cacti of all kinds. The earth, just as level as your floor, but not one inch of soil about it. Now that is one part of Texas. You will come to some stock farms, where they irrigate the land. They have grass and cotton and a few other things, but cactus is about the biggest thing we saw in Texas.

If we had space we could tell you a whole lot about New Mexico and Arizona. Will just drop a thought here about Coolidge dam and the Rocky Mountains, which begin at Miami, Arizona. Now listen, be ready to hold your breath when you get to the mountain if you are a bit chicken hearted, you will have to rest. It is very common to see a fellow hanging his head out of the car vomiting. You know these Rockies are so high that one can look down at the cars below, and they look like ten-cent toy cars running along the pavement. Now that's no joke. And when you get on top there is a sign telling you that you are now 3,880 feet above sea level. Up some aren't you?

Now we slip over into California. If you should go on the train, get to Los Angeles, see hundreds of bushels of oranges and lemons hanging on the tree, and beds of flowers and cross the Sand mountain, about would likely say, yes this is the garden spot of the world. But say, just go through on the automobile, and cross the sand mountain, about 80 miles through, 50 miles of which one doesn't see a sprig of anything, nothing but sand. Mountains as large as the courthouse, and then a hole you could bury it in; and the wind blowing like a storm, that does not seem much like a garden spot does it?

But we must say we had a fine, enjoyable trip. Wouldn't take anything for it. Wish everyone who reads this could take the same trip.

If you would like to hear what we have to say about it, just come over any night and we will be glad to tell you all about it. You know we can't tell it on paper. Next week will give some data on the city of Los Angeles and the big religious structure known over the world as Angeles Temple.—Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mims.

A statement from Mr. H. B. Oliver, president and cashier of the bank, is worthy of reproduction here. He says the bank is now on a sound basis, and prepared to take care of former patrons, and will do its part in helping farmers through the present crisis, which we are hopeful will gradually disappear.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

Our Sunday School went above one hundred last Sunday. Parents come and bring your children. We meet at 9:45 a. m. Keep faith with God.

The pastor will preach at 11 a. m., and 7 p. m. He finds no pleasure in speaking to unoccupied seats. They are so quiet and senseless. The seats may get to heaven, but what about the folks who should fill them.

Church-going is a habit, and you need to form this habit. If you miss going to church two Sundays in succession, it will be doubly hard for you to go the third Sunday. Give to God as much fidelity as you give to your business.

LAW MAKERS ASK FOR DROUTH AID

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 18.—Alabama Senators and members of the House of Representatives in session Friday unanamously passed a joint resolution appealing to Secretary of Agriculture and the Director of Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture to be as liberal and generous as possible in allotting to the farmers of Alabama drouth and storm funds for the purchase of seed, feed and fertilizer. Representative R. J. Goode, Wilcox and Senator Craft, Mobile, introduced the resolution.

After stating the seriousness of the situation because of the extreme drouth in many areas in Alabama resulting in "almost total crop failure, especially of gardens, food and feed crops" the resolution read:

Be it resolved by the House, the Senate concurring that the Legislature of Alabama hereby appeals to the Secretary of Agriculture to be as liberal and generous as possible in allotting to the farmers of Alabama, the drouth and storm loan funds made available by the Congress of the United States for the purchase of seed, feed, and fertilizer.

DEPARTMENT SUSPENDS SEEDS FROM SALE

To assure farmers that they actually secure seed of the kind, purity and germination for which they pay the feed division of the Department of Agriculture and Industries suspended from sale 43 shocks of oats, rys, winter peas, vetch and barley during the past three months, reports L. N. Allen, chief of the division, to Seth P. Storrs, commissioner. Twenty-one of those suspended from sale were misbranded and 22 untagged.

"It was necessary to employ this method of the Department because the dealers had failed to comply with the agricultural seed law" Mr. Allen said. "In the case of the misbranded rye, we found that Western rye was being sold as Southeastern-grown Abruzzi rye." As a result of this discovery, prosecution of a grain company was brought by the United States Department of Agriculture, for violating the interstate commerce law in shipping seed misbranded.

MANY FARMERS ARE SCARCE OF HAY

Fifty-five per cent of Alabama farmers saved no hay last year, according to F. W. Gist, statistician of the Department of Agriculture, who said: "Only Calhoun and Henry are outstanding in the large portion of farms saving hay, while in 16 counties more than three-fourths of the farms reported none."

Bilious, Dizzy, Drowsy Feeling

"When I was a child, if I did not feel well, or if I had a cold, my mother gave me Black-Draught," says Mrs. Orpha Hill, of Wofford, Ky. "When I was married, it became a family medicine in my own home, as it was in my mother's.

"I take it for headache and especially for constipation. When I get bilious, my skin gets yellow and I have a very bad taste in my mouth, and a drowsy feeling all during the day. My eyes burn and I get dizzy, or my head is 'swimming.' When I take Black-Draught, it seems to drive the impurities out of my system and I feel fine. I am seldom without this reliable remedy."

NEW YORK NURSE

MISS EDNA WANNENBERG says no one can take course of Sargon without being greatly benefitted.

"For three or four years I suffered from sluggist liver and constipation. My skin was sallow. I had no ambition or desire to work. I was nervous and dizzy, had severe headaches, and could not sleep.

"It is nothing short of remarkable the way Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills relieved me of these troubles. I am now simply bubbling over with new energy and vitality. I do not believe it possible for anyone suffering as I was to take a course of Sargon without being greatly benefited."—Miss Wannenberg lives at 112 E. 81st St., New York City.

WEST CHILTON

Everybody seems to be getting accustomed to the present depression. It is not so monotonous as the crash of the nineties.

Major Foshee of Sand Mountain, on the M. & O. Railroad, has located at E. O. Dawson's.

Monroe Atchison of Macedonia died Friday morning with pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Broockmeyer of Birmingham attended Mr. Atchison's funeral Friday.

Mrs. Lilly Brazwell's little son has been sick with malaria.

Several from Jemison were at Mr. Atchison's burial Friday, viz: D. L. Langston, Mr. Cobb, Rev. J. N. Scott, Prof. Montgomery and wife, C. G. Glass and wife.

The sad news has reached us that John F. Armstrong of Barnegat, N. J. is dead. Died on January 12 very suddenly. He formerly lived here.

Two burials at Macedonia Thursday. The little child of Willie Hayes and the child of Ernest Warr. Rev. Lawrence conducted the funerals.

John F. Armstrong

Died at his home in Barnegat, New Jersey, January 12, at 7.0 a. m. Mr. Armstrong was about 73 years old. He died suddenly. He had been suffering with heart trouble for about 2 years. Mr. Armstrong was born and reared in West Chilton, near Macedonia. He is survived by his wife, one son, two daughters, and two sisters, Mrs. Sims of Boothton, and Mrs. Smith of Montevallo.

He lived a quiet, harmless life. A good neighbor, a kind husband, a kind father. He was a descendent of one of the pioneer families coming to West Chilton, nearly a century ago. He leaves several relatives here, many friends, and a number of relatives in and around Clanton to mourn his passing.

It is sad to review the scenes of his youth, and think he will be here no more. We have hope that he will have life in the eternal future, based on the fact that the supreme being will have all men saved or recovered from death, and brought to an accurate knowledge of the truth. He now sleeps undisturbed in peace. We extend to the sorrowing family our sympathy. Burial was in Barnegat, New Jersey, January 1.

Monroe Atchison

Died at his home near Macedonia January 16. He was the victim of pneumonia. He lived to middle age. He leaves father, mother, six brothers, two sisters, wife, three children and many friends and relatives to mourn his departure.

Monroe was a good man, a Christian. He had been a man of frail body practically all his life. He was a lovely man, a descendent of the Atchison family, coming from South Carolina to West Chilton early in the last century.

He is gone. We regret his passing. We have for him hope for eternal life in the beautiful beyond. He is not gone forever, but will live again.

The burial was in Macedonia cemetery, conducted by Rev. B. Lawrence, attended by many of his friends.

There was a rich profusion of floral offerings. We sympathize with the sorrowing family in their bereavement.

J. L. MASSEY DIED IN KNOXVILLE

J. L. Massey, brother of Mrs. S. M. Connatser, of Thorsby, died at his home in Knoxville, Tennessee, Sunday night. His death was caused by pneumonia.

Mr. Connatser went to Knoxville Monday to attend the funeral. Mrs. Connatser could not go on account of illness.

PLANS ARE COMPLETE FOR JUNIOR PROM AT AUBURN

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 12.—With Miss Myrtle Ellen Lowden of Mobile chosen to lead the grand march and Jimmie Green and his Chicago orchertra of radio fame signed to furnish the music, plans are complete for the Junior Prom at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, to be held on January 22, 23, and 24. Announcement to this effect is made by Sebel Shaks, of Selma, chairman of the student social committee.

This series of seven dances, beginning on Thursday evening, January 22, and lasting through Saturday constitutes the peak of the year's social events on the Auburn campus.

Miss Lowder, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Lowder of Mobile, will be escorted during the grand march on the evening of January 23 by Mr. J. D. Bush, president of the junior class from Mobile. After graduating from high school in Mobile, Miss Lowder attended Sweet Briad College at Lynchburg, Va., for two yeras, where she featured prominently in both scholastic and social activities.

Mr. Bush, a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, is studying civil engineering at Auburn. He is popular with the student body, having been previously elected to the position of class vice president during both his freshman and sophomore years. In addition, Mr. Bush is one of the best athletes on the campus. After making his freshman football numeral, he became a regular on the varsity squad during his sophomore and junior years, and was the star of several games last fall. He was recently honored by being elected co-captain of the 1931 football team to serve in this capacity along with M. V. (Chattie) Davidson of Montgomery.

Invitations to attend the dances will be received by approximately 1,000 young ladies in Alabama, Georgia and other Southern states. The young ladies will be entertained with house parties at several of the fraternity houses, which will be given over to the visitors and their chaperones during the period of the dances.

Jimmie Green's orchestra became popular with southern listeners during its radio programs from station WENR in Chicago. WAPI will broadcast four hours of the dance music direct from the Alumni Gymnasium on the campus, including the periods 11:00 to 12:00, noon, on Friday and Saturday, and 4:00 to 5:00 on Saturday afternoons.

The prom begins on Thursday evening, January 22, with an opening dance, 9:30 to 1:00 a. m. Friday morning the interfraternity council will sponsor the dancing from 11:00 to 1:00 p. m., followed by an executive cabinet tea dance Friday afternoon, 4:00 to 6:00. The most gala affair of the series, the junior ball, comes Friday evening, 9:30 to 1:30 a. m., at which time the grand march will be held. Keys, interfraternity organization, will sponsor the morning dance on Saturday, 11:00 to 1:00 p. m., with the A. Club giving the tea dance in the afternoon, 4:00 to 6:00 p. m. A farewell dance Saturday evening, 8:30 until midight, brings the prom to a close.

The following members of the student social committee will assist chairman Sabel Shanks, along with the faculty social committee, and Miss Zoe Dobbs, social director and dean of women, in staging the dances, T. G. Amason of Ramer, Rex Sikes of Luverne, E. A. Bell of Anderson, S. C., Render Cross of Waverly, J. D. Bush of Mobile, Milton Culver of Gadsden, Frank Smith of Eutaw, William Paterson of Montgomery, and John Ware of Birmingham.

There are several cases of measles and bad colds around here. Mr. Bernice Childress continues to be sick at his home. It is feared that he is taking pneumonia. Several cases of measles are reported.

Several of the Center Hill singing class went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barnes Saturday night and sang at their birthday party. He has reached the ripe age of 86 years. After the singing they were served cake and candy. They reported a nice time.

Mr. Joseph E. Cobb, our new commissioner, is getting busy. We feel sure that we will get our church road fixed and most especially our rural and school bus route, because they need it.

The weather being so bad we did not have Sunday school last Sunday. Remember there will be singing at this place next Sunday if the weather will permit.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson have moved to one o fB. T. Cobb's places. We welcome them to our community.

STINGY MILLER

Clanton, Alabama, Jan. 20, 1931.
Editor Union, Banner:

This may be some news, at least it is the least bit humorous.

In a certain school in this county the teacher had been lecturing to his class for some time, telling them some of the things that was going to take place on the 19th. The Sheriff taking office, the Governor's inauguration. After telling the class some of the old time customs of our Governor, and a few more things. He asked the class who is the Governor of our State, and as quick as a thought came the answer, "Stingy Miller."—A reader.

me responsible for this failure and for statements that have been told me that even you yourself made them, of course I could not sit idly by and take the responsibility for the failure to perform a duty which was not mine.

Of course, if you did not know the law in this instance or did not attempt to find it out, then I say again that that is not my responsibility. I am sure you in your official capacity as Clerk of the Circuit Court have on numerous occasions secured opinions from the Attorney General and have withheld your official action until such an opinion was secured and which opinion, as you well know, protects you regardless of your actions in the premises if said opinion is followed by you.

Practically every paragraph in your article is full of statements that you are honest and that your intentions were honest. As to this I will raise no issue except to say that this does not mean that you cannot make a mistake, and which did not help the insinuations that were cast at me and the blame that was sought to be laid upon me when it was no more my duty than any other Republican voter in Chilton county. If you had taken the responsibility for your own error or mistake that night or during that time I am sure this newspaper controversy would never have happened. If you had been honest enough to admit that the Democratic ticket was in the same condition of the Republican ticket, it would have helped your crowd to undertsand the situation better.

It is needless for me to repeat the insinuations which at that time went over the county, especially among some of the members of my party who are politically opposed to me. I am sure many of them came in your hearing. If you at that time, or any other person, who was acquainted with the facts, had told these parties just whose duty it was to file this declaration and that I, in going to the Attorney General, was pursuing a course that you yourself had done and every other officer of the county, on many occasions, and was simply trying to stay within the law, then I am sure these insinuations would have been stopped. However, they continued to arise and then is when I presented my side to the public. Now to refute these insinuations I wrote J. W. Brassell, Assistant Attorney General, to whom I presented this matter to give me a letter stating exactly what I said and what was done the day I came to him for an opinion upon this subject. I print herein said letter for your benefit as well as others.

December 20, 1930

Hon. L. H. Reynolds,
Judge of Probate,
Clanton, Alabama.
Dear Sir:

I have your letter of recent date in which you request that I write you concerning your request for an opinion by this office relative to placing the names of both the Democratic and Republican parties upon the official ballot at the last general election, i.e. November 4, 1930.

My notes of your request as well as your conversation show that there was serious doubt as to whether or not any of the local nominees for local office in your county had complied with the statue in having their names certified by the Chairman of each party. You stated to me "that unless the names of the nominees were placed upon the ticket to be voted in the general election it would cause serious trouble in your county." In keeping with your statement as well as what I conceive the law to be, I wrote an opinion in the rough holding that the names of the nominees should go on the ticket. That opinion was held up and the Attorney General afterwards wrote the opinion himself.

This is substantially the conversation between you and me.—Yours truly, J. W. Brassell, Assistant Attorney General.

I do not know, Mr. Mims, whether or not the insinuations cast around that I was trying to keep the nominees off the ticket were pleasant to you or not. I do believe that upon that night when certain harsh statements were made against me and even at later times, that it was your duty to tell the true facts in this controversy and not by your silence and seeming acquiscence allow this talk to go unabated.

In other words, if you had at that time told them that it was not my duty to have filed this declaration and I was only doing my duty in going to the Attorney General, then I am sure this newspaper controversy would not have been necessary. I will not take time to tell the people of the county how honest I am, because if my official acts for the past twenty years have not proven my honesty then it is too late in the day for me to try to convince you in one newspaper article that I am honest and I think the action in the case and the facts and the law in this controversy between us will prove our honesty and the purpose behind the controversy.

I have already stated in my former article that Mr. Mims did make the positive statement to me that he had never filed the second declaration under Section 588 or any other section of the Code after he had been nominated in the primary, and Mr. Mims in his article now says that he did not make that statement, but merely says that he did not remember, and if you will notice in several parts of his article states that he does not recall ever filing anything. However, several parties told me, among whom are Mr. Perry Gore, Mack Wyatt, J. M. Mims and M. D. Foshee, that Mr. Mims did make the unqualified statement that he had never filed any announcement after the primary, and that it had never been the custom to do so in this county, and two or three parties made the statement to me that Mr. Mims stated that night at the meeting at the Farm Bureau office that he knew nothing of this second statement and that he never filed this second statement. I am submitting herewith this article, the letter of Mr. Gore, wherein he states that he was present and that Mr. Mims did make this statement, and there are other things in his letter which I think will show to the people of this county the true purpose behind some of the members present at this meeting:

Thorsby, Ala., Jan. 20, 1931.
Judge L. H. Reynolds,
Clanton, Ala.,

I was at a meeting at the Farm Bureau office last October the 15. I know it was the night that the printing of the ballots was discussed. I stayed until I saw what the purpose of the meeting was, and that was to brand Judge L. H. Reynolds as one of the measent men in this county. Anybody could tell what the purpose of the meeting was, the campaign was forgotten, and the meeting seemed to be to destroy Reynolds.

Mr. J. Z. Mims said at that meeting that he never heard of the law that requires any one to file a second time after the primary, and that he had never filed the second time.

No one said anything about the Democratic ticket being in the same condition that the Republican ticket was.

I got disgusted and left. I have never seen such a selfish campaign as we had last fall. If this policy is continued our party is doomed to defeat.—Yours truly, T. P. Gore.

I am also submitting herewith the letter of M. D. Foshee, who also states positively that Mr. Mims did make this statement.

January 19, 1931.
Judge L. H. Reynolds,
Clanton, Ala.,
Dear Sir:

On the morning of October 16th, 1930, before the crowd left for Montgomery to see the Attorney General I met Mr. J. Z. Mims in front of the courthouse and we were discussing the printing of the ballots, and Mr. Mims said that it was something new for the candidates to have to file their announcement and the appointment of the one to receive and disburse the money, after the primary. At that time I told him that it had been the practice in this county for the candidates to file said announcement and the name of the person to collect and expend money for them, for a number of years. I also told him that he filed said paper two years ago and that all the other Republican nominees did so too, whereupon he said that he did not file two years ago, and that he had never filed any announcement after the primary, and that it had never been the custom to do so in this county. Mr. Mims made this statement without any qualification whatever.—Respectfully, M. D. Foshee.

Mr. Mims states in his letter that he wants to be fair and does not want to hurt any man, but I would like to briefly state some of his actions and then, as he has done, leave the matter up to the people of the county as to whether he was fair or not. I have been elected by the people of this county for four times. I have never, so far as I have ever known, been accused or has it ever been intimated that I was in the least a traitor to my own party. I was fighting the battles of the Republican party before Mr. Mims was ever known to the party, and the people will be my judge to the fact that I have not ceased fighting. My party has never called me but that I have given of my time and money even when my health would not permit me to go out and fight for the Republican party, not only in Chilton County, but in Alabama as well. Even in the stormy past that I have had politically I have never heard a Democrat or Republican say that I was a traitor to the Republican party, or that I was failing to stand by my party. Now we come to the point when I am finishing serving twenty-four years in office, and a question comes up in my office about the legality of the ballots, and I present this matter to the Attorney General of Alabama with the earnest insistence, as the letter of the Attorney General shows, that the opinion should be written if possible, allowing the candidates to go upon the ballot. On the same day that this matter was presented and when I learned there was a possibility of the Attorney General ruling adversely, I immediately come back to Clanton and the very first man I talked to about the matter was Mr. J. Z. Mims, chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, and I advised him that it would be best to go to Montgomery the next day and try to get the Attorney General to change his opinion. Without any warning, without any notice, I next find Mr. Mims about ten o'clock at night in the office of the Farm Bureau holding a meeting, and parties who were present told me that Mr. Mims himself practically branded me as a traitor to my party and insinuated and inferred that I was doing my best to keep the candidates off the ticket and try to defeat the Republican party in Chilton County. Mr. Mims thought it well to call up at that time of night other parties to come to the meeting, and I lying asleep in bed and only a few blocks away was not informed of this meeting, was not given an opportunity to present my side in this affair. Mr. Mims knows full well who started the insinuations against me in this matter and the people know full well who they have heard these statements from. I have been reliably informed that this meeting practically turned into an anti-Reynolds meeting and the statements were made that the true facts had not come out but that they would come out, and you, Mr. Mims, remained there in that audience, many of the statements coming from you, and yet you were not fair enough and were not honest enough there to tell the people that I was only doing my duty in trying to abide by the law, but that you yourself as chairman had failed to do your duty. If you had said this, then I readily agree with you that there would have been no need of this newspaper controversy.

Could anything have been fairer, Mr. Mims, that night than to have called me to your meeting, as I was the one to print the ballots, and have given me a chance if you and some of the crowd wanted to lay this blame upon me, to defend my own side. You and some of the parties there were mighty quick to jump to the conclusion, after all these years that I have been a Republican, to be convinced that I was a traitor to my party. You asked in one place in your article who could have prevented this matter, and I can very briefly inform you of this. The candidates placed their case in your hands as manager and it was your duty to look after their interest. If you had simply filed this declaration which you yourself had always filed on prior occasions and which you know, as the law states, must be done, then this whole matter would have been prevented. You are the only one who could have prevented it.

You have been charged with running a campaign last fall to your own selfish end, and that you would have one campaign without Reynolds having anything to do with it. It is probably alright to try to knock individual men out of the party, but when you ignore several of the defeated candidates and several office holders as J. D. Collins, S. M. Pate, J. T. Rockett, G. W. Murrah, and many more leading Republicans, you will find that in the end you will defeat the Republican party in Chilton County. I think, Mr. Mims, this time the people know full well of the purpose behind this controversy and the purpose of that meeting that night, and I don't think your continuance to deny statements and try to shift the blame to me will help much at this late date. After my loyalty to my party for thirty-five years had been slandered, and after some of the people had been poisoned against me, you seemed to be content to let the matter drop and seemed to state that I would be wrong in putting my case before the people. I figured you had had your say at that meeting in my absence and that certainly I should not be blamed for writing in a public newspaper where you and everyone else could see, giving you my side of the affair, and in your last article if you had still wanted to treat me fair you could have taken the blame for not doing certain things under the law which was your duty to do. But no, you state that you were honest and that you were right, and the truth is that you see now that I was done an injustice and yet you are trying to justify your position by saying that you were honest and right, but that if you did err it was unintentional. You forgot, Mr. Mims, that when mistakes are made and the harm is done, this does not undo or wipe out the harm done by your misake even though you state that you were honest.

You will recall the last time that my office and yours were examined I heard that your office was in bad shape and that many mistakes had been made, that you were charged with something like $2,000.00 by the examiner, which had not been paid by you into the county treasury, and that you had not filed your bond in the time the law required. I did not take men into my office and say that you had betrayed the trust the people had imposed in you, but on the other hand I tried to help you; and in my effort to help you, made a trip to Montgomery in your interest, and the least you could have done when this question of the ballot came up would have been to have stated to the crowd that night that I was only doing my duty. I will not state to the people how unfair you have been to me in this matter and how you have sought to dig up something that would ruin me politically and possibly promote your political interest, but for the past three months you have been writing and trying to get something in this matter which would no doubt try to justify your position. My purpose, since you have stated your side in the paper, is to state mine.

As I have stated, you not only would not ask my assistance and that of many more Republicans during the last campaign, but I recall on one occasion when you as secretary issued a call to elect delegates on August 12, which was the date of the primary, and I went to Mr. Mims and asked him to change this so the people could tell what time of day to meet and that this would cause confusion unless a definite time was set, and then the call was changed to be held from one to two o'clock: I happened to know that when this matter was presented to Mr. Mims and some others that it was resented by them for me to make any suggestions in reference to the campaign, and there are other instances where even my attempting to assist in the campaign was resented by Mr. Mims.

Mr. Mims says he had no way of knowing whether or not the candidates had filed the proper papers in the office of the Judge of Probate. As to this, I will say again that Mr. Mims was chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, and it was his duty to look after that matter for the candidates. If he had known what to file, as he was supposed to know, he certainly could also have known whether or not he had filed the papers. Then too, if he had come to my office, he could have found out what had been filed. Mr. Mims refers to asking me about a file when I told him about the ballot-printing matter. I thought he referred to the 1930 file, which had been placed somewhere in my office, and was not immediately at hand. I told him that the old files relating to printing ballots in former campaigns had been put up. Some were upstairs in a plunder room, and I told him I would look them up the next day. But he never came back to my office to see about the files any more.

In just a few hours after he left my office he was in his meeting at the Farm Bureau office, trying to poison the minds of the candidates and the people against me. He made no further effort to find out the facts in the case, but told Republicans in his office that I had tried to deliver the Republican party into the hands of the Democrats. And yet he says he did not want to hurt anybody. After he had stuck his poison dagger into me he hollered for peace, and declared that for the good of the party no more should be said.

The worst political enemy I ever had has never charged me with a more vile crime than he did against me in this ballot printing matter. Yet he says if he had it all to go over again, he would do the same thing over.

Mr. Mims claims to be so honest and so interested in letting the people know all about my political and official actions, I want to ask him why he has never let the people of this county know what was in the last State Examiner's report on his office. Your office of Circuit Clerk belongs to the people of the county, Mr. Mims. You are supposed to be taking care of their business, and they are entitled to know how you have managed their business. I published the examiner's report on my office, which was made at the same time as yours. Why did you not publish yours?

Mr. Mims seems to want to impress the people that I am to blame because I did not look after his duties for him when he was manager of the last campaign. I want to ask him if he thinks it was my duty to file his official bond after he had been re-elected Circuit Clerk in 1928.

Section 6721 required him to file his official bond in the Probate Office. Section 2607 says his bond must be filed in 40 days after he had been declared elected to the office. Section 2610 says that failure to file bond under Sections 6721 2607 vacates the office and requires the Probate Judge to notify the appointing officer of the vacancy.

Now, notice this: After Mr. Mims was re-elected Circuit Clerk in 1928, he had 40 days after he was declared elected to file his official bond in the Probate office. He did not file his bond until September 24, 1929. I ask the people if this looks like Mr. Mims is so honest and efficient as he claims to be? Under the law he neglected and failed to qualify for the office to which the people had elected him. His failure to file his bond was brought to light in the report of the State Examiner.

When it was found that he had virtually vacated the office by failing to file his bond, I did all I could to help him and keep him from being put out of office. That is the way I treated him about his failures and mistakes. Yet, he would brand me as a traitor to my party and a traitor to him as an official of Chilton County, when I was doing my very best in the last campaign to get around his neglect and have the names of the candidates placed on the ballots.

In 1926 Mr. Mims was manager of the Republican campaign in Chilton County. He filed his accounts in the Probate office, and those accounts show that he spent the money of the candidates to hire automobiles to haul voters to and from the election, which action by him was a pure violation of the criminal law.

Now, in conclusion, I want to say that it appears to me the simplest way to explain the actions of Mr. Mims in the past campaign, and his purpose in the attempted explanation last week is to say that his main interest has been, and is, to fortify himself in his aspirations as a candidate for Probate Judge in the future. It seems that one of his main objectives in this respect is to try to destroy my political influence and to discredit me in the minds of the people of the county. But I am yet happy to face my friends, the Republicans of Chilton County, let them have the facts in all matters, and risk their opinion as to my honesty, integrity, and loyalty to my party and to my county.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

ALABAMA'S COAL PRODUCTION

Birmingham, Jan. 19.—Alabama's coal production for 1930 will approximate 14,600,000 tons according to preliminary surveys released this week by the Alabama Mining Institute, representing all the coal producers of the state.

The estimated 1930 tonnage is 3,900,000 tons below that of 1929 and 6,900,000 below the peak year of 1926 when the tonnage mined in Alabama reached 21,500,000 tons.

Reduction in the coal tonnage during 1930 under 1926 has brought a loss to the state in the payrolls of the coal industry which are spent by miners for farm products, clothing and the like of about $14,500,000. It is pointed out in the preliminary survey that during most of 1930 mines throughout the coal producing sections have been operating only one to three days a week.

In addition to the decrease in payrolls released by the coal industry there has been a further substantial decline in funds expended by the industry for operating mine supplies and for materials required for improvement purposes.

Car loadings of the coal industry in 1930 declined 25 per cent over normal years, reaching only 199,000 cars as compared with 265,000 cars a normal year.

It is estimated that the loss in revenues to Alabama railroads over a normal year, from the shrinkage in coal tonnage during 1930, has aggregated over $4,500,000.

In face of the decline in tonnage, accident prevention work has been increased with the result that there were fewer accidents in Alabama mines last year than in many years preceding.

CHAS. KENNAMER WILL BE U.S. JUDGE

Northern District Attorney Named To Fill Bench Vacant For 13 Months

Washington, Jan. 24.—Unless protests against the appointment are received next week it is expected that the Senate will take favorable action and confirm the nomination of Charles B. Kennamer to be United States Judge for the Middle District of Alabama. Neither Senator Black nor Senator Heflin have any personal objection to the conformation of Mr. Kennamer, whose nomination was submitted to the Senate Saturday.

Senator Black had made no recommendation for the judgeship, which has been vacant 13 months since the death of Judge Henry D. Clayton, realizing the futility of attempting to put forward a Democrat. Senator Heflin had emphasized endorsement of Dempsey Powell, but also had suggested several other names to the Department of Justice.

Kennamer's nomination has been expected for a week since appearance here of a delgation of 15 Republican leaders of the state urging his appointment. He was the single choice of Oliver D. Street, Republican National Committeeman and patronage referee, following Judge Street's withdrawal of his own name from consideration. One of the strongest factors in Kennamer's promotion was an unqualified endorsement by Federal Judge W. I. Grubb.

No objection against Kennamer's confirmation as judge will be entertained if based only upon his residence in the Northern District for the law is in such terms that the judge may come either from the northern or middle district. Other objections which might be raised to Mr. Kennamer were threshed out last year when he was reappointed United States attorney for the Northern District.

Speculation turns now to the appointment of a successor to Kennamer as attorney of the Northern District. It is expected that a Republican will get this office also, but the name of James C. Smith, a Birmingham Democrat, who formerly was assistant district attorney, has been mentioned as among possibilities.

Kennamer Prominent In State G. O. P. Affairs

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 24.—Charles Brent Kennamer, whose fearless prosecution of offenders in the North Alabama hills of Marshall County 20 years ago won him a wide reputation, is the man President Hoover today nominated to be United States judge for the Middle and Northern Districts of Alabama.

Kennamer first began his law practice in 1903 in Guntersville, near where he was born, and two years later became solicitor for Marshall County. He is 56 years old.

The nomination is for the post made vacant in 1929 by the death of the late Judge Henry D. Clayton, of Eufaula. Kennamer at present is United States district attorney for the Northern District of Alabama with headquarters here. He has held the post since 1922.

His activity in behalf of the Republican organization in the state dates back to 1896 and his nomination has the endorsement of Federal Judge W. I. Grubb. He long was associated with Judge Oliver D. Street, also of Guntersville, and director of Republican affairs in the state.

He is a graduate of Georgetown University, at one time was Republican candidate for Congress, and has held various posts in the party organization in Alabama.

Outside his office his interest is centered in his home, his wife and their five children. Week-ends are spent at the home in Guntrsville.

DEMABEL HAS NEW HAIR DRY MACHINE

Women hereabout will be interested to learn that DeMable's Beauty Shop has added materially to its equipment by the recent installation of a hair drying machine. Miss Mabel Howard, proprietor of this popular business in Clanton, stated that she installed this new process for two main reasons. First, it enables her to save time for her customers, and second, it enables her to save time for herself. Then in the broader way of looking at it, this new machine makes possible a better service in every way. Therefore, it fits right in with Miss Howard's big purpose, namely, to give to her patrons here just as good work and just as good service as they can get from any beauty shop anywhere.

We are sure that the ladies will fully appreciate this latest addition to the equipment at DeMabel's.

MRS. MARTIN NIX DIED IN TEXAS

Information was telegraphed to friends in Clanton last Thursday afternoon, stating that Mrs. J. Martin Nix had died at her home in Amorilla, Texas, Thursday morning.

The family of Martin Nix lived in Clanton up until a few years ago, when they left here for Birmingham. The condition of Mrs. Nix's health was bad, and they were forced to go west on her account. They have been living in Amorilla for some time.

Mrs. Nix was a daughter of the late J. M. Potts, of Clanton. She was reared here. Her husband, J. Martin Nix, is a son of the late W. Y. Nix, prominent citizen of the Maplesville community.

We understand that Mrs. Nix was buried at Amorilla. She is survived by her husband and two daughters. The older daughter, Gladys Mae, is married, and lives at Amorilla.

Rural School Leaders Are Encouraged

Speech of Governor Miller Has Heartening Influence Upon Educators

Governor B. M. Miller's pronouncement upon education in the inaugural address has had heartening effect upon rural school leaders, according to Superintendent B. Lawrence of this county. The governor places education in primary position and makes it plain that additional funds for improvement must be provided through economy and through shifting of state appropriations to this point of necessity. In his platform and in his most recent statement. Governor Miller has aligned himself definitely with the most progressive school influences in the state, his views being in accord with the program recommended by the American Legion of Alabama and by the association of county superintendents of education. These statewide organizations both asked for school relief along four specific lines; the provision of nine-months school terms in certain rural centers of each county where school spirit will support such, the appropriation of an adequate school transportation fund, an increase in the rural school building fund, and the elimination of all necessity for tuition fees.

"The public finds it hard to realize," says our local county school head, "that enrollments, building expenses, school trucks, and the ever increased demand by the people for better things educationally has caused the 1927 estimates for even the seven-month minimum term to be far outrun. In 1930, 2,198 school trucks carried 66,499 school children at an expense of $1,418,584 in Alabama; and all this money had to come from funds needed for longer terms and teachers, salaries, since no financial provision for transportation has ever been made by the state legislature. Last year $537,953 was paid by school patrons of our state as tuition fees, most of the amount being paid in rural districts least able to meet such a necessity. These things merely indicate the pressing need for school relief at many points."

NEW BUILDING NOW AT COLLINS CHAPEL CHURCH

Rev. Zack Appleton, the pastor, stated while in Clanton last Saturday, that the new house of worship at Collins Chapel Baptist Church is now ready for use. The first services in the new building will be held next Sunday, February 1st.

The regular preaching services and Sunday school will be held Sunday morning. In the afternoon there will be a community singing. Rev. Appleton extends a cordial invitation to all friends everywhere to come and join in the services.

A special invitation is extended to singers from other communities to come Sunday afternoon and have a part in the program.

Accoding to Rev. Appleton, the new building at Collins Chapel, is one of which the community is justly proud. It is larger and more comfortable, and far better adapted to the work and uses of the church and community than was the old structure.

"I was suprised," said Brother Appleton, "at the ease with which the folks of Collins Chapel put over their building project. Owing to the hard times, I felt a bit nervous over the project, but it was the easiest done of any job of the kind I ever saw."

Miss Madelyn Orr is going into the business of writing fire insurance. She has made connection with two reliable companies, and will begin soliciting business right away.

Last Chance To Pay Poll Tax

Important Matter Called To Attention of the People By J. N. Dennis, Chairman of Republican Executive Committee of Chilton County

To the Voters of Chilton County:

I take this means to remind you that this week is the last chance you will have to pay your poll tax and qualify yourselves to vote this year. Ordinarily the first day of February is the last day on which to pay poll tax. Since the first day of February comes on Sunday this time, Saturday of this week is therefore the last day on which poll taxes may be paid.

It is very likely that some propositions of very vital interest will come up to be voted upon in Alabama this year. The legislature will very likely place before the people some measures to amend the State Constitution, or a bond issue of some kind. In the event such action is taken by the legislature, every citizen should then be qualified to vote on such matters when they come before the people.

In order to be able to vote in such instances as may arise this year, those who are subject to poll tax must pay it by Saturday night of this week in order to be qualified.

I urge the importance of this matter to our people, and insist that all who are subject to poll tax see that it is paid this week. And lastly, let me remind you that the money that you pay for poll tax goes to the support of our public schools, which fact alone makes it worth your while to pay it.—Respectfully, J. N. Dennis, Chairman Republican Executive Committee of Chilton County.

CHILTON COUNTY ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED IN BIRMINGHAM

A number of the former residents of Chilton County, who now live in the Birmingham District held a get-together meeting recently, and organized The Chilton County Association. An interesting account of the occasion has been sent to The Union-Banner by Mrs. Kate Jones, who was elected secretary of the Association. Mrs. Jones said:

ALFRED POPWELL DIED LAST THURSDAY NIGHT

Alfred Popwell one of the pioneer citizens of Chilton County, died last Thursday night at the Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton. He had beed ill at his home in South Clanton for several weeks, and was carried to the Hospital Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Popwell has been a popular figure in and around Clanton for many years. He was 86 years of age. Since reaching the years of manhood he had lived just south of Clanton, where he several years ago acquired extensive land holdings. He took unusual care of his estates, and even today when virgin pine timber is practically unknown in this section of Alabama, many acres of the lands of Mr. Popwell are covered by tall stately long leaf pines that have grown in beauty and value for the last half a century under the daily observation of his watchful eyes.

The father of Alfred Popwell was Reuben Popwell. His mother was Sally (Moore) Popwell. The Popwell family came to Alabama from South Carolina many years ago.

Mr. Popwell is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Anne Downs, a sister of Gip and Doll Downs. Their two sons are L. D. and Dutch Popwell, of Clanton. They have two daughters, Mrs. Wiley Gray of Clanton, and Mrs. Bud Thomas of Birmingham.

The funeral was conducted at the home in South Clanton Friday afternoon by Elder Kelley. Burial was at Popwell cemetery, in charge of Martin. The little cemetery where the body lies at rest is only a few yards from the place where Alfred Popwell lived for half a century. It is surrounded by the tall pines of his own forest.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

Sheriff Gillespie Asks For Support and Co-operation of People of the County

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to say that as Sheriff of the county it will be my duty to enforce all laws, and I am again pledging the people of the county that if an allwise and merciful God will give me health and strength I am going to enforce all the laws impartially and to the full extent of my ability. But from my long and varied experience as an enforcement officer I know and realize that if I make a success in trying to enforce the law I have got to have the cooperation and support of the good people of the county, and for that reason I am appealing to the good and law-abiding citizenship of the county who believe in good government and who believe in trying to make conditions better for the boys and girls of our county, to give me their full cooperation and support.

In conclusion I wish to say to all the people of the county, regardless of politics, religion or your financial standing, I will appreciate you visiting the Sheriff's office and furnishing me or any of my deputies any information that you may have in regard to any violations of the laws anywhere in the county. And I will positively assure you that any information (verbal or written) furnished the Sheriff's office will be kept strictly confidential.

I am respectfully your servant,
W. H. GILLESPIE, Sheriff.

ROSE BOWL GAME TO BE SHOWN HERE

Mr. C. W. Wade, proprietor of the Wadesonian Theatre in Clanton, announced that he has on program for Friday and Saturday of this week a film that shows the complete transaction that was enacted at Rose Bowl, in California, on New Year's Day when the Crimson Tide of Alabama deafeated the Washington State University football team in the great intersectional football classic of this winter.

Sports enthusiasts in Chilton County will surely welcome and appreciate the bringing to Clanton of this picture. It has been shown in some of the adjacent cities, and has been pronounced the next best thing to actually seeing the game while it was being played.

According to the advertisement of the Wadesonian Theatre, this picture will be a part of the program on Friday and Saturday nights of this week.

Pecan Trees Set At Friendship Church

Proceeds From Sale of Fruit Will Go to Church Treasury

Last week thirteen pecan trees were set out on the acre of ground belonging to Friendship church. The trees were set forty feet apart on three sides of the acre and twenty feet from the line. When the trees go to bearing it is intended that the proceeds from the sale of the pecans go into the church treasury.

Rev. J. Robert Bean preached two excellent sermons at this place Sunday and Sunday night. Fair crowds attended, but not nearly so many as should have attended considering the fine weather. The people of Friendship community are mighty careless about church attendance. Even two of the deacons did not show up at either of the services last Sunday. Of course, they may have had a legitimate excuse for not attending. We hope that the people of Friendship community, especially the church members, will take more interest in church work and attend more regularly.

We have a splendid pastor in Rev. Bean, and better sermons than he preaches cannot be heard any place. He preches the plain Gospel, and if the people don't hear it and heed it, the blame will be held at their hands. Rev. Bean has adopted as his slogan: "If I preach the Gospel tell others; if I don't tell me." If people would do this—and it would be no trouble and only a duty—one could see a great change at Friendship in a short while.

If there are things going on among members of Friendship church that should not be, and we are sure that there are, it will not help matters for the members to stay away. Those who are trying to keep the good work going on need your help and need it badly.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Collins have moved back into their home near the church, and we are glad to have them close by again. They are both good church workers, and they can always be depended on to do their part.

Let us urge everybody to attend Sunday School and preaching just as often and regular as possible. Your help and influence are needed.—T. E. Wyatt, church clerk.

PROF. WARR RECEIVES DEGREES FROM COLUMBIA

Friends of Prof. Warr, principal of the Chilton County High School, are gratified to learn that he has received his Master of Arts Degree from Columbia University in New York. This is a distinction that comes to comparitively few people, and marks the attainment of a place in life that set one up among the most distinguished scholars of the country.

Since completing his prepartory college work some years ago, Prof. Warr has been engaged in teaching in the schools of Alabama, and going to Columbia each summer. He has put in summer courses at the New York institution each summer for the past six years.

The people of Chilton County are proud of the attainments of our high school principal. He is generally recognized as being one of the best men who has ever been at the head of the Chilton County High School. We congratulate him upon winning his degree from Columbia. And further, we are proud of the manner in which he has conducted his affairs at the County High School.

FARMERS DAY IN CLANTON FEB. 4

Entertainment Will Be Put On By International Harvester Co.

Next Wednesday, February the 4, is the day which has been selected by the International Harvester Company, on which they will furnish a great free educational entertainment for the farmers of Chilton County.

The occasion is in celebration of the one hundreth anniversary of the invention of the McCormick reaper. It is being put on at strategic points all over the United States. Farmers of Chilton County are fortunate that one day of this entertainment feature has been awarded to this section of Alabama.

Arrangements for the big day are being handled through the Birmingham office of the International Harvester Company, in conjunction with Mr. James Turner, manager of the business of C. E. Hornsby, local representative of the International Harvester Company, in Clanton.

The program will consist of motion pictures, short instuctive talks by officials of the Harvester Company, and others. One of the unusual features of the day will be a showing of an exact reproduction of the first reaping machine as built by the inventor, Cyrus H. McCormick, in 1831, just one hundred years ago.

The center of attractions for the day will be the Wadesonian Theatre, which has been selected by the Harvester Company as the place to put on the program. The theatre was chosen because a big part of the entertainment is a motion picture which is of great interest and educational value to farmers and their families.

The following is the program which will be carried out:

10:00—Introduction. (a) Short talk by county agent. (b) County agent to introduce dealer. (c) Dealer to introduce Branch manager of International Harvester Company.

10:15—Talk, Invention of the reaper, by the branch manager or assistant branch manager.

10:45—Film, romance of the reaper.

11:35—Registration of farmers and distribution of centennial medallion souvenirs.

12:00—Lunch.

1:00—Film power farming in the South; preliminary remarks by O. I. Cunningham, advertising man, International Harvester Company.

1:40—Talk, Importance of after sales Service, by E. L. Freeman, service manager, Birmingham branch, International Harvester Company.

2:00—Adjournments to dealer's store for open discussion on care, adjustment an doperation of machines, especially power farm machines.

Mr. James Turner, manager of the local International Harvester dealer's place in Clanton, wishes to extend a personal invitation to all farmers and their families to come to Clanton to this occassion. It is going to be something worth while to you or anyone else.

International Harvester Company is foremost in this country and throughout the world in advancing the interests of the farmers. They are keenly interested in disseminating information among agricultural workers. This anniversary event, celebrated one of the big inventions that has done more perhaps for the advancement of agriculture than any other one thing, has been planned and will be carried out with the purpose of both entertaining and educating those who attend it. Every farmer in Chilton County should bring his whole family and spend the day in Clanton next Wednesday as the guests of the International Harvester Company. It will be the opportunity of a lifetime for all who come.

IDEAL STORE WILL STAY AT MAPLESVILLE

Since announcing a few weeks ago that the store of The Ideal Dry Goods Co., at Maplesville would be discontinued, Mr. Jesse Baker, one of the owners of the business, states that he and Mr. Deloach, his partner, have decided to change their plans and continue to operate the Ideal Store there for another year.

According to Mr. Baker, their plans were changed because of so many friends and customers of the store insisting that the business be kept in operation there. "After so many of our friends and customers came to us with expressions concerning the business at Maplesville, we did not feel that we could afford to discontinue the store," said Mr. Baker.

The airplane is still stationed at Collin's farm. Reports are that it will be here all this week.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

FARMERS ARE ADVISED TO GROW MORE CORN

That Alabama farmers will profit by growing more corn is proved by figures released by F. W. Gist, statistician of the Department of Agriculture showing that "the corn crop of last year was about half of the needs of farmers, to say nothing of other folks who would buy from them if they had it to sell."

Mr. Gist reported that corn was harvested from 2,800,000 acres and at a yield obtained about five and a half million acres to corn would have been necessary to supply farm needs.

"If the yield of 1927 (15.1 bushels per acre) be the standard it would require about 4,000,000 acres," he said. This would take at least a million acres from cotton, or a reduction of about 26 per cent. This plan, while it might at present peak yields give enough corn, would still be unwise. The cost of corn production, as in all other commodities, depends upon acre-yields. The corn yield of 1927, while it was our highest, was still ridiculously low, and especially in some counties. In thirty-six counties that year the yield was below the average for the state, and last year only seven counties produced as much as 15 bushels per acre, while thirty-one produced less than 10. Corn can not be grown profitable at maximum yields and our minimums will always leave us short unless we use more acres than practicable.

Farmers have not only learned to produce profitable yields of cotton, but most of them are doing it when they get a fair price. Just as easily they can learn to produce profitable yields of corn. Readjustment of both corn acreage and corn yields is at the present time the chief problem of the Alabama farmer.

CHICKENS AND EGGS OFFER OPPORTUNITY

"Some farms are rather shy of hens, though the average for the state is low," says F. W. Gist, state and federal statistician. "Chickens are selling at 145 per cent of their pre-war price and eggs at 154. Here is an opportunity for every farmer."

GRAPE VINE MEASURED TWO FEET IN DIAMETER

The Department of Agriculture and Industries has received a stump of a grape vine which measured two feet in diameter from Colonel Thos. H. Molton of Fairhope, Alabama, who requested that the stump be showed to Governor Miller.

The grape vine grew on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay, Baldwin County, Alabama, and was presented to the Department of Agriculture by J. R. Hannett of Daphne, Alabama. It grew very near the celebrated Jackson's Oak, where Andrew Jackson camped with his army in December, 1814, and as Colonel Molton puts it "shows what rich land there is on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay."

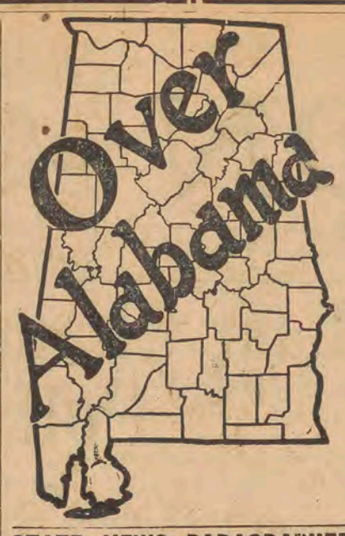
Colonel Molton gave the following facts about the grape vine:

"A cut which Mr. Hammett gave to the Baldwin County Historical Society is in the Fairhope Public Library and is a great curiosity to northern visitors. Mr. Hammett put a back to this block and used it as a rustic seat on his porch."

FARM TREES PLANTED

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 26.—Planting of forest trees obtained from the State Forest Nursery was engaged in by one hundred fourteen landowners during 1930, according to the compilations of the State Commission of Forestry. The most popular species were long-leaf pine, black walnut, loblolly and slash pines and black locust, the amount of long-leaf distributed being more than any of the others.

The young trees issued from the State Nursery went in small lots ranging from a dozen or twenty up to several thousand. Many of the seedling were used for experimental purpoes only, although in most instances they were devoted to reforesting lands upon which natural reproduction had not readily ensued.



The planting in 1930 was in 40 counties as compared with 17 in 1927, thirty-one in 1928, and 49 in 1929. The leading counties were Mobile, Baldwin, Jefferson and Butler.

Mrs. H. S. Watkins has sold out her cafe in Clanton, and has gone to Satsuma, in Mobile County, where Mr. Watkins is employed by the state on a road paving job.

IN MEMORY

The death angel visited the home of Mr. Willie Hayes of West Thorsby, and bore away the soul of his loving and sweet companion.

Dark clouds of grief hang heavily over us and our hearts are so very sad. We realize now that a precious friend has gone from us and left a vacancy that can never be filled. The burden seems almost more than we can bear, but we feel sure that God has a special need of her in heaven, and we humbly submit to his will. It is true she can never come back to us, but we are greatly comforted with the fact that we can go to her.

Mrs. Hayes, before her marriage two years ago, was Miss Virgie Caton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Caton of Thorsby. She attended Thorsby Institute for two years, and while there her sunny smile and kind heart won for her many true and lasting friends. She is greatly missed by all those who knew her.

She leaves a husband, father, and mother, four sisters, one brother, and a host of friends to mourn her departure. May God bless each and every heart that is made sad by this great loss.—A Friend.

IN MEMORY OF T. J. JACKSON

On Friday morning of January 2, the beautiful spirit of Thomas J. Jackson, of Whigham, Georgia, made its flight to the great beyond.

The people in and around Chilton County were made to feel sad to hear of the death of Mr. Jackson, as he was known far and near as a singer and lover of music. With the passing of Mr. Jackson, is gone one of the best of old time singers and workers to keep the old time singing going. After moving to Georgia he always came to the singing at Camp Branch on the Fourth of July. He would go far and near to the singings. There was no one that enjoyed good singing better than he did. He is going to be missed by his family and friends, but the Lord knew best when he called him away.

He married Miss Lizzie Shirley, and to their union there were ten children, nine boys and one girl, of whom all survive. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, ten children, several brothers and sisters, and a host of friends and relatives.

His children are as follows: Mr. Cleveland Jackson, Sylacauga; Ruben. Marvin and Andrew Jackson all of Clanton; Winford Jackson, Jemison; Mary Lou Burks, Tarrant; Joe Jackson, Jemison; Roy, Arnold and Georgia Jackson all of Whigham, Georgia.

We have evidence that Mr. Jackson was ready to meet his Lord. Loved ones, weep not for him, because he is at rest, but let's strive to be ready when death calls us away, so we may all meet him in that heavenly city, where all pain, sorrow, grief and dissapointment will forever be past away. All will be joy, peace and happiness forever with the Lord.

The remains were laid to rest January 4th, at New Harmony cemetery, near Lomax. Elders Kelley and Davis conducted the funeral, with Mell Martin in charge.

CANE CREEK

Last Sunday was our regular singing evening. The singing was very good, and we thank the visiting singers for helping us out. Directors for the afternoon were: W. L. Sanders, E. C. Traywick, Posey Clackler, Floyd Little and R. E. Jones. Organists were Lillie Mae Weldon and Virgie Giles.

Sunday morning Mr. Harris visited our Sunday School and made a splendid talk on "Sunday Schools." He told us something about the origin and teaching of Sunday Schools. I think if everyone would take his advice we would have a Sunday School worth while.

Don't forget that next Sunday and Saturday are our regular preaching days. Everybody is invited to the services.

Dr. Lambert Now Endorses Sargon

"I was spending the winter in San Antonio, Texas, when I first heard of Sargon. The treatment appealed to me because of its thorough scientific background. I decided to try it for a very bad form of chronic constipation, which I was entirely unable to correct with ordinary laxatives and purgatives used in general practice.

"I was also subject to severe bilious attacks. My complexion had become yellow as though I had jaundice. My appetite was below normal. My food did not digest or assimilate, causing gas and indigestion. I was losing weight and strength rapidly.

"Three bottles of Sargon and one bottle of the Pills relieved me entirely of these troubles and I no longer have any liver or biliary symptoms. In fact, I am in better physical tone than in years.

"Sargon undoubtedly represents a real advance in the field of medicine."—Dr. Gilbert S. Lambert, San Francisco.

Beginning and extending through Wednesday, the mid-term dances held full sway. The dances were dedicated to the Crimson Tide, and were carried out to represent Rose Bowl. At intermission Wednesday night there were several reels of the Alabama-Washington football game shown. Jimmy Green and his Chicago Orchestra furnished the music for the festivities.

The trouble with an era of low prices is that few people outside the wealthy, have the money to take advantage of the low prices. Prosperity and rising prices always seem to go higher.

STATE CAPITOL News

Governor Miller meant what he said when he pronounced to reduce the state's expenses. On the day following his inauguration he cut the cost of the departmental heads $27,000 annually. He lopped 100 employees from the state's pay roll Wednesday he called on the other constitutional officials elected with him to immediately discontinue all clerical assistance in addition to that prescribed by law, thereby, saving $49,950 annually. It is evident that every day that Governor Miller will put his own house in order before he appeals to the people of Alabama for their help in his program to meet the crisis caused by the big deficit that predecessor left.

His initial message to the Legislature, containing 200 words, made seven recommendations as follows: Enactment of a double primary law, discharge of all state law enforcement officers, facilitating a study of the state's government, registering of all outstanding warrans, reduction of the state tax commission from five to one member, reduction of the state administrative board to one member and legislation to facilitate the fair and impartial trial by jury safeguarding the jury box.

After the reading of the message, Speaker Tunstall introduced six bills carrying out the Governor's recommendation. These were referred to the Rules Committee. Received a favorable report Thursday and passed Friday.

Applause and calls for a speech greeted the announcement by Speaker Tunstall Wednesday of the appointment of Cyrus B. Brown, veteran of many legislatures, as the reading clerk. In a ten word speech Mr. Brown thanked the Legislators and promised to do his best.

In the appointment of the 46 standing committees by Speaker Tunstall, it is evident that Finnis E. St. John of Cullman, who next to the speaker, has had more legislative experience than any other member, will be the floor leader of the administration.

A bright spot on Tuesday's Senate Session was the presentation of a loving cup to Lt. W. C. Davis, who yielded the gavel to Lt. Governor, Hugh D. Merrill. Senator Charles S. McDowell made the speech of presentation. Governor Davis responded in a speech, which prompted one of the Legislative reporters to represent Mr. Davis as weeping.

In this connection it might be mentioned that on the morning following, Gov. Davis' wife telephoned him that two masked men had enter the home of his aged father and carried away $100. They overlooked $300 which his father had concealed, which caused him to remark that it might have been worse. "You can see," said Mr. Davis on commenting on this incident, "I don't know how my father will feel when he reads that his son cried when he gave up his job."

A bill was introduced in the senate by Senator Millsap Thursday which prohibits the appointment of Constitutional officers to any deputy or assistant office until four years after the expiration of his term to which he was elected. Senator Duncan also introduced a bill levying a heavy tax on chain stores.

Permanent appointments were made by the Governor: D. H. Turner, Private secretary; W. F. Covington, Recording secretary; Ralph Searcy, fore marshall: Charles Greer, Insurance commissioner; and Henry Moon, Adjutant General.

Temporary appointmens are: William F. Feagin, Chairman of Administration; Col. L. G. Smith, Chairman of the Highway Commission; J. S. Mooring, Chairman of the Tax Commission.

For the first time in Alabama's Legislative history, Governor Miller's bill to reorganize the state government passed the house without amendment.

Several efforts were made by Jefferson County's youthful legislator, Lewey Robinson, assisted by the veteran legislator, Judge John B. Ward, of Henry, to decrease the salaries of the state officials fixed by the administration bills, which amends were tabled on motion of the speaker, who called floor leader, St. John to take the chair and personally conducted the fight for the Governor's bills.

Orgnaization of High School Orchestra

Miss Annelou Burns of the Meeks School of Music at Selma has organized a very promising class of pupils in both string and wind instruments. We can't say at this early beginning just what the future will be, but we feel that a splendid class will be going in a few days. Miss Burns stated that she would have them ready to play in public within thirty days if they kept up the enthusiasm that they have at this time.

Dr. Haskew Visits School
(By Sallie Mahan)

Bro. D. H. Haskew honored the school again with a visit. He gave a short encouraging talk, in which he brought out the importance of keeping a definite goal in view if one is to attain complete success. To emphasize his point he made some very graphic illustrations: One was to make a straight line through the snow is to look at a tree on the other side of the field instead of looking down at your feet as you walk along. Another one was to turn your wheel to the left if your boat was going towards the right, and to the right if it turned to the left and look straight ahead to the shore.

Basketball Games
(By Herman Harris)

Wednesday night at Calera's indoor court, the whole Chilton team played well and showed some nifty passwork. The final score was 34 to 11 in Chilton's favor.

Friday afternoon Chilton went to Plantersville to play the Bibb County boys. After a tight game Chilton was defeated by a score of 22 to 18.

On Friday afternoon, January 30, the local team will meet the strong Selma team on Chilton's court. Come and "root" for your colors.

We especially thank Dr. Wood and Dr. Gragg for their sympathy shown us, but all that we could do was in vain. But God giveth and God taketh away. All the doctors said it was the first case of this kind they had experienced. It died on the operating table about 6 o'clock Friday p. m., at the Central Alabama Hospital, and was laid to rest at Archie's Chapel cemetery Saturday afternoon. CHEST FUND DRIVE IS WELL UNDER WAY

Reports from the organization that is putting on the drive for he Chilton County Chest fund say that the campaign is well under way now in all parts of the county.

This week the Jackson Chapel community comes in with the first report of the work completed.

Much interest is being shown throughout the county. This fact is evidenced, it is said, by the liberal contributions of clothing and wearing apparel, as well as the cash that is being turned in.

South Clanton and West End report that their drive is rapidly progressing, and those communities expect to run a close race for second place in completing their drive.

Committees have been named for making canvass of the business district of Clanton. This will be done by four committees of the Kiwanis Club, working in pairs in each section of the city.

From time to time as the work progresses, the central organization in charge of the work will give full detailed reports of the contributions that have been sent in.

FOX STORE MAY BE CLOSED ANY DAY NOW

When Broadus Connaster was asked Tuesday when he would close up the store of W. W. Fox, he replied: "I will not say just what day I will close the store."

Then he went to the calendar turned a leaf and said: "The tenth day of February is on Tuesday. But I will not set a definite date. All I will say is that some of these mornings right soon I am coming up town, and instead of opening the doors of the store, I am going to pass on by, and then it will be all over."

MORE ABOUT THE WESTERN TRIP

In closing last week, I said I would tell you something this week about the city of Los Angeles. Although there is plenty to be said about this great city of 1,600,000 people, I hardly know where and how to start.

It seemed that everyone was on his way somewhere else and in a big hurry to get there. We got aboard our Ford about 10:30 one morning and went out to Long Beach for a view out over the ocean. Then back in the car for a trip over the city, and although we drove hard and fast until six o'clock that evening we lacked lots of seeing it all. We visited Beverley Hills, Hollywood, and other sections, with their costly and very beautiful structures. Finally we decided to experience the thrill of working our way through the heavy traffic of the down town section and only succeeded in getting in one of the tightest jams you ever heard of. In one place we stood five minutes without moving, while traffic poured past in the other direction.

We saw wonders of all descriptions. All kind of flowers, roses as large as saucers, as well as other plants to compare with these. But, although all this was quite wonderful, it didn't look as good as Alabama to us after all.

Now, something of Angeus Temple, home of the Foursquare Gospel. I think it is the best organized piece of religious business I ever saw. The building, together with the Bible school covers two blocks, the main auditorium alone seating 5,300 people. There are 1,500 lights, and yet a bulb cannot be seen. A huge spot light in the dome plays on the speaker or performer at all times. This is just like the sun in brightness. We went in one Sunday school class so large it was divided into five sections—five teachers at once. This was all in one of the rooms. There were six or eight rooms like it. I asked one of the orderlies what the Sunday school offering was expected to be; she said it usually ran about $500.00; I thought that a pretty good siped offering.

The spacious temple is packed at every service, with loud speakers all over Echo Park, where the overflow crowds go the hear the preaching. The building has 17 front double door entrances, and we were about two hours going through the building. There is a prayer tower where prayer never ceases—24 hours a day, the ladies in the day and the men at night. This has been going on for eight years. Is there any room to wonder why such miracles as you have read has happened here? There is an 80-piece band, with other musical instruments all the way from flutes to pipe organs. At each altar service their conversions are by 50's and 100's. There is a Bible school which accomodates 900 students that operates night and day—all packed to limit of space. A number of missionaries have gone out from this institution to foreign fields.

We must close, for fear of using too much space, but that is far from being all that is to be said of anything that has been mentioned. We have merely skimmed over, taking the high spots. There is much more we have to tell anyone interested in any part of the trip.—Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mims.

BROWNIES ARE FAVORITES

There comes inevitably in every little girl's life the moment when her sense of hospitality is aroused and she will want to make something all by herself to serve the little girls who are coming over to play with her in the afternoon. Mother will undoubtedly be appealed to and, if wise, will suggest the ever-favorite "brownies," sometimes referred to as baked fudge.

Brownies have the advantage of being extremely simple to make nutritious but not over-rich, and are always greeted with murmurs of delight.

If the following simple directions are followed, good results can be expected, even by the little girl who has had no previous experience. Remember that all measurements should be level and accurate. By using self-rising flour, no baking powder nor salt is required, as these ingredients have already been added in just the right proportions by the manufacturer before you buy the flour. Such flour is easy for children to use. There is no measuring and mixing of baking powder or salt and success is easily assured. The flour needs only one sifting.

Brownies.

¼ cup butter
3 squares or oz. cooking chocolate
1⅛ cups sugar
2 eggs
½ cup self-rising flour
1 tsp. vanilla
⅔ cup nut meats

First add the butter to the chocolate and melt over hot water. Add the sugar and eggs, unbeaten. Beat until well blended. Then add the remaining ingredients in the order given and when well mixed pour into a greased and floured cake pan to the depth of one-half inch. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) until quite firm but not brown. Cut into squares while still warm.

These may be served with a beverage such as lemonade or grape punch, or in the place of cake with ice cream if a more substantial collation is desired.

LEGION MEETING NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

All ex-service men of Chilton County are reminded that next Monday night is the time for the regular monthly meeting of Chilton County Post of the American Legion. Every member is urged to come, and bring all ex-service men possible.

There are lots of important things to be attended to at this meeting, according to Post Commander, Joe Calloway.

The Post will take up the question of making an appeal to our representatives and Senators in Congress concerning the pending bill which provides for the payment of all compensation claims in cash.

If this action is endorsed, it will be very important that the petition sent to Congress shall bear the name of every member of the Post. Therefore, it is especially urged that all members be present at this meeting.

DIAMOND MINES ARE BECOMING EXHAUSTED

Only A Qustion of Years, Scientists Assert, before Present Sources of Virgin Diamonds Pan Out

Eventually, say diamond authorities, unless new chimneys—as diamond pockets are called — are discovered, the world will be dependent upon second hand diamonds—stones which have been sold, stolen or lost to return again upon the market.

From the time the mines of India first supplied the world's demand, diamonds have been discovered in varying quantities and qualities in Sumatra, Borneo, the Urals, Australia and parts of North and South America. For the past half century, however, the mines of South Africa have produced 90 per cent of the world's best grade of rough.

The yield of the Transvaal mines, like that of its predecessors, has steadily declined. As the shafts have sunk deeper—they are now some 3,000 feet below the surface—the cost of mining has increased. Today, a ton of diamond bearing rock yields an average of only $6.00. As only 5 per cent of the diamonds mined cut to perfect stones, over 100 tons of rock must be dug, thansported to the compounds, weathered, washed, sorted and sent to Europe to produce the equivalent of a one carat stone.

It is easy therefore to appreciate the increasing value of diamonds and the resulting scarcity of true virgin stones. As a matter of fact, the demand for diamonds direct from the mines which have never before been owned or worn, has increased to such an extent that a firm, the Virgin Diamond Syndicate, has been remarkable successful in specializing in virgin diamonds exclusively, supplying a registered certificate of title with each gem.

REYNOLDS URGES PAYMENT OF POLL TAXES BY VOTERS

Eidtor Union-Banner:

I want to urge the people of this county to pay their poll taxes on or before February 1st.

Voters, remember that you cannot vote this year unless you have paid all poll taxes due on or before February 1st. We might have some important elections this year, but if there is no election, you will not save anything by leaving off your poll tax, as you will have to pay the tax you leave off this year before you can vote next year. Then, too, it will be harder to get up $3.00 then than it will be to get up $1.50 now.

The tax collector informs me that the people are further behind with their poll tax than they have been in many years. Let's everybody appoint ourselves a committee of one to urge people to pay their poll tax.

Respectfully
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

MT. PLEASANT WINS OVER BAKER JR. HIGH SCHOOL

On last Thursday afternoon the Junior High Department of the Mt. Pleasant school motored down to Baker Jr. High, where a lively and interesting "old-time spelling bee" was staged.

After several hundred words were given out, Mt. Pleasant finally emeged victorious, but not until a brisk struggle was put up by three "crack" spellers from Baker.

The contest ended with two of Mt. Pleasant's spellers standing, Renfroe Price and Eunice Holley being these two. For Baker Jr. High, Miss Lois Baker was last to go down. After spelling many complex and troublesome words she was given the word "ligament" which proved the downfall of the Baker group.

The sides were apparently evenly matched as the numbers on the floor at different intervals of the contest were about the same.

Mrs. Strock, the junior high assistant at Baker, alternating with Mr. Johnson, principal of Mt. Pleasant, gave out the words.

The spirit, interest, and good sportsmanship manifest by both groups was highly noticeable and to be commended.

As soon as the Mt. Pleasant group arrived, they quickly assembled and gave several school yells. They then marched in, bearing their school colors, (gold and black) and line up opposite the Baker Group, and the battle was on. The rules used in this contest were practically those which are set down for the county-wide spelling bee, sponsored by the Jacksonville State Normal, which will be held in this county in March.

Mt. Pleasant hopes to have the Baker school as their guests within the next few days. Watch for announcements and the date, and try to be present, for these two schools spelling against each will assure most anyone two hours of wholesome enjoyment.—R. B. Johnson.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

All attendance records for months were broken last Sunday in our Sunday School. There were 26 men in the Wesley Bible Class. Let men and women, boys and girls, meet with us at 9:45 a. m.

At 11 a. m., we have the Holy Communion, followed by a short sermon. Hear the pastor as he tells about "Christ is all." At 7 o'clock Sunday night you will want to hear about "God's Insurance Company."

The following joined our church last Sunday: Mrs. Ida Arnold, Louise Arnold, and Miss Callie Watts. If you are a Methodist, you should line up with our local church.

The Wesley Bible class is in its newly furnished room. Seats have been added and newly painted. The room will now seat a hundred people with ease.

A special course of lectures is being delivered by the pastor on "The Harmony of the Gospels," each Monday afternoon in the ladies parlor of the church. This Bible study is very interesting and a large crowd made use of it last Monday.

The Epworth Leaguers have a splendid ball court just back of the Educational Building, and they are working it full time with games. Our young people are a loyal, fine spirited company of church workers.

One of the growing classes in our Sunday School is that of our young men. They have a choice room, a choice teacher, and they are going to grow.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our thanks to our many friends and relatives for their kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our husband and father. We especially thank Dr. Eiland and underetker, Mr. Mell Martin.—Mrs. Alfred Popwell and children.

According to the latest reports from South America, Chile is getting decidedly chilly toward the League of Nations.

SCHOOL EXPENDITURES ARE YET SMALL

According to a recent research bulletin of the National Educational Association, the American people spend $2.74 for public schools out of each $100.00 of income. At the same time, there is invested in school buildings $1.55 out of each $100.00 of public wealth as expressed in tangible property.

OAK HILL

The singing at this place Sunday afternoon was good considering the small amount of singers. Akins Collins presided. Prayer was offered by Mr. Tommie Maddox. Directors were Akins Collins, Rev. M. Lockhart, Marvin Campbell, Carl Glasscock, A. H., and E. L. Glasscock; with Emma Campbell as accompanist at the organ. A poll was taken of the members and the absentees noted, which were many more than was present. The closing prayer was offered by Rev. Lockhart.

CENTRAL SINGERS HAVE GOOD TIME AT FRIENDSHIP SUNDAY

Last Sunday afternoon the Central Singing Society met in regular session at Friendship church. The weather was fine and the attendance was the largest for the past month or so. The singing was real good—in fact, the best that the society has had for the past several weeks.

Prof. W. M. Devaughn was present and presided over the singing. Everybody was glad to have Prof. Devaughn back, as he had been absent from the singings for some time. Those taking part on the program were: T. E. Wyatt, O. R. Robinson, J. R. Robinson, L. T. Grant, S. M. Yates, I. D. Huett, R. M. Robinson, O. L. Devaughn, J. W. Clackler, S. V. Miller, Chester Wyatt, Z. Y. Appleton, G. C. Powell. The closing song was sung by Riley Robinson.

The society meets next Sunday afternoon with Chestnut Creek church, Coopers. All singers and lovers of music have a cordial invitation to attend.

BETHSALEM

We had a fine turnout at Sunday School Sunday, for which we are thankful. It makes us feel that we are all praying more, for the Lord to move mightily upon the hearts of all people, and cause us to think of our duty which we owe our heavenly Father. He said to draw nigh unto Him, and He would draw nigh unto us; and the way for us to draw nigh unto Him, is to obey His commands.

We were glad to have Miss Mabel Wilkins with us yesterday. She was spending the week end at home, from Jacksonville, where she is in college. We miss Mabel since she went away, for she was a good Sunday School worker. We wish for her every success in her school work.

We invite everybody to our singing, which is held each fourth Sunday evening. Come and bring your books.

GOLDEN TEXT—Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and Health.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and Health.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Friend and Helper.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christian Ministry to Physical Ills.

I. Jesus Healing a Demoniac (4:33-37).

While engaged in teaching in the synagogue, Jesus was interrupted by a man who had a "spirit of an unclean devil," who cried out with a loud voice asking that he be left alone, professing knowledge of him as the Holy One of God. Jesus rebuked the demon and compelled him to come out of the man. At the command of Jesus the demon came out of the man with a violent struggle. This healing shows Jesus not only gracious but powerful to set free men who are under the power of the Devil, and also his ability to free men from the whole brood of diabolical passions such as lust, envy, anger, and jealousy which rule them. This manifestation of divine power amazed the people, causing them to cry out, "What a word is this!"

II. Jesus Heals Peter's Mother-in Law of a Great Fever (vv. 38-41).

This woman was prostrate with a great fever. They of Peter's household besought Jesus in her behalf. He rebuked the fever and it left her so that she immediately arose and ministered unto them. No earthly physician has ever been known to heal in that way. Divine healing is immediate and complete. It is most important that we distinguish between divine healing and faith healing. Faith healing is the result of the action of the mind upon the body, and is measured by the degree of the faith of the individual, while divine healing is the action of the power of God upon the diseased one and is always complete and immediate.

As a result of this manifestation of divine power, the fame of Jesus spread abroad and many sick of divers diseases were brought unto him and he healed them all.

III. Jesus Heals a Leper (5:12-15).

Leprosy was a most loathsome and terrible disease. Because of its foulness, one afflicted therewith was an outcast. Leprosy was incurable by man, therefore, the leper was regarded as hopeless and dead. In response to the leper's earnest request Jesus touched him and bade the leprosy to depart, and immediately he was healed and cleansed. Leprosy is a type of sin. Though sin is loathsome, hideous and separating, Jesus has power to save those who come to him by faith.

IV. Jesus Heals a Paralytic (5:18-26).

1. Watched by the Pharisees and doctors of the law (v. 17). The spreading abroad of Jesus' fame only incited jealousy on the part of these men. They did not want to get too close to him, but close enough to know what was going on.

2. The paralytic brought to Jesus (vv. 18, 19). This is a fine lesson of Christian service. They could not heal the man, but being moved by sympathy they co-operated in bringing him to Jesus who could heal and restore. Their efforts in bringing the man show their willingness to go to pains and trouble to bring the needy man to Jesus.

3. The man's sins forgiven (v. 20). Jesus looked back of the palsy to its cause—sin. The effect of his sin was before Jesus, but he proceeded to deal with the cause of it. All disease and death are the result of sin. The Lord deals first with that which was at the root of the trouble. Jesus saw the faith not only of those who brought him but of the man himself.

4. The purpose of miracles (vv. 21, 22). The Pharisees accused Christ of blasphemy when he declared the man's sins forgiven. Jesus showed them that back of the beneficient deed to the man was the demonstration of his deity. The main purpose in the working of miracles is the authentication of the divine mission of the one performing them. While the divine power and authority are thus shown, the wisdom and love of God are shown in that in all cases the supernatural work is for the good of the individual.

5. The relative value of physical ills and moral and spiritual maladies (vv. 23, 24). Physical ills are less serious than the sins which cause them.

Lift Up Your Eyes

Hath he a cup of affliction in one hand? Lift up your eyes and you will see a cup of consolation in the other. And if all stars withdraw their light while you are in the way of God, assure yourselves that the sun is ready to rise.—John Owen.

Great Peace

A compromise—half obedience, half rebellion—is never found to be the way of peace. "Great peace have they who love thy law."—J. H. Jowett.

CHEVROLET'S AGGRESSIVE ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

Another aggressive advertising campaign, with newspaper display columns carrying the brunt of the attack, is promised for this year by R. K. White, advertising manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

Long one of the nation's leading advertisers, the Chevrolet organization lent its endorsement to the pulling power of the newspaper by using 6,700 dailies and weeklies to announce the new 1931 car in November, the largest newspaper schedule ever used by Chevrolet in one campaign since the inception of the company. The move was made despite sub-normal business conditions and the generally slackened promotional activities of manufacturers in and out of the automobile industry.

"We made this move," Mr. White explained, "because we are in direct accord with the frequently expressed view that the only way to make bad business good and good business better is to put abnormal effort into your activities when you face sub-normal conditions.

"Not only did we carry the largest newspaper schedule we ever used, but we enlisted new forms of advertising to put our new car message across. Both the radio and the motion picture screen were added this year. Both are new media in our program, and both are added because a manufacturer with a national market intensively cultivated cannot afford to overlook any new means of approach to that market.

"We are continuing to use the radio and the screen to supplement and buttress our newspaper campaigns just as we have always done by using national magazines, outdoor boards, direst mail and other media for the same purpose.

"The newspaper, however, continues to form the backbone of our campaigns, and for the present will continue to do so. It, in the parlance of the gridiron, carries the ball and the rest run interference."

ALABAMA TAKES LEAD IN LIVE-AT-HOME PLAN

Four-Point Program Is Endorsed By the Farmers, Bankers and Others

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 26.—Alabama has taken the lead in a "live-at-home program" in 1931 and farmers, bankers, merchants and other business men of more than half the counties in the state have enthusiastically approved the program with assurance reaching Montgomery that all counties will have fallen in line by February 1.

Under the active leadership of R. G. Arnold, J. T. High and Emmett Sizemore, district agents, county agents in each county have called county-wide meetings. During the last two weeks specialists of the extension service, the farm bureau and the Department of Agriculture have attended the meetings in various counties and discussed the present agricultural situation with those in attendance. Record breaking crowds have attended the meetings with as high as 3,000 attending some of the meetings. Many places have reported "overflowing courthouses."

Farmers Determined

Many of the counties have passed resolutions asking that Alabama be allotted its share of the $45,000,000 drouth relief appropriated by Congress. All the meetings have approved a safe farming program for 1931. It has also been observed that farmers are determined as never before to solve their problems by working together and seeing each other through the depression. They are determined to make farming a paying proposition despite low prices. They realize that agriculture is a basic industry and if they can get it on a paying basis business will improve.

They have also expressed their realization that "farm relief starts at home and that the only true farm relief will come from the intelligent use of a lot of hard, honest labor and that governmental legislation, such as the formation of the Federal Farm Board, Federal Farm Loans, etc., are and will be designed to help only those who are actively engaged in 'heads-up' farming."

Four Points Included

The program which they have adopted and are determined to carry out includes four points, as follows:

"1. Make plans for ample production of feed for family needs and feeds for livestock. 2. Make some form of livestock a part of the permanent program. 3. Evade the surplus of cotton which robs us of a profit and which is increasing from year to year. 4. Add what other cash crops that our labor and farm conditions will justify for additional sources of cash."

Specialists who have been attending most of the meetings and highly recommending the above points to the farmers and business men include the district agents, F. W. Burns, extension service livestock specialist; J. C. Lowery, Extension agronomist; J. B. Sylvest, extension marketing specialist; H. R. Bailey, poultry specialist; F. W. Gist, statistician of the Department of Agriculture; J. O. Thompson of the Federal Farm Board, and others.

One of these meetings was held at Clanton on January 20, and it evinced more interest from the farmers and business men than any occasion of the kind ever attempted. There were more people than the courthouse would hold. The crowd was divided and two separate sessions held.

A MARKED DUCK KILLED AT E. H. MIMS LAKE

Ordinarily, when one kills a duck, it may be either just a duck, or perhaps merely one of those less valued things that goes by the local designation of a di-dapper. But the duck that was killed at E. H. Mim's Lake Tuesday morning was evidently more than either. At least, the band which he bore around his leg indicated that he had come from some place where his species is known and maybe recognized with some high degree of human interest.

The band on his leg said: Notify Biological Survey, Washington, D. C., and gave a number, A-689419. When the fowl was brought to Mr. Mims he at once saw that this must be no ordinary duck, and he forthwith brought it with him to The Union-Banner office.

The little aluminum band was taken from the duck's leg, and with a letter explaining the circumstances, was sent to Washington, according to directions.

We asked for a story about this unusual duck, when the Biological survey has put together the whole history of this little roamer of the heavens and the earth. We hope to have it some of these days for you to read in The Union-Banner.

Meanwhile, the editor of The Union-Banner will tell you one other thing about this duck next week. We are going to find out whether his kind are edible or not. We will not have to wait for the biology experts to tell us that part of the story.

TWO CONAWAY CHILDREN DIED

Mary Fay, age 2 years, and Eunice Lee, age 4 years, only children of Mr. and Mrs. J. Denson Conaway, of Mulberry community, died last week, and were buried in the same grave at Mulberry.

Mary Fay died Thursday morning at the family home. Eunice Lee, who was seriously ill at the time, was rushed to Central Alabama Hospital at Clanton, but died Friday morning.

From the best the doctors could tell with the meagre information at hand, and the somewhat puzzling condition of the children, their final opinion was that the children were suffering from poisoning, perhaps lead or zinc.

Another child, a three-year old brother of Denson Conaway, was taken ill apparently with the same symptoms as the two who died. He also was brought to the hospital in Clanton. Information from the hospital Monday said he was getting along all right.

The burial of Mary Fay and Eunice Lee Conaway was at Mulberry cemetery in charge of Mell Martin Friday afternoon. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Grady Williams.

JAMES FRANKLIN DIED

James Franklin, prominent citizen of Plaisant Grove community west of Jemison, died last Wednesday at his home after a long illness. He was buried Thursday afternoon at Pleasant Grove cemetery.

Mr. Franklin was well-known in Chilton County as a singer and teacher of music. He was a brother of Ben Franklin, of Thorsby.

DAY OF RECKONING COMING

The time is ripe, in the opinion of many qualified observers, for an upset of the constantly growing army of bureaucrats that will take us at least part of the way back to fundamental American principles of government.

The public shows signs that it is tired of being taxed, regulated and legislated to death. Most of the economic, political and social reforms that have met with enthusiastic political reception in the last decade or so have been shown up for the empty things they are. They have caused, at least in part, excessive taxation, business retrenchment, depression and unemployment.

A majority of American citizens are principally interested in business and industrial progress. Yet an organized minority has done everything possible to make that progress difficult. Government by commission—which has been replacing government by the people—has produced sad fruits in this country.

Those theorists and "commissionists" who have flourished so strongly in recent years may be in for a day of reckoning.

The business problem is really quite simple. All we have to do is to control production and consumption.—San Bernardino Sun.

The return of larger beer does not appear to be so imminent as to warrant the appointment of a reception committee.—Milwaukee Journal.

There are fewer than 2,000 zither players in the United States today. But we don't know what to do about it.—Milwaukee Journal.

The first gas stove in the United States was exhibited in 1879. That was 51 years ago—little more than two generations. Yet in that brief half-century gas has become a necessity in millions of modern American homes. The amazing progress, both industrial and domestic, made by the gas industry, is a dramatic page in American history.

I notice Mr. W. W. Fox is out in town again now and then. He has been staying in for several weeks. The few nice days of last week kindly made the sap rise a little bit, I guess; and you know when Foxy Grandpa begins to feel himself, he is bound to stir around some.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Americans are interested and in the main disappointed at the failure of the efforts of Foreign Minister Briand, of France in attempting to create the semblance at least, of a United States of Europe. The proposals of M. Briand have met, in most countries, the cool reception which keen observers of European affairs everywhere thought they would receive. There are many reasons for this. Of course the centuries-old conflicting jealousies, nationalistic traditions and differences in language are generally recognized as well-nigh insurmountable barriers. But there are other barriers, too. Many of the European nations have colonies in other parts of the globe and are not sure just how these colonies would be affected by the organization of a United States of Europe. Holland, small but reaching out over the world, is one of the nations said to be dubtful about this. Spain thinks of her relations with Latin-America, and Great Britain of her far-flung empire which is more important to her future well-being than a United States of Europe. Switzerland is said to fear taking any action which might disturb her time-honored attitude of neutraliy and Denmark and oher small nations are said to take a similar position. The present feeling in Italy is against the formation of a United States of Europe. In fact, the tendency now seems to be toward the forming of two European alliances and a return to the old system of check and counter check.

Of course one of the most important factors is the attitude of Great Britain. The British people, or a majority of them at least, are said to be less keen about establishing closer relations with Europe now than for a great many years. They are unable to see where their participation in the League for instance, has been of any considerable benefit for them, and there is said to be a growing sentiment in England for paying less attention to the continent and more to the growing states of the British Empire.

For example: It will be remembered that a few weeks ago here was held a conference for the inauguration of some sort of "tariff truce." The conference got nowhere, but did succeed in arousing some suspicion in Canada and Australia. In writing of this conference and of future British policy, Mr. F. C. Chappell, writing from London to the Protectionist, said recently:

"It looks very much as if the failure of the conference was a blessing in disguise so far as England is concerned, as the result otherwise wodld have been to commit this country to a fiscal entanglement with an economic alliance in Europe, an alliance, it has been well said, that owes its origin to the common European fear of the economic power of the United States and to the desire for an agreement which would act as some sort of balance to the great internal market of America.

"The United Kingdom has no wish to be mixed np with any such policy. England looks far more to empire trade than to the European continent for the future expansion of her commerce. And she will certainly not enter into any fiscal commitments with European nations wihch would have the effect of retarding this consummation—viz. the development of the economic and industrial resources of the British Empire. This is a far greater and grander policy than any benefits we might obtain under a United States of Europe. There can, of course, be no such federation while Britain stands aloof, and this she is likely to do forever."

It is indeed to be regretted for the future peace and prosperity of the world that some sort of a basis cannot be found for the formation of a United States of Europe after the pattern of the United States of America. It is pretty generally recognized, everywhere except in Russia, that the United States of America has been a success. And it is undoubtedly the duty of Ameriacns, rather than mixing in European problems, to keep on the job at home, seeing to it that this success of the United States of America is maintained.

Perhaps some ingenious lawyer from an ex-slave state can secure a revision of the Fifteenth Amendment in New Jersey.—Indianapolis News.

MANY TEACHERS BELOW STANDARD

The Alabama School Journal for January reports that 41 per cent of Alabama teachers are below the minimum standards accepted as essential; namely, two full years of training beyond high school for those who are to instruct elementary children and four years of training above high school for those who would teach in secondary schools.

These standards are modest; and the fact that any large number of our teachers cannot meet them should cause average citizens to think. When we consider the training required of doctors, lawyers, dentists, ministers, and others who must deal with body and mind, the fact comes home to us that the lady who shapes the mental reactions of our little children should be one who has been exposed to the very best lines of thought.

SAVE YOUR STAMPS

At this time churches, clubs and other organizations are being bombarded by central lobbies of one sort and another interested in promoting the World Court, with requests that resolutions be passed or letters written urging Congress to immediately ratify the Root protocol and get the United States into the Court.

The origin and methods of such drives are so well understood by senators that they exercise little or no influence. When the League of Nations was before the Senate for consideration the capitol was buried with petitions, letters and telegrams all professing to represent the will of the people. That this "uprising" had been artifically stimulated was apparent. And despite the fact that, like the three sailors of Tooley Street, the engineers of the "spontaneous" demand claimed to represent public sentiment in the United States, the people buried the League of Nations at the polls. Through their supposed official spokesman the church people of this country were committed to the League of Nations, but when they came to vote their sentiments they proved that they had been misrepresented.

The League of Nations and the League Court have been so generally discussed during the last few years that most senators have a fair familiarity with the real state of public opinion on this issue. They know that between elections the internationalists make most noise but when elections roll around it is always disclosed that the noise they make is no index to their real numbers.

A Connecticut inventor has perfected a silencer which prevents noise from entering the home. But how about the ones that are produced on the inside.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

The economic stability of the United States and the recovery of its buying power are now recognized in Europe, we are told, as the first essentials to the restoration of world prosperity. Only our internationalists and their agents refuse to recognize the fact that America, in diplomatic as well as in economic matters, can best serve the world by giving first attenion to its own welfare.

The State Forester of Maryland gives the information that municipal forests are becoming popular in the United States. The first one was established in 1914 at Fitchburg, Massachusetts. Today there are 84 in the bay state; 24 in Vermont and in New York 200,000 acres are under municipal control. Some of these forests are selected as a watershed protection; others as a shelter from winter winds, and as recreation areas and for other purposes. This idea originated in Europe and has proven there a valuable local asset. One village in Germany through revenues from its town forest pays all its local taxes; gives each family in the community a cord of firewood annually and $15 in cash. Fortunately, this municipal enterprise is getting a good start in the United States.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick tells us that America hasn't a ghost of a chance except through international cooperation. Perhaps he doesn't mean that we should join the League of Nations where, by a majority vote, we can be told when to begin fighting and just how many men and how much money we should furnish to promote the ambitions of some European nations. But possibly the reverend gentleman has in mind that we should become a member of the League Court, where fifteen judges, fourteen of whom are foreigners, could give advisory opinions on the use and protection of the Panama Canal, immigration, foreign debts and similar questions, which decisions we would be morally bound to accept unless we wanted to disgrace ourselves before the world by running away.

Perhaps the very worst way to help general conditions is by spending carelessly public funds and thus increasing tax burdens.

Announcements that mail order catalogues next spring will show the price reductions from 20 to 40 per cent. It ought to get a laugh out of the free traders who tried to kid us into believing that the new tariff law would increase the cost of living.

THE CINDER PILE

(By The Sweeper)

Howdy Folks:

The good editor of The Union-Banner has agreed to let The SWEEPER pile his cinders in the corner of the shop for a while, and until ye editor changes his mind, or decides that we are kicking up too much dust with our weekly sweepings, we will endeavor to place before the readers of The Union-Banner our thoughts, both serious and otherwise, relative to such things of interest as we may happen to see while taking a few minutes well earned rest from our labors and leaning rather heavily upon our broom handle.

Of course, you will be wondering just who The Sweeper is; but that is our little secret. We hope that we shall be able to sufficiently interest our readers that they may take the time and trouble necessary to a perusal of what we may have to say. At all times we shall endeavor to steer clear of any personal reflections or inuendoes which tend to trample on any ones "toes."

However, if at any time, any reader or person herein referred to may feel that he or she has just reason or cause to know our identity, we shall be only too glad to reveal ourselves to that person or persons.

The Sweeper is desirous at all times to have the co-operation of the readers of The Union-Banner, and we want you folks to tell us if you like our "stuff." This applies if you don't like us too; tell us about that also.

Now just to get this Ole Cinder Pile started, The Sweeper wishes to commend the County Commissioners Court for their action in freeing the road subjects from road tax and road duty for this year. This act, so far as The Sweeper has been able to learn, has been joyously received by said subjects the county over. Such action on the part of the Commissioners is somewhat an experiment in Chilton County, such a ruling having never been in effect since we can remember, and we have seen road duty for several years. Here's hoping the Honorable Court finds the new scheme so successful that they will continue the present system indefinitely.

It has also come to the notice of The Sweeper that the Commissioners have ordered the road machines stopped for a while. We wish to say that this is a wise thing to do at this time of the year. A mudhole is far better left severely alone, unless it is to be filled with a good quality chert, rather than have the road machines plow through it and pile more mud into it. The Sweeper got stuck in such a place just the other day. Let's give the machines a rest and expend our road efforts toward cherting these places for a while.

Wonder what has become of the Baptist Church-New Jail controversy? The Sweeper has heard nothing of it for several days. We do not wish to be understood as favoring a continuation of this squabble. We do not. But the jail situation is one that certainly needs immediate attention. Let's get this matter settled at the earliest possible moment and get us a new jail-house. Relative to this situation, we heard a real good idea advanced the other day: Instead of the noise of the jail and prisoners being obnoxious to the church, that they equip the church with an amplifying system and place loud speakers in the jail and serve up the Sunday School and church services to the prisoners. Not a bad idea at all, we think. Commissioners and Baptists think this over.

Well, the fat's in the fire, to use an old expression. Senator Nye has decided to bring a few of his sleuths to Alabama and find out the real reason why the illustrious "Cotton Tom" did not sweep the grand old state of Alabama in the same manner he has heretofore formed the habit of doing. The Sweeper does not know just what Senator Nye and his cohorts hope to uncover, but like Dr. Connor, we wish to predict that in the end they will find that the Hon. Tom just didn't get enough votes to elect him.

Well the quad-rennial state house-cleaning is under way. Remember Mr. Miller's campaign slogan was: "Save Millions With Miller." "Alfalfa Bill," of Oklahoma, says he is going to live in the garage and rent out the governor's mansion. Maybe Mr. Miller will do likewise and save some more of the state's hard-earned money. But if Mr. Miller desires to do this, he has our permission. We think it is high time somebody put the brakes on the spending gear of the state treasury. Attaboy, Meek.

We see where Sheriff-elect Hawkins of Jefferson County says he does not propose to retrench what ever in prohibition enforcement, but expects to expend his efforts and those of his deputies toward a program dealing with the distiller, rum-runner and bootlegger rather than to a petty house-searching-regime after the pint or quart of the individual who takes his drink in his private home, and peaceably. We wish to commend such a policy, and while we have no sympathies with the fellow who buys the "bootleg," The Sweeper would like to see Mr. Gillespie announce a similar program.

Space is getting a little "Skase" and we will have to begin sweeping again and try to uncover something to talk to you about next week.—The SWEEPER.

TREES PAY PROFITS

New York State is taking notice, and other states well may learn from it, of the first year's results of its reforestation plan. This program calls for the planting of trees on 1,000,000 acres of abandoned farm lands. During the year 40,000 acres have been planted. Two large nurseries have been established to grow the young trees to be transplanted as areas become available. New machinery is being used for planting the young growth which reduces the cost by half.

For financing this reforestation program an expenditure of $20,000,000 is contemplated. It is estimated that by acquiring some land containing forests and harvesting this and later the reforested areas this work will not only become self-supporting, but will produce a large profit. The state commissioner estimates this eventual total income at a half billion dollars. That is manifestly a guess and would make point only if defined for a definite period of time. But there is on the face of such an understanding the manifest promise that it will prove a beneficial investment. Soil areas in many parts of the country, denuded of their primeval forests, unproductive when turned to other uses, have been crying for a return of their destined productivity of wood.

There has been lacking but the one thing, public action to invest inital funds. Conservation leaders have been voices crying in the wilderness of denuded lands. In theory their pleas have been accorded general approval, but when it comes to plowing hard cash into the soil on the project of somewhat distant, though certain, profitable returns, there has been regrettable dearth of action. New York States may become a commendable example for other states to follow.—Hartford Times.

All things are relative, and being an important citizen is merely a matter of finding a town small enough.—Richmond News Leader.

LITERARY GARBAGE

George Benard Shaw declares that he approves the speech of Sinclair Lewis, who got the noble prize because "high brow" Europeans find satisfaction for their envy and hatred toward the United States by rewarding the chief deframer of America and Americans.

Shaw says the Lewis technique is good—that he follows it himself; that Americans enjoy having their country and countrymen derided; that he knocks Americans at every opportunity because he knows that it is the way to make himself popular here, and that if he were to say anything good about Americans they would drop him like a hot potato.

We have enough Americans of the type described by Shaw to furnish a good market for the output of America-knockers. This type of American feeds his own vanity by imagining that he is an island of intellect in a sea of stupidity. He has an inferiority complex which causes him to turn boot-licker to all that is alien. In other words, he is the true provincial, anxious for the tolerance and patronage of Europeans. We had a learned egomaniac in New England at one time who declared that he was the only cultured person in America. He was properly set down by persons of common sense at home and abroad as only an egotistical ass.

America is not to be judged by its literary lick-spittles and egomaniacs. The indecencies of these decadents naturally draw patronage. Their diatribes have all the charm of back fence gossip and billingsgate. Their stuff is made to sell, but will soon share the fate of all other garbage. It has the brilliance of phosphorescence, which putridity produces.

Three bulls in the arena at Mexico City the other day surrendered to Sidney Franklin, the Brooklyn bullfighter, without putting up a fight. Maybe they thought Sidney was a Wall Street bear.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

J. H. Langston, of Tuscaloosa, former citizen of Chilton County, was a visitor to Clanton last Saturday. Before going to Tuscaloosa several years ago, Mr. Langston lived near Jemison. He has been a section foreman for the L. & N. Railroad for a long time. Since times got so dull, his work has been cut to five days a week, Mr. Langston said.

Lawrence Littleton, who lives on the Tom Franklin place, near Pletcher, reports his experience in growing rutabegas. Last year he produced over one thousand pounds of this vegetable. He gathered them at the first of the winter and banked them potato style. According to Mr. Littleton, they kept in good condition, and he has sold several hundred pounds of them during the winter. He brought one of them to the Man on the Corner. It weighed about seven or eight pounds, and I am a living witness to the fact that it was a mighty good one, so far as could be told from eating it.

As you go up and down the paved highway through Chilton County, notice what has happened in places where the maintenance crew has been burning the grass off the shoulders of the road. Every once in a while you can see where the fire spread from the right of way and got into somebody's fence, burned the posts, etc. Or perhaps it will be at a place where the fire got into a wooded area, a pine thicket, and spread on to a distance no telling how far.

This thought came to me. One department of our state government is preaching forest conservation and prevention of fires; while right on the other hand another department of the government is operating a system through which its employees are allowing to happen the very thing which the other department is trying to prevent. I guess it is all right to burn the grass off the shoulders of the highway, though I do not see any particular good it does. But those who do it certainly ought not to get away from the scene and allow the fire to spread to places where it will do damage.

Fire in the woods of this county does an untold amount of entirely unnecessary and inexcusable damage every year. I wish folks would stop and think about that before they carelessly allow themselves to be the means of getting fires started in the woods.

The old notion of burning woods is that a fire in the forest is all right so long as it does not burn anybody's fence or house. That is the smallest part of the damage, by a long way. The big damage, the very tragedy of the forest fire, is most acute in the places of the woods farthest away from fence or house. It is the destruction to timber, to undergrowth, to surface covering, where the great and tremendous damage rests. Folks do not seem to figure it that way; but if they will stop to think it through, they will find that is correct.

Dr. Samuel E. Johnson continues to keep in touch with things in Clanton and Chilton County. This week came a renewal of his subscription to The Union-Banner from Manila, Phillipine Islands, where he is now stationed in the United States Navy. His check has been on its way to Clanton since the second day of January.

They couldn't turn the surplus mules into hogs. For that or some other reason Henderson Hays and P. Q. Freeman, of Jemison, set out for South Alabama Monday to buy two truck loads of pigs. They will bring them back to Jemison and sell them to farmers who are hogless and pigless. The market for them will doubtless be good, because there is a scarcity of hogs in Chilton County. Hays and Freeman will be back in Jemison Wednesday of this week with their pigs. If you want one, see them.

Uncle Alf Popwell, a familiar and unique figure in Clanton for many more years than lots of us can remember, has passed on to that land which is beyond the river of death. His body lies in the cemetery near his old home. His own stately pines are the sentinels which stand guard for him now with a fidelity that has always been mutual with them and him. He has saved those pines from the sharp blades of steel that would have devoured them years ago but for his feeble, shaky hand that was ever ready to rise and say "Woodman, spare that tree; touch not a single bough."

I will always love the memory of this man because to me he was a distinct individual, possessing always an aloofness from other people that marked him as singularly interesting. He was, in spite of all things and all conditions, his own peculiar self, not marred by the trend of things of the world, and little affected. He was honest, candid and unassuming, independent, all put together and boiled down to the very essence.

I have heard people say he was stingy, close, and interested only in himself. I do not agree with that estimate of the man. He was just what a man had to be to succeed in the days when his success was made. He never changed from the ways of those days. I do not blame him. If he had tried to conform to the times, doubtless he would have made a vastly different job of his life.

On the day that he died I heard a negro say: "My mammy and daddy and us four chilluns lived on Uncle Alf's place thirteen years. Every one of them years when Christmas eve day come, Uncle Alf come to our house, and give every one of us a five dollar bill for a Christmas present. He done that every time without fail." To me that is proof that Uncle Alf was not stingy.

Last Sunday I saw and heard something that was most unusual, and very commendable. A man who had made a bad mistake in life, who had gone far wrong in sin, who had brought shame and disgrace upon himself and his family, rose right up in meetin' after the preacher had finished his sermon, and openly confessed his error; testified that the grace of God had reached far out to where he had strayed into the darkness and brought him back to the light. Many hearts were made to rejoice when that man did that. But what do you suppose one might call the feeling that came to the heart of that boy's good old father and mother and his wife and children, and even his own heart, when he came back like a man and took the place that was yet waiting for him on God's mercy seat?

When David thought about God's allseeing providence and His infinite mercies, he asked himself this question: Whither shall I go from thy spirit, or whither shall I flee from thy presence? Then he said: If I ascend up to heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in hell, behold thou are there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say surely the darkness shall cover me, even the night shall be light about me.

PROHIBITION

(By Walter L. Peterson)

No, this isn't the beginning of a fairy tale, nor is it just another joke, but to the contrary, I find it a matter of quite serious nature and one in which the general American public should give their utmost support and immediate attention at this particular time of mental unrest and business depression, to say nothing of those conditions which have entered into our national government of a distinct foreign nature and of detrimental character.

As an eagle watches the nest of its young from a far distant point, just in a similar manner has the politics of Alabama been watched by many interested persons throughout the United States and the world. I have watched from a view point of one who realizes the critical situation existing in the United States today, with the thought in mind that if it is a crisis which might seriously or otherwise affect the American Government, it is a condition in which every loyal American citizen should participate to the best interest of their country.

National prohibition went into effect January 16, 1920, one year after the adoption of the prohibition amendment. Since that time, to the contrary belief of a great many Americans, the prosperity of these United States has taken distinct advances in a remarkable degree. Prohibition has helped do for the United States what liquor traffic has failed to do in the world at large. When prohibition becomes a national success, a success in the eyes of the world, it will lead to America's greates contribution to the civilization of the world. But should the American people be compelled by the logic of events to repudiate prohibition, the effect of such failure will be disastrous to the movement of prohibition elsewhere in the world.

Many people of the world today have gone out into the fields of industry confident that there they would find success waiting for them, and having procured an occupation, they immediately felt that the cause was won and that their success and fortune was only a matter of waiting for the time when someone would recognize their merits and send them up the proverbial ladder of fame. From their viewpoint the battle of existence was won and all requirements met. But as a matter of fact their very existence was at that moment hanging on the verge of distruction due to their own neglect of mental preparedness and ineffective procedure. Some one mentioned "failure" to them, just as some one had mentioned success previously, the result being a sense of failure when the real cause of this was a lack of interest, a lack of regularity, persistence and foresight. Such is the mentality of the human organism. Rather than push on to a greater ultimate success, they are only too willing to acknowledge defeat, when, perhaps the battle was only partly fought. Likewise, prohibition has received this same manner of thought by unpatriotic Americans. A disrespect which has arrived at lawlessness through not only a disregard for the Enghteenth Amendment, but for the laws of the country taken as a whole.

It cannot be doubted that there is much concusion in the public mind as to how prohibition stands at the present time. Many of the most persistent supporters of prohibition are wondering if it is winning or losing, making advances or backsliding. This is always true in human nature. Isn't it true that this government has always had laws in effect against murder, theft, etc? Isn't it equally true that these laws have been violated since time immemorial, and that all laws made have been broken? Isn't it true that there are more murders committed and more theft today then ever before? Then that law, too, is a failure if we are to consider violation a determining factor, or even as a sign of defeat. And because the Eighteenth Amendment has been violated from the very day of its origin we should, from the viewpoint of the liquor interests and their followers, condemn the amendment as being an utter failure.

It would seem that the friends as well as the foes of prohibition have forgotten that the Eighteenth Amendment was the most popular of the eighteen. The amendment providing for national prohibition was ratified by a larger majority of voters and greater proportion of states than any other amendment to the Constitution. As many as eleven states failed to ratify the woman suffrage amendment; but only two states failed to ratify the prohibition amendment. Facts of this nature should be sufficient to satisfy forever the foolish assertions that national prohibition is not the will of a majority of the American people.

It is true that the wets of all nations are against the drys of this nation. No one is more conscious of this than the liquor interests themselves. They know that the prolonged success of prohibition in America will eventually mean the doom of liquor traffic throughout the world. Hence the wets of all nations are against, or in fact in league against, the drys of this nation. It is this very influence that is today a menace to the always liberal mind of the real American. The propaganda thus being profusely distributed is being received in America by Americans as information coming from reliable and authentic sources. They are too prone to believe everything without first giving it a fair thought as to basic soundness.

However, if sufficient numbers of American voters are brought to believe, against their own better judgment, that a certain law is not a law of the majority of the people, it is quite obvious just what the results will be. A step in the wrong direction at such a time is quite easily made, and for reasons I believe to be of prime importance, such a step in American government influence should not be allowed in the thoughts or actions of Americans. The boisterous propagandists of the pre-prohibition days have raised such a howl about the alleged failure of prohibition, such a loud campaign about the evils it is supposeed to have brought upon us, which includes the terribly distorted press reports as to the position and obtainments of prohibition that multitudes all over the earth, not excluding large numbers of Americans, have been grossly deceived as to the real value of prohibition to these United States.

A recent visit to the Mexican Republic as well as to Canada has again, as on other occasions of foreign visitation, proven most emphatically the superiority of the morale of our country as compared with countries which allow liquor traffic and such traffic as follow in its wake. Those Americans who are proud that their forefathers fought for the liberty of this nation should be equally proud to have established in America such conditions as exist here today in morals, superior mentality and prosperity as contrasted with that of other nations. The continuation of these existing conditions can be maintained only through faithful compliance with the laws of the nation, which means that foreign propaganda must be kept from the minds of American citizens, as well as detrimental American propaganda.

In my travels in America and other nations, I have noticed that there exists a false impression as to the legality of prohibition. Such opinion is that prohibition is undemocratic and that it is a minority movement. How do they account for that in the face of the facts given below? Apparently facts are avoided or obviated by making the statement, "It came not by the will of the people, but by the adroit manipulation of a comparatively small group of enthusiasts who hoodwinked the politicians into believing the people wanted it." They overlook the impressive fact that by the time prohibition became effective 33 states had, on their own account, adopted a prohibition law. Also, due to state prohibition or local option, no fewer than 2,235 counties were already dry, which left only 305 counties to the wet liquor supporters.

Pluralities for submission and ratification were also decisive as made evident by the congressional vote for submission and the state legislatures for ratification. The votes for submission by both branches of Congress totalled 347 against 148 unfavorable. In the 48 states 5,079 members of state legislatures voted for ratification of the prohibition amendment and only 1,265 against it.

As is ordinarily the rule politicians do not vote counter to the wishes of their constituents, and the enormous political majorities can only be accounted for by acknowledging the existence of a very favorable popular attitude towards the amendment. Roughly speaking, it was represented by all the leading professions of the nation. Because the traffic of liquor was an enemy to all it brought down the opposition of all who were free to exercise their best judgment.

Also the statement asserting that prohibition was put across while 2,000,000 American voters were in France is equally misleading. This assumption places a great injustice upon our American soldiers, who were inlisted from the homes of the country at large. A great number of these men belonged to churches, were loyal to the protective laws of the nation, and being the fighting blood of the nation, I believe it fair to reason that their minds were opposed to the liquor traffic in direct proportion to those who remained at home. Many of them had voted against it in their respective states or counties before going to war. Moreover, since their return several states have conducted referenda on prohibition issues which have resulted favorably to prohibition.

It may be said that all the difficulties encountered in the enforcement of prohibition are rooted in that spirit of lawlessness which has always been an inherent feature of the liquor traffic. Then contemptuous attiude of the licensed liquor dealers progency equally as consemptuous. And as far as licenses and government control of liquor is concerned, may I suggest a few instances of our neighbor, Canada, where all liquor is supposed to be under government control. Liquor there is supposed to be sold only by government permit at liquor stores and not to be drunk on the premises, though some of the provinces do have wine and beer parlors. That Canada has by this system not solved the real liquor problems of drunkenness, bootlegging, crime and poverty the following figures with authentic authority clearly show:

"Our greatest problem is moonshine in the country districts."—Alberta Liquor Board.

"Bootlegging increased 111 per cent in the first year of government control." — Saskatchewan Liquor Board.

"As much liquor is sold by bootleggers as is sold in the government stores." — British Columbia Liquor Board.

"If all the drunks were arrested there would be no room for them in the jails."—Police Commissioner C. F. Burton, Manatoba.

"Arrests for drunkenness increased 125 per cent in first eight months of government control."—Saskatchewan Liquor Board.

"Drunkenness among women increased 53 per cent." — Montreal Star.

In conjunction with the ever present argument in this country, United States, for light wines and beer, I wish to state further that since the opening of beer parlors in British Columbia the sales of hard liquor has increased fifty per cent. The Ontario liquor buying public is spending $1,000,000.00 a week for liquor. The seven provinces having government control with a population of 10,000,000 spend $160,000,000 a year for liquor. Gross value of sales as reported by the provincial liquor control boards was almost trebled in Ontario from 1927 to 1928. And of grave importance to the citizens of the United States during these hectic days of traffic and its accompanying dangers is the fact that convictions for drunken drivers increased 1,300 per cent from 1921 to 1929. And in Canada where automobiles are in less popular use than in the United States these figures are astonishing.

Compare them with what might reasonably be expected in proportion in this country under conditions that would exist with liquor a free article of commerce. The mortality resulting from automobile accidents is shocking enough under present conditions, but the restoration of the beverage liquor traffic, with intoxicants freely accessible under public license, would immeasurably aggravate the menace of the intoxicated driver and magnify the degree of risk beyond the point of toleration. There are no two things in life especially modern life, more incompatible than 180,000 saloons operating on the streets and intersections of country roads and over 25,000,000 automobiles speeding over our highways. If liquor should come back it would be a very bad movement for the automobile business and all other business as well.

Not only are people losing their lives in a reckless fashion due to automobile accidents, but the hospitals of this nation alone are losing in uncollectable revenue annually an amount in excess of $7,000,000.00, which accrues from services rendered patients of automobile accidents. Consedering only a portoin of automobile accidents attributable to excessive drinking, can you conceive what our fatality list would look like if we should have only a partial repitition of that which occured in Canada in regards to increase of drunken drivers following only a semi-free trade of liquor? The result is quite obvious, even to the horse and buggy people of the rural districts.

I want to suggest and with positive assurance that the minds of the American people in conjunction with the high pressure, impatient, swiftly moving atmosphere in which we are caused to live does not warrant an unwise departure towards that which would only tend to increase this wholesale reckless manipulation of traffic to an unbearable state of frenzied driving. Is it possible that those who "love" their liquor do so with greater attribute to liquor than to their own families? We do not think so, yet how many children are annually murdered from the direct influence of intoxicating liquor. The life of one child could not be purchased from the entire sum attributed annually to the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. Those who wish to deny their country of the safety of its children can express nothing but selfishness or self aggrandizement.

The time is rapidly approaching when this nation will again go to the polls to select their "favoriate party" officials. May these favors be directed towards proper enforcement of all existing laws and towards the future welfare of this great nation rather than party affiliation. Partiality to principle rather than to party is of prime importance in the selection of proper statesmen. It would be rather foolish to assume that all the proper persons were allied to one individual party. Think before you vote. Remember that letting down the bars of the Eighteenth Amendment simply means setting up the bars of the corner saloon. It will be necessary to use logic in your voting. Because there are a great many self-styled "respectable" people who join the weak and criminals in breaking and assisting to break the laws does not make lawbreaking respectable. How many officials have you elected in the past from among your party that later did not fulfill that obligation for which they so ardently pledged themselves, or betrayed the trust and patriotism invested in them? If you are to benefit and our nation to benefit from these mistakes of the past, we must not allow a repitition of these mistakes in the future. The future of yesterday is here today. Use discretion when voting.

The weakness of much of our machinery of justice is proving a serious hinderance to effective prohibition. Overcrowded courts, cases of violation indefinitely postponed, thousands of cases of nolle proseque, juries showing very injudicial sympathy with law breakers, judges have imposed very mild penalties for very serious cases, and policemen have, in thousands of instances, shut their eyes to the most glaring infractions of the law.

There is a widespread violation of the prohibition amendment which is symptomatic, not causal, of the widespread violation of all law. Prohibition is not responsible for this, but the failure of our criminal jurisprudence to function satisfactorily is largely responsible for it.

Outside of having prohibition enforcement often entrusted to men who were incompetent, and who frequently violated the very law they were supposed to administer, we have also had the unfair treatment of the metropolitan press universally applied. The press must also share the shame of seriously incommoding the prohibition law. The attitude of many of the great dailies has been unfair and unfriendly in the extreme. There are, a few fine exceptions, I admit, but generally speaking the metropolitan press has been pronouncedly hostile. It has held prohibition up to redicule, exaggerated the violations of it, and have advocated modification which would amount to nullification, and have kept in suppresion all reference to its good results. It has done its best to defeat the law and then jeered at it as a failure and a farce—an attitude as unsportsmanlike and cowardly as it is un-American. The rural press has been on the whole loyal to the law, and much of our higher class magazine literature has stood by it splendidly.

Another menace of prohibition is the stay-at-home voter. It has been recorded from actual surveys that from 40 to 70 per cent of the members of various churches did not vote. This failure to vote has allowed the city administration to fall into the hands of such people who defy the constitutional amendment for national prohibition. If members of the churches are not going to use their one means of protecting their nation, that of voting, then they forfeit the very essence of religion. The many church members who remain away from the polls, who shirk the responsibility of every American citizen, are in a large measure responsible for the corruption that prevades like pestilence much of our political and civic life and withhold to a surprising degree the beneficial progress of prohibition as a national and world-wide movement.

Notwithstanding this powerful combination of hostile conditions, prohibition has proved a great blessing to the nation. This blessing, as recorded by our great economist, Prof. Irving Fisher, includes an increase of $6,000,000,000.00 annually of the American wealth. This is placed as a minimum, and does not include the savings accruing from a decreased death rate. In the days before prohibition the saloon monopololized so much of the wage earners pay that many children of school age were required to resort to work in order to make up the deficiency in the family livelihood. Liquor countries today are spending five times as much on the intoxicating liquors as they are in education. America spent in 1916 $2,438,000,000.00 for liquor and only $753,567,900.00 for education. In 1922 she spent $1,783,970,000 on public education and nothing whatever on liquor sold under government sanction.

It is very interesting to note the progress of the Anti-Alcoholic Society in the new-born Soviet republic of Russia. As one official views the situation: "Sovietism and alcholism do not go together. We must some day have a liquorless country. This may be hard to attain, yet some day it will be a reality. We envision a day when there will not even be beer in the country." At present there are no saloons or cabarets, night clubs or speakeasies in Russia. Mild beer can be had only in state-owned hotels and restaurants and in the various union clubs.

The beneficient results of late years in the United States cannot, of course, be entirely attributed to the effect of prohibition, but it is certainly a contributing factor of importance, and in many cases if must be given the major credit.

It is the duty of every American citizen to uphold the law of the nation as long as such law or laws continue in effect. Not only should the laws be complied with, but it is our business to let others know we are opposed to any violation of any law as long as such law is a part of the nation's constitution.

If the future stability of the government of the United States is to be assured and maintained, if we are to prevent uprisings within our national government, such revolutions as has occured in our South American neighbors of late, we must respect the Constitution of the United States. The 18th amendment was popular and I believe that it still remains so. Its constitutionality is impregnable, even though we hear certain judges proclaim it otherwise, and as a part of the Constitutional law of this Republic every person professing to be an American citizen will obey it regardless of his private opinion. He who obeys it cannot with truth claim to be one hundred per cent American, for it is he who made prohibition an expense of millions of dollars to our government and of course to our tax payers.

Since a century of legalized liquor traffic did not produce the temperance effect the wets now claim to seek, are we doing justice to prohibition in its enfancy to say that it has failed? Let us give prohibition that chance it rightfully deserves to prove its merits, whether it be fifty or one hundred years. No cause that was fair in its dealings with humanity has ever failed, and good cannot be faced by an evil influence. As Shakespeare has said, "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking make it so." Let us combine not only our efforts towards the ultimate success of prohibition, but direct our thinking to conform with the proper enforcement of prohibition law. As the distance a train can cover is a function of speed and time, just so is the function of prohibition dependant upon our compliance with the laws of the land and the proper enforcement of the same.

An English authority says that Great Britain gave the saxaphone to the United States. Well this was one way of getting even with us for the Revolutionary War.

What most of us regard as tolerance is the everlooking of our own habits by others.

Painful Condition

"When I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time.

"After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

WENT TO VISIT GOODYEAR PLANT AT GADSDEN

"Two of my boys, Wilbur Scarbrough and Herschel Gore, are gone to visit the Goodyear rubber plant at Gadsden today," said L. E. Diefenderfer Wednesday morning. In sending his men to Gadsden it is the purpose of Mr. Diefenderfer to give them a complete knowledge of Goodyear tires from the start to finish. Those boys are interested in Goodyear tire selling and service to users, and they will certainly get a very interesting slant on the Goodyear subject when they go through the big factory at Gadsden.

Dief continued with the statement that Goodyear at Gadsden is now making around 7,500 tires a day, and by the tenth of February they expect to be running full capacity. The Gadsden plant is the best of the Goodyear units, it is said, having the very latest machinery and equipment for making tires.

TEN ARRESTS IN THE LAST WEEK

Irby Traywick Sent Back To Missouri to Answer a Charge of Murder

It was stated at the office of Sheriff Gillespie Tuesday that a total of ten arrests had been registered since the previous report of a week ago. Charges vary all the way from disturbing public worship, and through the various stages of prohibition law violations, and even up to murder.

Irby Traywick was taken into custody by the Sheriff last Thursday p.m., upon advice from Selma saying that the young man was wanted in Nevada City, Missouri, charged with the murder of a man by the name of W. T. Long.

It was stated at the Sheriff's office here that Long was found murdered on October 11, 1930. When last seen alive Long was said to have been with Traywick, both in Long's car. The car was gone when Long was found dead.

Traywick was located here in possion of Long's car. He was turned over to the chief of police of Selma, and taken back to Missouri to answer the charge of murdering Long.

It is understood that Traywick and Long were close associates, both working with the crew that was engaged in laying a gas line through Missouri. Traywick says that he bought the car from Long.

ONE CALL SAVED FIVE DOLLARS

Mr. W. W. Williams of Fairview was in Clanton Saturday afternoon, and said that he was one of those fellows who were boosting the Peoples Telephone Company. Mr. Williams said that last Sunday morning his wife was taken sick, and a doctor had to be gotten and word had to be sent to his daughter down below Pletcher. So, by the use of his trusty old telephone, in a few minutes time a doctor from Clanton was on his way out there, and the daughter was soon at the bedside too. Mr. Williams said that besides saving lots of time, at least five dollars was saved him by being able to use his telephone.

Cases like this are happening every day. People simply cannot afford to be without a telephone, and the Peoples system is just what we need. People in every direction from Clanton are putting their lines in shape and are paying their central fees. If you haven't already fixed up your old box and paid your fee, do so at once.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

You are urged to attend church next Sunday. Meet with us in Sunday school at 9:45. Meet with us for preaching at 11:00 a.m. and at 7:00 p.m.

If you have a car, call up a friend and offer to bring him with you. If you have a car, start in time and be on time. The most of the folks in Clanton have known the day when you would walk two or three miles to church. Wonder what God thinks of any one living within a mile of the church and then says, "It is too far to walk."

Last Sunday Luther Ellison joined our church. We are glad to have this splendid young man with us.

We are anxious to give all who have no church home, a home of worship with us. Come and see if you do not like the way we worship God.

SINGING AT WALNUT

Another two months have rolled around since the Central Singing Society met at Walnut Creek, and the singing will be held there next Sunday afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock. All singers have a cordial invitation to attend.

The society met last Sunday afternoon at Chestnut Creek, Coopers, with a fine crowd of singers and listeners. Prof. W. M. Devaughn presided. The singing was much better than the last one held at Chestnut Creek.

Ruffin Is Pushing Purina Brand Feed

With the approach of the intensive poultry season of this spring, Mr. J. L. Ruffin, of Clanton, is busy hustling things around to get ready with plenty of Purina feeds to sell to those who are in the chicken business on a commercial scale.

Poultry raisers should think of the fact that Mr. Ruffin and the great Purina organization offer them more than the mere selling of feeds. There is a vast research and experimental service organization maintained by Purina Mills that is available to every user of Purina Products. This can be made of untold value if the poultry raiser will only avail himsef of such service.

We gather the following significant statement from a Purina bulletin: The only way to figure what feed really costs is to check results how many eggs, how much milk, do you get from 100 pounds of feed? That is why Purina Mills operates a biological laboratory and exeriment farm in connection with manufacturing over forty different chows. There is a reason why the Purina pound is the cheapest.

Purina Mills will help you prove your profit from feeds and feeding if you will get in touch with their research and experiment service.

Beginning this week Mr. Ruffin is running a series of advertisements of Purina feeds in the Union-Banner. Those who are interested in the poultry business are invited to come to see him and talk over your feed problems.

Plant More Oats and Follow With Hay Or Lespedeza, Dennis Advises

According to census figures for the year 1929 Chilton County planted 30,000 acres in corn producing only $15.00 worth of corn per acre.

Three thousand acres were planted in oats, producing only $21.00 worth of oats per acre. If this had been reversed and 30,00 acres planted in oats and 3,000 put in corn there would have been an increase of $162,000.00 worth of feed produced in our county and our lands left in much better condition with more hay and less leached and gullied fields.

Good crops of cow peas or soy bean hay may be produced on the oat land after the oats are harvested.

Oat land not needed for hay may be seeded to lespedeza which is a good grazing and soil building crop. For further information consult your county agent.

REV. HASKEW ON CLUB'S PROGRAM

Good-Will, a Community Asset, was Subject of Kiwanis Program Last Thursday Luncheon

In conformity with the suggestions of Kiwanis International, the Kiwanis Club of Clantan on last Thursday, carried out a program which centered in the subject, "Good-Will, a Community Asset." The program was in charge of Frank Callen, and his committee on Good Will and Grievance.

The speaker of the occasion was Rev. D. W. Haskew, pastor of Clanton Methodist church, who used the subject of the program for a most inspiring address to the members of the Club. Those who had the privilege of listening to the address of Mr. Haskew were so impresed with his message that a request was unanimously made that he furnish copies of his speech to the newspapers for publication, in order that everybody in the community might have the benefit of his words of wisdom.

Therefore, you will find elsewhere in this paper the speech of Rev. Haskew reproduced in full. It is hoped that every reader of the paper will give special notice to what he says.

Some other interesting features of the program last week was special recognition by the Club of recent attainments of two of the members, L. C. Warr and Billy Smith. Mr. Warr was complimented for having attained his master of arts degree from Columbia University. Billy Smith was felicitated for having won the Victor Hanses loving cup, awarded to him for special mtrit in rendering the best service to his community of any newspaper editor in Alabama during the year 1930.

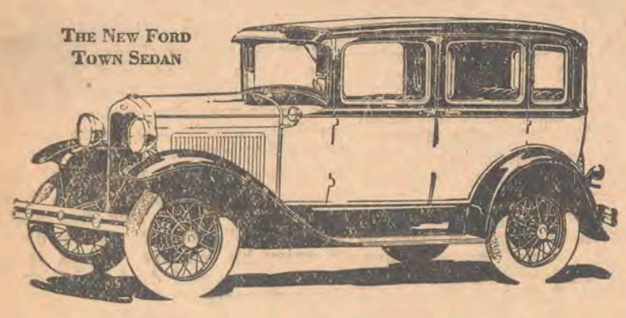
FORD SMOOTHNESS

The new Ford has more than twenty ball and roller bearings



EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all — an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do.

At some points in the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At others, roller bearings are used regardless of their higher cost. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford insures smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

OAK GROVE

The singing was opened on last Sunday afternoon by W. J. Northcutt, followed by Jack Cobb, Claudie Scott, Burnie Cobb, Lonie Cobb, Lloyd Edwards, Burl Martin, Richard Deuran, Marvin Campbell. Organists were Mrs. Tam Sims, Mrs. B. L. Cobb, Mr. George Anderson, Miss Violet Martin, and Miss Ruth Smith.

All did some good singing, as we had some good singers with us from Jemison and other places.

The classes meet at Providence next Sunday evening. Be sure and come. Mr. Burl Martin is president at that place and knows how to get good singing out of a class.

Come to Oak Grove Sunday at eleven o'clock, as we will have with us Bro. Nabers from Shelby County to preach for us.

CONVERTIBLE CHEVROLET CABRIOLET INTRODUCED

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 2.—Addition of a new convertible Cabriolet to the 1931 line of Chevrolet sixes was announced here today by W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager.

The new body type lists at $615 f. o. b., Flint, Mich., and brings the number of passenger models in the Chevrolet line to ten, providing an unusually wide range of models in a low priced car.

The new convertible Cabriolet is a deluxe type car, with sport accessories as standard equipment. Finish is in new duco combinations of English gray, with the upper panel in daphnis green, and trim stripe and wheels in cream.

The new model offers a smart combination of style and utility. With the top raised it becomes a comfortable enclosed coupe. With the top lowered, it is a racy open roadster. The folding top is of fabric, with chrome plated landau irons in the rear and a rumble seat enlarged to carry two passengers comfortably.

Both the rumble seat and the front seat are upholstered in leather, a small leather ridge running down the center of the driver's seat, which is adjustable, to separate the passengers. Instrument panel is of special sport design, an ash tray and pocket are in the right front door and a small package compartment is located back of the front seat. Included as standard equipment are a cowl ventilator, cowl lights, chromium frame on windshield and windows, which lower flush with the door sills, five wire wheels, forward-folding windshield, three chromium plated assist handles to afford easy access to the rumble seat, and radiator grille.

The new type was first shown at the National Automobile show at New York, and dealers throughout the country are being stocked with models for immediate delivery.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for February 8

JESUS THE WORLD'S TEACHER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 6:27-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Great Teacher.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Great Teacher.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living by the Golden Rule.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Accepting the Standards of Jesus.

The context, verse 26, clearly implies what is elsewhere positively declared (John 15:18-21; Luke 21:17) that the followers of Christ will be hated and opposed. In this lesson Christ, the master teacher, sets forth principles governing the life of his followers.

I. "Love Your Enemies" (v. 27).

Love here is not a natural affection. To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been made partakers of the divine nature—been born again.

II. "Do Good to Them Which Hate You" (v. 27).

Love is positive in its nature. The true disciple of Christ will not merely refrain from doing injury to the one who hates him but will be concerned with doing good to him.

III. "Bless Them That Curse You" (v. 28).

To bless means to speak well of, to invoke a blessing upon. Injury by words is hard to let go unchallenged. The true child of God will return blessings for cursings.

IV. "Pray for Them Which Despitefully Use You" (v. 28).

We should pray for those who abuse us. The best commentary on this precept is Christ's own example, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34). When Christ was reviled, he reviled not again. When he suffered, he threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously (I Peter 2:23).

V. Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury (v. 29).

The Christian is not to bristle in defense of his rights but is rather to suffer insult, injury, and even loss. This expresses the law which should govern the individual's action, but should not be pressed so far that evil doers can go unchecked.

VI. "Give to Every Man That Asketh of Thee" (v. 30).

God himself is the supreme example of benevolence. He gives freely and generously but intelligently. This text does not authorize promiscuous giving. It does not mean that every request made by the idle, greedy, and selfish should be granted. A man in poverty needs to be given a way to earn his living.

VII. Do as You Wish to Be Done By (v. 31).

This is called "The Golden Rule." It is the sum total of Christian duty as it pertains to human inter-relations. Human beings carry with them the consciousness of obligation which is the touchstone determining their duty to others. If this rule were lived up to, the problem of capital and labor would be solved, and war would be put to an end. International relations would be peaceably adjusted and all profiteering in business would end.

VIII. Be Ye Merciful (v. 36).

This means to be filled with pity and compassion, to enter into sympathy with every need of others. The heavenly Father is our supreme example.

IX. Censorious Judgments Condemned (v. 37).

This means that we should not seek out the evil or faults in others for our satisfaction. We should not sit in censorious judgment upon the action of others.

X. Compensations of Right Living (v. 38).

The one who gives freely of money, loves sincerely, makes the Golden Rule the standard of his life, shows mercy and kindness to others, and refrains from impugning the motives of others, will be fully rewarded in time.

XI. Danger of Following False Teachers (v. 39).

The one who does not know God and the way to heaven will lead others to ruin.

XII. Those Who Reprove Others Should Strive to Live Blameless Lives (vv. 41, 42).

We should remove evil doing from our own lives before bringing others to account.

XIII. The Sin of Profession Without Fruits (vv. 43-46).

The one who is in fellowship with God will practice the principles which reveal the nature of God.

Ought to Be Sunny and Cheery

Of all the people we Christians ought to be the sunniest and cheeriest. What a difference it would make to the world if our religion made us all a singing folk, and if it helped us to comfort and stablish other people.—J. D. Jones.

Forgiveness

Forgiveness is not only a deliverance from guilt—it is the removal of all that shuts out the love of God from the heart.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Jack Wade, of Russelville, was a visitor to Clanton this week.

CONCORD — BILLINGSLEY

Several members from this church attended the first quarterly conference, which was held last Saturday at Pleasant Grove church.

The President of the Alabama Conference, Rev. C. W. Walton, was present. We were indeed glad to have him with us.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Williams and children, were the all day guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Little Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Croffard Owens of Fairview community were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. Y. Mims.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Lindoll and children spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Fonza Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williams spent Sunday as the guests of their daughter, Mrs. R. A. Hicks of Billingsley.

Misses Bessie and Allie Williams were the dinner guests of Miss Virginia Little Sunday.

Mr. Clyde Sims spent the week end with his grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williams, of Fairview community.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shaw and family spent a few enjoyable hours with Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Foshee last Saturday night.

Mrs. C. D. Foshee was the Saturday afternoon guest of her sister, Mrs. Fonza Williams.

Remember that we still have Sunday school every Sunday morning at 10:00, and Christian Endeavor in the evening at 6:00 o'clock. We invite all our friends to come and be with us.

It seems that the members of both the C. E. and Sunday school are taking more interest. We hope that this will not stop at the close of the contest, but hope it will grow better during the year.

THE CRIMSON WHITE

The Union-Banner has received from someone of our Clanton boys or girls at the University of Alabama, a very extensively marked copy of The Crison-White, a newspaper which is "published for the convenience of Alabama students."

From the carious markings of this copy of The Crimson-White, we glean the following items, which have been abbreviated in such a way as to make it possible for us to give space to a mention of each one.

The front page streamer head says "Centennial Semester Under Way," tapering down to double column subheads which tell us that the new semester begins with numerous plans for interesting year. "Intra-Mural Sports Stressed," and "Politics to Begin Pressure Soon as Candidates Deny Aspirations."

Another big head on the front page says "Ninety-Five Students are Graduated From University Mid-Term." Another marked article on the front page says "Pageant Director Here This Week," a paragraph of which story says "Meanwhile the radio committee for the pageant has completed a schedule which will offer a centennial program over WAPI from 4 to 4:30 each Thursday afternoon.

"Summer School to be Well Attended," is the heading of a front page story. The closing paragraph says "A total of 2,109 were enrolled last year; 1,906 students attended the first session and 1,150 the second."

Dr. Denny received a message from an alumnus in Bombay, India, bearing testimony, as stated in the heading of this article, that the fame of Crimsons is heard round the world.

In the athletic section of the paper there are marked a number of articles, chief of which relates to the coming of Harold Drew as assistant to Coach Thomas. Prospects are bright for a successful track campaign. Host of material available for Crimson Tide Conder Squad. Crimson Tide basketeers win four contests on road trip.

Socially speaking, an article is pointed out which asserts that the mid-winter dances were a big success; Jimmy Green and his orchestra were a distinct hit, etc.

Over on the back page a prominent story is printed under the head "Alpha Delta Pi Pledges Girls for Newly Installed Chapter; outstanding national sorority comes to Alabama Campus." Among the girls who were pledged are named Misses Elizabeth and Myra Johnson of Clanton.

George Fallin is putting in a radiator repair shop in connection with Whites Garage in Clanton.

She expects Jacobs Candy for Valentine. Fresh stock always on hand.—Clanton Drug Co.

OFFER PRIZE FOR OLDEST PIECE OF HOME FURNITURE

Household Science Institute Seeks Material for Exhibit During Chicago's World Fair

Have you a mohair-covered chair or sofa in you home? If so, you may be two hundred and fifty dollars the richer for it!

The Banner is in receipt of a message from the Household Science Institute, Chicago, asking for help in locating the oldest piece of mohair-upholstered furniture in the United States. The Institute feels that there is a possibilty of it being found in this section. The style of the sought for furniture or its use or non-use at the present time are not important, providing it is in good condition. The owner of the piece selected will be awarded $250 and the piece itself will be exibited with old-time furniture during the World's Fair in Chicago in 1933.

Back of the Institute's offer is a desire on part of Grace Viall Gray, its director, to ascertain the longevity of mohair. Although innumerable pieces of mohair-covered furniture and mohair rugs have seen many years of hard daily service, it is claimed that unless deliberately injured, no instance has been found of a mohair fabric ever wearing through.

Clantonians who feel that they have something of interest should communicate with Mrs. Grace Viall Gray, Household Science Institute, 7 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Illinois, giving the history of the piece they have in mind and all facts concerning age, color, condition and other pertinent information. Mrs. Gray will then decide whether the article is the one wanted and make arrangements for shipping it to Chicago.

History does not tell just when it was first discovered that mohair—the long, silky fleece of the Angora goat—made exceedingly beautiful and durable fabrics. But this is known: Mohair fabrics are of great antiquity and have always been looked upon as rare and valuable. Prior to 1881, when George B. and Louis B. Goodall, of Sanford, Maine, perfected a process for weaving mohair on power looms, the manufacture of mohair velvet was largely confined to Germany and France, where it was made by hand. Especially famed is mohair velvet or velmo as it is called for short, as an upholstery fabric. Years of hard day-in-day-out service leave the deep, rich pile unmarred, its colors fresh and undimmed. Unless one willfully cuts or burns it, it is as nearly indestrucible as any woven material can be. This is due largely to the fact that all the rub and wear comes on the top ends or loops of these pile fabrics, whereas in smooth surfaced materials the rub comes on the sides of the individual fibres. Also, because the mohair fibres are smooth-surfaced, the dust and dirt do not easily collect on them and usually a light brushing is all that is required to keep mohair clean and fresh. Housewives' fear of the moths has been ended by the recent perfection of a mill mothproofing process that makes mohair immune to damage by these pests.

Aside from its use in furniture, mohair velvet is the favored fabric used in the upholstery of automobiles, railroad cars, in the making of fine rugs, robes, draperies, clothing and many other articles.

IN MEMORY OF ORA DEVAUGHN

We miss her, oh, we miss her,
For our Saviour salled her away;
But we are praying to meet her,
In a better world some day.

We know she is waiting,
With our Savior on high;
He's there ready to greet us,
Where there's no good byes.

No more on earth we'll see her face,
Her voice we'll hear no more;
But let us live to meet her,
On that bright and happy shore.

We love our dear sister,
No human tongue can tell;
We said gool bye for a little while,
But we didn't say farewell.

She has gone and left us desolate,
But she is so glad and free;
All our tears would turn to smiles,
If her rapture we could see.

Oh, how good and brave and tender,
She was every day, by day;
All the sorrow that she gave us,
Was because she went away.
—Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Devaughn

Mrs. L. C. Duncan and Betsy Ann, of Birmingham, spent last Saturday and Sunday with Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Crumpton in Clanton.

COOPER NEWS

Sunday was our regular preaching day. We sure had a large crowd both Sunday and Sunday night. Our B. Y. P. U. and Sunday school are just fine. We are glad to see so many new members join us.

The singing society met at 1:30 last Sunday. The house was filled with listeners and a fine singing was enjoyed by all.

The party at the home of Mrs. Luke A. Calloway was enjoyed by everyone present. A number of games were played and we also had some good music. Cake and hot chocolate were served.

Those present were as follows:

Eloise Jones, Clyde Robinson, Lettie Pearl Crew, Bell Wise, Lloyd Pinson, Lela Jones, Justin Dupree, Versie Jones, Askew Rockett, Jasper Jones, Mrs. Lillie Mae Jones, Curtis and Ruby Jones, Kermit Connell, Ruby Yates, Duffie Crew, Vergie Robinson, Ernest Jones and Luvanna Calloway.—A reader of the Union-Banner.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. J. C. HUBBARD

On January 20, 1931, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Dealie Traywick of Clanton and bore the spirit of her mother, Mrs. J. C. Hubbard, age 82, to the great beyond.

She was the wife of Mr. Matson Hubbard, who was laid to rest about three years ago. She was a good Christian and church worker, and a kind and loving mother and neighbor, always ready to assist anyone in time of need. She bore her suffering with great patience, and praised God that He was ready to take her with what she had done, and was sensible of her death, and told us all not to weep for her but to be ready to meet her in the great beyond.

She leaves four children to mourn her loss, Mrs. Dealie Traywick of Clanton; Mrs. Rhoda Ann Robinson, of Randolph; Mrs. Birdy Cassey, of Randolph; Mr. Sam Hubbard, of Thorsby, and several grand children and a host of friends.

She was laid to rest in Pates Chapel cemetery, where her membership was. Rev. Lowery conducted the funeral services.

Mr. and Mrs. Kin Vinson and children, of Milledgeville, Ga., spent last week end with relatives and friends in Clanton.

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewistown, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

Gentlemen: I started taking Kruschen every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give "Kruschen Salts" a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs., and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel better in every way, besides looking much better.

May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince anyone.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at Alred Drug Company, or any drugstore in America. Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. To help reduce swiftly cut out pastry and fatty meats and go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

The Kruschen way is the safe way to reduce—Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back.

BETHSALEM

Our Sunday school was enjoyed by a large crowd Sunday. There was 69 present. Our Superintendent read the 53rd chapter of Isaiah for opening services, after which he made us a good talk after the classes. Our advanced class sung a special song, which was enjoyed by all. The men of the Bible Class had better hustle, for the women are taking the lead in number. Come early everybody and help us, for we are hoping to do a great work by the help of the Lord.

MT. PLEASANT JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Mt. Pleasant Junior High School Again wins over Baker

Thursday afternoon Prof. Williams and Mrs. Strock brought the sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth grades of the Baker school over to Mt. Pleasant to compete in their second spelling bee of this year. The contest was lively, interesting, and worth while throughout its entire time.

The long hallway of the big Mt. Pleasant building was ideal for this purpose. Immediately after arriving the Baker group formed a long line and marched in, lining up in the hallway just opposite the Mt. Pleasant students. Fifty three pupils from each school participated in the match.

Words were given from the state adapted text books, intermediate and Jr. High spellers. The contest ended with four Mt. Pleasant pupils standing. Those four being Renfroe Price, Lucile Price, Dorothy Jones and J. P. Culp. The last two up for Baker were Willis Baker and Myrtle Powell, and what a thrill they put into this contest is something everyone should appreciate. These two spellers flashed many surprises to everyone present by spelling with seeming great ease words that ordinarily are considered difficult. But to Baker's regret and to Mt. Pleasant's exultant joy the word "parliament" was called, after a brief pause, two attempts were made by the last Baker Speller, Miss Myrtle Powell, the word was then passed to Miss Lucile Price. "Finis" was written to the contest. Amid great cheering and noise the Baker classes departed, everyone feling highly benefitted from the friendly school contest.

Mt. Pleasant added another victory this week to its winning column. The boys basketball team defeated the Stanton boys, by a rather one-sided score. 16 to 8 being the final count. The Mt. Pleasant boys took an early 6-point lead and never relinquished it during the game. The game was interesting, and well played. Neither side were guilty of excessive fouling. Next Friday, February 6th, the fast Junior High team from Jemison will play Mt. Pleasant on the latter's court. The Jemison boys have won the larger per centage of their games this season, and they have a well balanced little team.

This game will be highly interesting, and may prove to be the hardest and closest fought game this season on the Mt. Pleasant court. Everyone is invited to come. The game will be called at 2:45 p. m.

The Junior II and III girls home problems class, under the supervision of their instructor, Miss Littlejohn, gave a reception in honor of the basketball team last Friday night. The netertainment was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. V. B. Edwards. Several new games and contests were introduced. A delightful time was had by all present.

The attendance at school has been very good during last month. We feel fortunate in not having an epidemic of some dreaded distase to break into our school as it has in some of the other schools.

The Parent-Teachers meeting will be held at the school building next Thursday afternoon, February 5, at 2:30. The president, principal, and teachers urge that all members be present. Several interesting and important matters are to be discussed.

Several of the pupils have been inquring recently just why Miss Littlejohn and Miss Raney went to Montgomery last Saturday week. They supposedly went on business; but this year there seems to be a marriage epidemic sweeping through the teaching profession, and too, the larger per cent secretly, so naturally how are we going to keep suspicion from arising? But nevertheless they report not guilty, so guess we may rest contented at that.

We were glad to have a large number of patrons to visit our school last Friday afternoon. We cordially invite you to come again. It is encouraging to both teacher and child for the parents to manifest this interest in visiting the school. Remember the P.-T. A. meeting next Thursday.

Our County School Superintendent, Mr. Lawrence, has promised to come out to our school within the next few days and make a talk to the Jr. III civics class. The subject has not yet been announced, but will be, by the next issue of this paper.

Through the sale of garden seed the school has raised $4.15 which will be applied for school equipment.

The Jr. III English class is having a series of debates. On Monday Misses Leuttie Cooper and Vera Jones will match the arguments against Messrs. Woodrow Price and Grady Miner. The girls will uphold the affirmative side of the question: "Resolved that the fly is a more deadly enemy to mankind than the mosquito."

On Tuesday the subject will be. "Resolved that the radio is more enjoyable than a Victrola.' Julia Edwards and Renfroe Price will speak for the negative side, while Eunice Holley and Grady Miner will support the affirmative.

Leadership

Alabama's Greatest Natural Resource

ALABAMA'S greatest natural resource is the quality of leadership inherent in her people. Alabama has an almost unlimited wealth of mineral deposits, timber, fertile soil and waterways. It is the center of a market of about twenty million people with a buying power of more than seven billion dollars yearly.

But these have little value without management—without that quality of leadership which in the past has carried Alabama safely thru every crisis.

Always in the past, leaders have stepped forth from the throng in periods of political disorder or of economic stress and carried Alabama's banner forward to new heights. But the line is not played out. The blood of these great leaders still flows through the veins of Alabama's sons.

In every county you will find today business leaders who have turned their backs on this depression, wiped off their losses, shut their ears to hard times talk and started planning for the good times which are coming back again.

By their courage and faith, their energy and vision, these business leaders will contribute in large measure to prosperity's return. Alabama's progress in this new decade will be determined by the response of our people to wise leadership.

After traveling thru the darkness of depression, Alabama's present business leaders have come into the dawn with a new appreciation of the great opportunity the future holds in store for our state and a new determination that Alabama shall go forward—at a far faster pace than she has ever yet traveled.

U. S. TO TAKE PART IN LIBERIAN COMMISSION

Washington, Feb. 3.—The State Department forwarded to the League of Nations tonight its acceptance of an invitation for American participation in an International Commission on Liberia.

The commission is being formed to consider means for the negro republic to carry out the recommendations on slavery contained in the recent report of the commission which investigated enforced labor conditions in that country.

Designation of the American commissioner will be announced this week, the State Department making public at the same time its reply to the League invitation to cooperate. Poland, Italy, France, Germany, Spain, the British Empire, Venezuela and Liberia have also been asked by the League to designate commissioners.

R. H. Popwell of Thorsby was in Clanton Wednesday afternoon attending to business. He was accompanied by Mrs. Popwell.

FORD TO CONTINUE RUBBER PLANTING

Motor Company To Speed Up Work In Brazil

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 3.—The Ford Motor Company, instead of planning abandonment of its Brazilian rubber plantation, intends to speed up the work there, a statement issued by the company Tuesday said:

"There is no truth in the report that the Ford rubber plantation is to be abandoned," the statement said.

The fact is that work towards completition of the project is progressing at this moment ahead of schedule, it was announced.

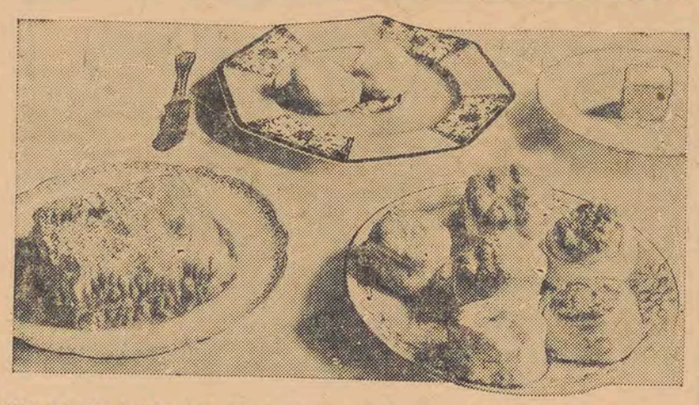
Within less than three years since the concession was acquired more than 3,500 acres of jungles have been cleared and nearly two-thirds of that acreage has been terraced and drained for planting.

"In the same time more than 140,000 seedlings actually have been set out and a nursery with upwards of 200,000 seedlings has been developed in readiness for planting as additional acreage is terraced and drained."

FOOD PRICE HEARINGS TO BEGIN NEXT WEEK

Washington, Feb., 3—Hearings in the state's investigation of food prices will begin next Tuesday.

The agriculture sub-committee appointed to make the investigation today fixed that date for beginning its study of the prices of bread, wheat and flour.



The investgation into the cost of meats, dairy products and sugar will follow later.

Chairman Capper said the witness would include representatives of the big baking companies which recently participated in mergers, representatives of farm organizations, retail dealers and millers.

. . . SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

By GRACE VIALL GRAY

What tastes better than Hot Biscuits and Honey, whether it be morning, noon or night? These appetizing-looking biscuits were "made in a jiffy" with self-rising flour.

HOT BISCUITS AND HONEY

"Eat natural sweets" say the doctors and dieticians. They are more healthful and less injurious to the teeth and digestion than rich, heavy sweets, and by natural sweets we mean dates, figs, raisins and honey—nature's own preserves.

And with honey, of course, the natural complement is hot biscuits! Piping hot biscuits, plenty of sweet butter and pure, unadulterated honey—what could be a more perfect combination for that high Sunday evening supper or to serve at an informal gathering?

The biscuits need not cause you any anxiety if you are not a thoroughly experienced housewife. A great deal of the uncertainty can be removed from biscuit making by the use of self-rising flour; that is, soft wheat flour to which has already been added at the mill the right amounts of pure mono-calcium phosphate and bicarbonate of soda, which is really baking powder, and salt for seasoning. To use, the flour is sifted only once and the mixture should be handled as little and as lightly as possible.

Here is the recipe which is as simple as it is economical:

Hot Biscuits.

2 cups self-rising flour
2 tbsp. fat
⅔ cup milk (whole or fresh buttermilk)

Sift and measure the flour. Add the shortening and cut or rub it into the flour. Then add the milk a little at a time to make a soft dough. Roll until about one-third inch thick and cut with a biscuit cutter. Place on a baking sheet and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) about ten minutes. Serve at once with butter and honey.

BROWNIES ARE FAVORITES

There comes inevitably in every little girl's life the moment when her sense of hospitality is aroused and she will want to make something all by herself to serve the little girls who are coming over to play with her in the afternoon. Mother will undoubtedly be appealed to and, if wise, will suggest the ever-favorite "brownies," sometimes referred to as baked fudge.

Brownies have the advantage of being extremely simple to make, nutritious but not over-rich, and are always greeted with murmurs of delight.

If the following simple directions are followed, good results can be expected, even by the little girl who has had no previous experience. Remember that all measurements should be level and accurate. By using self-rising flour, no baking powder nor salt is required, as these ingredients have already been added in just the right proportions by the manufacturer before you buy the flour. Such flour is easy for children to use. There is no measuring and mixing of baking powder or salt and success is easily assured. The flour needs only one sifting.

Brownies.

¼ cup butter
3 squares or oz. cooking chocolate
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
½ cup self-rising flour
1 tsp. vanilla
⅔ cup nut meats

First add the butter to the chocolate and melt over hot water. Add the sugar and eggs, unbeaten. Beat until well blended. Then add the remaining ingredients in the order given and when well mixed pour into a greased and floured cake pan to the depth of one-half inch. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) until quite firm but not brown. Cut into squares while still warm.

These may be served with a beverage such as lemonade or grape punch, or in the place of cake with ice cream if a more substantial collation is desired.

ALABAMA STUDENTS DIE IN AUTO CRASH

Aberdeen, N. C., Feb. 3. —Two young men, believed to have been students at the University of Alabama, were fatally injured near here today when their auto turned over.

The dead are: Nichollo d'Carlo, 21, and Gerald Cetrulo, 20, of New York City.

A card was found in the pocket of Cetrulo, indentifying him as a member of a club at the University of Alabama.

They were alone and the car apparently turned over when the driver attempted to put it back on the road after he had run off the pavement.

D'Carlo died en route to the Moore County Hospital at Southern Pines. Cetrulo lived about three hours.

BOOKER WASHINGTON ASSOCIATION, INCORP.

The officials of the Booker Washington Association report that they are in need of immediate funds to meet obligations, for the Orphanage and Aged Home to be erected near Verbena, Ala., for negroes. They have appealed to the leaders of both races, Christian organizations, civic and social, fraternal and benevolent societies, teachers and churches, to come to their call during these crises, and it is expected that all will make reports by the first of February, 1931, as the obligations to be met on the first are urgent ones.

To make a donation toward the association at once means life and progress to the Negro race. Since this is to be a Negro institution and the only one of its kind in the State, it will speak well for the Negroes of Alabama to have one decent orphanage, a decent home for their orphans and dependents, and by the cooperation of all in the State, this project can be made a success and not only be a home but will be places of employment for Negro boys and girls. And in the future will be a credit to both races and to the State. It will also be a medium by which crimes will be lessened among the Negroes. The principles of upright living, industrial training, intellectual and sanitation will be the important branches carried out.

The officials state that they have no limit to any donation; help in any way will be accepted. The same will be seed sown in good soil, which will some day bring forth good fruit in the life of some Negro child.

Address all communications to the Booker Washington Association, 111 1-2 Monroe Street, Montgomery.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Dr. Rutla d Makes Talk

(By Mary Courtney Jones)

Last September Dr. Rutland, from the State Department of Health, working with the dentists of Chilton County at Clanton, made a dental inspection of all pupils. After the examinations were made and corrections recommended, a dental chart was presented to each with suggestions that each pupil's name be entered with a star when his mouth was corrected.

Dr. Rutland made our school another visit last Wednesday and gave us a most splendid talk. He showed by the use of slides, and explained that pyorrhea is a condition of the teeth and not a disease. He also showed different stages of decay in a tooth. His visit was to emphasize to us that the teeth are an important factor in health and the use of the tooth-brush was a good habit. A certificate is to be awarded to the room that has 100 per cent teeth corrected.

School Campus Undergoes Change

Mr. Brewster from Auburn gave us some good suggestions about improving the looks of the campus. These few days has seen quite a bit of improvement in the planting and rearranging of flowers. Almost any period of the day may be found some of the boys working on the campus under the directions of Mr. Walker and Mr. Varnell. This work is done by the boys in the agriculture classes and manual arts department. You will see a different campus, we hope, in the next few months.

C. C. H. S. defeated Holtville High last Tuesday afternoon to the tune of 65 to 13. There was no comparison between the two teams. Coach Walker used every substitute he had on the team.

JAMES ARNOLD MIMS KILLED

James Arnold Mims, age 4 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zeb Mims of Beat 16, was killed in an automobile accident on the Higgins Ferry Road at Matt Johnson's place Sunday night.

Two cars, one occupied by the Mims family, and the other by a Mr. Cleckler, brother of Mrs. Mims, collided in some way as they were passing each other. The child was thrown from the car and its neck was broken.

The little fellow was rushed to the hospital in Clanton, but was dead before it got there.

Burial was at Refuge Monday. The funeral was conducted by Rev. M. J. Parrish.

LINE NO. 53 PUT IN GOOD SHAPE

Peoples Telephone Line No. 53, going up by Ed Bruce's and William Jones', has been put up from one end to the other during the past few days, and all the people on that line are getting splendid service except one or two who have weak phones.

One great trouble with phoneholders is that they let their box get a little out of order or let their batteries die, and they just neglect fixing it up. Probably while their phone is out of order they spend twice as much going different places where calls could be used than fixing the phone would cost.

Several are still paying up their dues both in town and out of town. People are realizing that they cannot afford to give up their telephones. The automobile is good and is something that we could scarcely do without, but nothing takes the place of a telephone. It is the least expensive thing we can possibly have in our homes that furnishes us the service it does.

...SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

By GRACE VIALL GRAY

ARE YOU HOSPITABLE?

Are you hospitable, really—in the good old-fashioned way for which the South is famous? If not, I expect it is because you feel swamped with the many demands that modern Twentieth century living puts upon us women and have just fallen out of the way of extending informal invitations to friends to share your meal, whatever it may be, on a few minutes' notice.

If this is what has happened to you, why not get back into the habit of easy hospitality right away and start tonight by asking some one to drop in and take "pot luck?"

Serve the regular, simple meal you were planning, only make it a bit more interesting and appetizing by the addition of one of the many quick loaf breads that can be made with self-rising flour, the newest innovation in home baking.

Orange bread, for example, is delicious and has the merits of being economical, quick and simple. If you will follow this recipe exactly, you will have a splendid addition to the evening meal that will give it all the flourish of a specially prepared "company" dinner:

Orange Bread.

2 tbsp fat
½ cup sugar
2 cups self-rising flour
1 cup milk
1 egg
½ cup candied orange peel or the grated rind of 1 orange
½ cup nut meats, broken into small pieces

Mix together the fat, sugar and flour; add the milk and egg. Beat until well blended; add the orange peel and nuts. Pour the mixture into a greased bread pan and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for an hour.

Sounds easy, doesn't it? It is! And remember, self-rising flour needs only one sifting and no baking powder and salt are needed, as they are already blended by the miller in the correct proportions.

NEGRO FOUND DEAD NEAR C[illegible]

Body Said To Have Been Lying In the Woods For Perhaps A Month or More

The body of an unidentified negro man, apparently about 25 years of age, was found Tuesday near Coosa River between Norman's camp and Mitchell Dam. The discovery of the body was made by a Mrs. Easterling, who was passing along a trail through the woods on her way to visit a neighboring family.

Coroner Mell Martin was notified, and went to the scene to make investigation Monday night. After returning from the investigation Mr. Martin stated that he was unable to find any clue as to the identy of the negro, when he died, or how he came to his death. Evidences found by Mr. Martin indicated that the negro had been dead for perhaps a month.

He had on a blue overall jumper, a yellow stripe shirt, and a pair of light gray trousers. He was a small slim black negro, bearing a scar on the left side of the neck. He had on a pair of slippers with rubber soles tacked on.

Close beside the body Coroner Martin reports that he found a fruit jar about one-fourth full of whiskey. One theory advanced is that the negro got on a high lonesome, and lost his way as he wandered through the rough country in the neighborhood. He perhaps sat down in a drunken dilemma, fell asleep and froze to death.

Coroner Martin Wednesday was making arrangements to have the body buried by the county.

EAST VIEW NEWS

Our Sunday School superintendent, Mr. J. Y. Nelson, is sick in bed with flu this week. We hope he will soon be well again.

Rev. A. W. Sparks of Ohio preached an interesting sermon on the subject of "Church Union," here Monday night. The services were well attended and everybody enjoyed the services.

Rev. A. W. Sparks and Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Nelson were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Smith Tuesday.

Rev. A. W. Sparks and Rev. A. C. Nelson motored to Mt. Springs Tuesday evening, where they conducted services Tuesday night.

Don't forget to come to the singing next Thursday night, and bring your song books. We hope to have a good singing.

Next Saturday and Sunday is our regular preaching days. Don't forget to come to church. We need your help and you are always welcome to meet and worship with us.

We want our Saviour's prayer, "That we all may be one," John 17:21, to be answered at our church.

If you find a welcome at East View, tell others, if not tell us.

Bring the little ones to Sunday School next Sunday. We have a real good Sunday School, but there are yet some children and older ones who do not attend Sunday School anywhere. What will you say when the King says give an account of your stewardship.

ALABAMA STRAWBERRIES SHOW 50% REDUCTION

The Alabama Strawberry crop this year is expected to be at least 50 per cent less than that produced last year, reported by B. P. Livingston, head of the plant industry division of the Department of Agriculture and Industries, yesterday afternoon after visiting some of the largest strawberry growers in Escambia, Conecuh and Butler Counties.

Mr. Livingston reported that there is less than 50 per cent as many plants living this year as there were the same date last year. Many of the large fields have been plowed up because of poor stands. The plants that are living are in about the same condition that they were last year, he said.

Mr. Livingston reports that better quality may be expected as the plants are thinner and will have more space in which to produce strawberries.

Along with the report of the 50 per cent shortage of strawberries in Alabama comes the news of a eleven per cent less crop of strawberries in the United States than was produced last year. The entire crop this year is expected to be twelve per cent below the past five year average.

TEXAS FOSTERING BIG EGG STORAGE PLANT

Texas, home of many modern farming ideas, is fostering a new thought—a co-operative egg storags plant which a group of farmers there believe will enable egg producers to obtain a greater portion of the profits from this farm product.

A 2,400 case, electrically refrigerated storage plant is being constructed in the farm community of Bowie, Texas, and will be ready for early spring. Summer eggs, ordinarily thrown on an unprofitable market, will be held for the more favorable fall and winter prices.

The community egg storage inovation followed a chamber of commerce investigation of the success of the small egg refrigerating plants, a number of which have been operated in the Lone Star State for the past two years by individual farmers and merchants of farming communities. Impressed, the Bowie egg producers decided upon the proposed plant, which is said to be twice the size of any now in operation.

One of the first of such plants was built by Lee Faulkner, Bellevue, Texas, merchant, who reported that during the first year he bought summer eggs for $7.50 a case and sold them in November for $12.50 a case.

"From the above figures," Mr. Faulkner stated, "it is evident that my plant, which cost $3,000, not only paid for itself during the first year, but that such a plant is a valuable asset to a business like mine, or a farm community."

The Bowie plant, like the others in Texas, will be of a frame construction, cork board insulation and will be refrigerated by Frigidaire equipment.

Interest in this farm innovation, according to engineers of Frigidaire Corporation, Dayton, Ohio, is great, and a number of egg producers throughout the southwest have requested this General Motors subsidiary for information concerning the success of such projects.

ALABAMA LIVESTOCK CONSUMPTION LARGER

During 1930 livestock consumption in Alabama increased over 1929, says F. W. Gist, State and Federal statistician of the Department of Agriculture, who reported the total value for 1930 was $78.175,000 compared with $74,572,000 in 1929. "The greater number of animals sold and slaughtered resulted in some reduction of the number on farms January 1, 1931 as compared with the number on farms at the same date in 1930, he said.

The number of cattle sold and slaughtered by farmers in Alabama in 1930 was 341,000 compared to 288,000 in 1929. The value of these was $8,695,000 in 1930 and $4,673,000 in 1929.

There were 1,101,000 hogs sold and slaughtered by the farmers of the state in 1930 compared with 968,000 in 1929, and the values for the two years were $16,119,000 and $15,166,000 respectively.

In 1930 there were 37,000 sheep sold and slaughtered compared with 30,000 in 1929 and the value for 1930 was $155,000 and for 1929 $90,000.

There were sold and eaten by Alabama farmers 9,632,000 chickens in 1930 compared with 8,524,000 in 1929. The value of these were $5,490,000 in 1930 and $5,477,000 in 1929.

There were produced on Alabama farms 114,245,000 gallons of milk in 1930 compared with 110,136,000 gallons in 1929. The value of these quantities were $34,273,000 in 1930 and $33,040,000 in 1929.

Eggs produced in 1930 in the State amounted to 53,765,000 dozens compared to 52,020,000 in 1929, and the values were $13,441,000 in 1930 and $16,126,000 in 1929.

The greater number of animals sold and slaughtered during 1930 resulted in some reduction of the number on farms of January 1, 1931 as compared with the number on farms at the same date in 1930.

The number of chickens on farms increased materially during the year, there being on farms 7,135,000 on January 1, 1931, and 6,486,000 on January 1, 1930.

The aggregate value of animals on farm in 1930 was materially less than the year before. The total value $49,044,000 for 1931 compared with $66,300,000 in 1930. The value per head of all animals was materially less this year than last.

The average production of eggs per one hundred hens per day was practically the same during 1930 as during 1929.

The per cent of cows milked each day during 1930 was 59 per cent of the number on hand compared with 58 per cent for 1929, and the average production per cow per day was the same for both years, being 1.5 gallons per day for each cow milked.

STATE CREDIT HELPED BY FORESTRY

Montgomery, Feb. 2.—A commonwealth that makes continuously profitable use of its land is in a far better position to incur and repay bonded indebtedness than is one that permits abuse and deterioration of this fundamental source of production, points out Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester of Alabama. This is not only because of the great money value of the consecutive yields from agriculture and forestry but also on account of the large investments brought into the state in the way of industries that use for their raw materials the primary products derived from the farm and forest.

The productive capacity of both agricultural and forestral soil is continuously renewable under proper management. This is in contrast to mineral resources. The mines and quarries have a definite amount of material which when once removed cannot be replaced. Economic prosperity based wholly upon such resources is apt to prove transient and unless the farms and forests are also in full production, the state, at almost any time, may find itself in serious straits.

Bond buyers and industrial investors alike view with pronounced favor the commonwealth that maintains at a high level its ability to produce. A state like Alabama in which two-thirds of the land surface will furnish profitable yields of timber, but little else, is always face to face with the responsibility of maintaining this vast resourses in profitable use.

COAL and COKE
Build Buying Power

....Payrolls they Create Are Spent at Home

EVERY Alabama cotton farmer knows that soil wears out . . . and that unless he keeps on putting back into the ground again health building plant foods it will cease to grow crops.

Exactly the same thing is true of Alabama business. Unless Alabama citizens enrich the Alabama market by putting back into it money they have made, the Alabama market will wear out and cease to grow profits.

Almost all of every dollar that you spend for Alabama coal or coke goes back into the Alabama market, enriching it again so that it can keep on growing profits for the Alabama merchant, farmer, manufacturer, lawyer, doctor and business man.

Almost all of every dollar that you spend for Natural Gas leaves the state, taking money from the pockets of Alabama people who buy from you—impoverishing instead of enriching Alabama soil.

The Natural Gas line from Louisiana which runs thru Alabama, has an annual capacity of about thirty-six billion five hundred million cubic feet of gas. This is the equivalent of about one million three hundred and fifty thousand tons of average Alabama coal or coke per year.

Production of this supply of Louisiana gas requires absolutely no Alabama labor, and creates no payrolls for the state.

Production of its equivalent of Alabama coal or coke would furnish a years work to about one thousand Alabama miners.

The transportation of this supply of Louisiana gas requires practically no Alabama labor after pipe lines are once laid.

The transportation of its equivalent of Alabama coal or coke requires over 27,000 freight cars, gives employment to many Alabama railroad employees and produces gross revenues for Alabama railroads of about one million seven hundred thousand dollars.

This is the seventh of a series of advertisements, published by Alabama coal and coke companies about Alabama coal and coke.

To help all Alabama business—your business—burn Alabama coal or coke in your home or power plant.

POULTRY

FEED CHICKS WHEN YOU PUT THEM INTO THE BROOD-HOUSE

A great many of poutrymen last year, upon the recommendations of the experiment stations and poultry feed manufacturers, began feeding their chicks, with very satisfactory results, just as soon as they were taken out of the incubator, or as soon as they received them from the hatchery.

For a good many years poultry authorities insisted that chicks should not be fed until they were 48 to 72 hours old, so as to give the yolk which is drawn into the chick's body just before it leaves the shell a chance to be digested. They were of the opinion that feeding chicks as soon as they were taken out of the incubator interfered with the digestion of the yolk and it would eventually decompose, causing many chicks to die.

What really happened was that the chicks got hungry, and not having had anythng to eat, not having been taught what constituted feed, they started to pick away at the litter on the floor. They actually would eat a considerable amount of the sand, shavings or straw, filling their tender digestive systems with the fibrous material, which they later were unable to dispose of and thus starved to death when a week to ten days old.

If you did not try feeding the chicks just as soon as they were put in the brooder last year, be sure to try it this year. Chicks that are old enough to be taken out of the incubator are old enough to eat starter. You are less apt to lose them; they will actually make better growth. When one stops to consider that a chick gains 26 times its original weight in the first twelve weeks, it is easy to understand that proper nourishment is very vital the first few days of its life. Health, growth and ability to digest and assimilate its feed later depends directly upon it.

WATER VERY VITAL IN THE LIFE OF CHICKS

We hardly can overestimate the importance of fresh clean water for the baby chicks. It constitutes more than half of the chick's body, and in addition it helps to soften and digest the food, plus assisting in the carrying of waste out of the system.

For the first week the chicks should receive luke-warm water.

It is generally dangerous to put any disinfectant in the drinking water. Some may poison the chicks, while others may not go so well with the feed. Clean lukewarm water given in clean drinking fountains is by far the safest. Make it a point to thoroughly clean the drinking vessels once a day, and if convenient, scald them.

If not using a wire floor in the brooder house, it is best to put the drinking cup on a platform with a wire cloth top. This will keep the chucks away from the wet litter brought about by the water they spill. The litter around the drinking fountains offers a wonderful chance for infection of coccidiosis and kindred diseases.

A FARMER'S TERRIBLE PLIGHT

A farmer's pathetic report as faithfully transmitted by the Stewart Crop Service, Atlanta, Georgia:

"I have your statement showing that I owe you $769.80 and I am enclosing a cheque for $5, for which please send me a receipt.

"I am sorry that I cannot pay you more at the present as I am unable to collect from my customers, as money is so scarce right now.

"My own living expenses are terrible and with my store and farm, I can hardly get along. I will try to send you another payment of $5 when I sell my hay which should be in June. I cannot pay you more at that time for my daughter finished college this year and that costs a heap of money.

"I thought I could send you a check when I got my tobacco money, but it took all I could rake and scrape to put in the lights, as my wife did not have electricity to run the separator, the sewing machine and the vaccum cleaner. Then too, we had to build a shed to put the Ford in, so we could put the new Cadillac in the garage, and build a cement bridge over the brook in front of our lot as well as a new road so we could get in and out better.

"I can't send you the corn money in the fall because my son is going to college and although the lads of today are very economical about hats and garters, still a coon skin coat costs the old man a lot of money and even junkyard cars come rather high by the time they get decorated for college use.

"I might send you the hog money, but the missus and I have planned a trip in the fall and after her working hard all these years. I think she deserves a trip. We can't go before fall for she is having the house re-decorated and re-furnished, taking out all the red-plush and putting in overstuffed cane and mahogany. This is a terrible strain on my finances, especially as the new up-to-date barn has to be paid for.

"All the farmers here are in a hard place financially with strawberries at this season 75 cents per quart and he price of gasoline as it is. Then too, there is an epidemic among the married women to have their plain gold wedding rings platinized and set with diamonds and everybody is having their tonsils and teeth removed.

"Maybe next year things will look brighter, and I can pay you what I owe you, but right now things look mighty black for us farmers."—Columbus, (Ga.) Inquirer-Sun.

THORSBY SECTION

(S. E. Norton, Manager)

The song service at the Congregational church last Sunday night was one of the best ever attended and ever conducted in that church.

The singing hymns by the congregation was interspersed with vocal solos, duets, trios and quartets, by people in the the audience. Rev. Each, Gresham Lowery and A. N. Laurell, were chosen leaders. Gresham and his brother, Herbert, of Clanton, gave a duet, in a very artistic rendering, to the great delight of the audience. At the close of his turn at leading, Mr. Lowery said, "It is always a pleasure to lead a group of singers who are interested and will sing as you all have done tonight, but it is a hard and thankless job to try to lead where the people will not sing. I am delighted with the response I have had from you tonight and wish to thank you all for it."

In making our rounds Tuesday morning, we were attracted by the neat and substantial brick (veneered) cottage that Mr. E. N. Dyrhovd is building on Summit Avenue. In conversation with him, we learn that he intends to sell his farm home, north of town, and occupy the cottage for his residence. He will have five rooms and a bath, and plenty of closets. A fire place in the living room with electric current for lights, and other purposes. He has ground room enough to furnish a garden and seems to be planning to spend his advanced years in comfort.

SOME NOTEWORTHY FACTS ABOUT COUNTY SCHOOLS

In Chilton County we do not have the county one-mill tax for schools, as many other counties in the State have. Indeed there are only a few counties which have not such a tax, and we are one of the few. But we have tried to vote this tax several times but have failed.

The fact that we have not the county one-mill tax causes us to lose not only the school funds which the tax provided but also one thousand dollars of bonus money which the State gives every year to counties which levy the special one-mill tax. Neither do we get any of the $900,000 state equalization fund, which is apportioned only to counties which levy the one-mill tax.

Six years ago the County Board of Education was about twenty thousand dollars in debt. On October the first of last year this debt had been reduced to about nine thousand dollars. According to the present budget plans of the County Board, at the end of the present year, September 30, the debt will be reduced to about four thousand dollars.

Some have said that as long as we have a County Board of Education it will be in debt. We do not believe that statement. Our prediction is that those of us who are fortunate enough to live a few more years will see that our school business has got out of debt and operating on a cash basis. That is what it ought to be.

The County Board of Education has invested over six thousand dollars in bus bodies during last two years. These are used on the transportation trucks.

In view of the splendid program of the County Board, which has been inaugurated for this year, the schools of this county will operate a little over seven months. This will put the schools of Chilton Coun up to the standard requirement of the State.

Four Senior high schools in the County will run nine months in the high school grades. They are Chilton County High School, Verbena, Jemison and Isabella.

The County Board is to be commended for giving us as good schools and as much schooling as they are doing on the amount of funds they have to operate. What we need to do in this County is to take such steps as will provide more funds for schools. Then we might reasonably expect longer school terms.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

In no controversy with the Senate has the President acquitted himself with more widespread approval than that which has been accorded him generally as a result of the controversy over the appointments to the Federal Power Commission. It will be remembered that recommendations of the President for appointment to this important commission were considered by the Senate and then approved. The new commissioners were sworn into office and the committee had commenced to function. The first disturbance arose in the Senate when the commission dismissed two subordinate employes, the reason given being that this move was conducive to harmony in the commission. Immediately there was an outcry from certain senators that the commission as newly organized was too friendly to the "power trust" whatever that may be, and it was even inferred in some quarters that this action of the new commission in firing two employes indicated that the Chief Executive was too friendly with this same power trust.

Next came a motion asking the President to return the appointments to the Senate for reconsideration. This motion through a combination of progressives and Democrats was carried. This was taken to indicate that the Senate wished to withdraw its approval of the new commissioners for the reason that they had discharged two employes without the approval of the Senate or at least two employes whom the Senate approved.

This resolution gave Prsident Hoover an excellent opening and he was quick to avail himself of it. The reply which the Chief Executive made gently but firmly informed the Senate that it was exceeding its powers in seeking to recall the appointment of officials of the government already in office. In commenting on the time consumed in the debate of this resolution growing out of the discharge of two commission emplyes the President said: "I regret that the government should be absorbed upon such questions as the action of the power commission in employment or non-employment of two subordinate officials at a time when the condition of the country requires every constructive energy."

If it were to be granted that the Senate could recall its confirmation of appointments because of some administrative action taken which did not meet with the approval of the Senate it is easy to see how the executive and administrative department of the government might become nothing more than a subordinate branch of the Senate. Certainly no such thing was contemplated by the framers of the Constitution. The situation is well summed up in the following editorial comment of the Kansas City Star, a newspaper noted for its independence:

"President Hoover's answer to the Senate and statement to the public on the power commission controversy have given him a strong position before the country on the question and principles involved. In that position he is sustained by the Constitution, by precedent, and by unprejudiced judgment. The encounter is not a matter of spontaneous disagreement; it is a culmination of long and disheartening harassment of the President by the Senate coalition. The fight was forced in somewhat dramatic fashion, and the President has acquitted himself, with distinction.

"Without questioning the sincerity of many in the coalition as to the power issue, as such, the partisan and factional politics of the coalition procedure in this matter is as uncomplimentary to the majority as it is obvious to the country. The relatively insignificant issue served as an excuse not as a justification, for the action taken. But the action struck so vitally at the constitutional prerogatives of the chief executive. It involved the great essentials of sound government organization. The President had to accept the challenge. Come what may, even to an extra session, the President had to meet the issue, and we believe the country will say he met it ably and convincingly."

KILLING THE LITTLE FELLOW

Imports of oil and oil products in 1929 aggregated in value about $150,000,000, and despite the depression such importations are increasing this year. We are importing about the same quantity of crude oil as we have been accumulating as surplus from domestic production. Our own oil fields are subjected to limitation of output, with consequent idleness in the oil fields and refineries, and loss of royalties to farmers.

The biggest oil interests successfully opposed when the new tariff law was passed any tariff on crude oil. Increasing importations with a decrease in the domestic demand, have resulted in hardship and in many cases of bankruptcies for the smaller independent oil companies and individual producers. This has placed the independent oil companies in a weakened position which promotes the merger processes by which they are being either put out of business or swallowed up.

The defense offered for limitation of our own oil output while importations are encouraged is that it "conserves" the domestic oil supply against some future day of need. Twenty years ago the experts told the American people that our oil supply was diminishing and in sight of extinction. Since that time we have produced more oil than the experts then declared existed, and have several times that amount in sight. It has been demonstrated that our crude oil potential supply is almost inexhaustible. New fields have been discovered so productive that the wells are capped and drilling has ceased. One oil well in Texas discovered within the last two years has a greater daily potential production than all the oil wells east of the Mississippi. Improvement of boiling, piping of natural gas and other developments in fuel engineering postpone the possibility of crude oil exhaustion into the indefinite future. Moreover it seems possible that other means of energy production may be found which will render oil of decreasing importance.

The "conservation" argument for closing down our own oil fields and buying our oil abroad, recalls the fight made by a member of Congress in the early days of the republic in favor of the conservation of flint beds, on the ground that the time would come when enough flints to fire muskets could not be procured.

When an oil tariff was proposed last spring, the cry went up that it was being asked by the big oil interests. These very interests, international in their operations, were the really influential foes of such a tariff. Its absence permits them to squeeze out the small companies through the importation of oil and the consequent glutting of the market. The result is unnecessary unemployment and destruction of earnings for small oil companies and owners of oil bearing lands, mostly small farmers. The time will perhaps come when the American people will refuse to be fooled on the tariff question by the international bankers and industrialists and their publications and politicians.

The trouble with buying a new overcoat during the January sales is that it immediately brings out the fact that you need a new hat and a new pair of shoes.

If you want to make a forecast for the year 1931 that will come true, just predict that the gasoline tax will be raised a cent or more a gallon.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

Many cities are now helping the unemployment situation by making worth while improvements in their parks, town forests and other recreation centers.

When Congress is given the right to determine the subordinates in the executive branches of our government, it will then be high time for all good citizens to urge another Mussolini to take control of our national affairs.

James Hamilton Lewis, senator-elect from Illinos, was the man picked out by President Wilson eleven years ago to lead the fight in the Senate to put the United States in the League of Nations. The Senator now thinks that world conditions have changed materially in the last ten years, and in a recent address before the University of Arizona he renounced the League of Nations and characterized the World Court as useless. He said further that our foreign troubles have been caused by the money loaned to European nations.

Most of the bills being proposed for the equalization of state and county taxes are just new schemes to get additional money for the public officials to blow in.

The United States expended last year on public schools two billion dollars. Twenty-five million pupils received instruction from eight hundred and fifty thousand teachers. All of which might suggest that America has a future.

THE CINDER PILE

(By The Sweeper)

Well folks, the ole Cinder Pile is beginning to take on considerable proportions over in the corner, and after ardously sweeping around among the cinders for a week, we have several things on our mind to talk to you about this week, if our space holds out.

To begin with, we would like to call our readers' attention to the fact that Governor Miller has already begun to make himself felt in the circle of "fat" job-holders, who have been bleeding the State treasury for the past several years. His Hon., Mr. Miller seems to be doing a pretty good job of cleaning house down at Montgomery. May he not weaken before he has made a good job of what he has started.

Looks like the short session of the State Legislature may accomplish something yet. However, that august body of lawmakers seems to be putting in more time getting things all set for the long pow-wow in July, than to the business of settling some of the important matters now. There is considerable legislation that should be put through at once.

While we are talking about legislation, we would like to call the attention of the Gentleman from Chilton to some local legislation that we would like to see passed at this time. We refer to a bill to provide for the election of the County Superintendent of Education by popular vote. We are at present selecting the members of the Board of Education in this manner and it seems to us that the people of the county are just as competent to select that man to be their Superintendent of Education as they are the members of the Board.

Looks like Mr. Heflin is going to do something up in Washington if it is nothing but talk himself to death. He seems to have died a political death here in Alabama last fall, and now he is either going to talk himself to death, or the rest of the senators, one.

A long report from Washington a few days ago said that he had informed the senate that if they, (his opponents) tried to block the Nye investigation of the Alabama election that he would talk all day or a week. Another one of the senators arose and told him that he had nothing special to do but listen, and would like to see a special session forced by just such tactics as Mr. Heflin was playing, holding up an important legislation with his long-winded harrangues relative to his defeat last fall.

Wonder why "Cotton Tom" can't realize he was defeated and that there can be nothing done about the matter at present, and shut up. And not only should Senator Heflin shut up, but there are several others posing as statesmen and representatives of the common people in the United States senate who should shut up. There is entirely too much pussy-footing and spleen-venting going on when these august gentlemen should be bending their efforts to the passage of some relief measures before Congress looking to bettering the economic situation in these United States.

It is our humble opinion that there are mighty few real statesmen left in the country these days. And most certainly if there are many left, they do not succeed in securing a seat in the law making bodies of our country. About three-fourths of the time of these gentlemen while in Washington is devoted to some sort of prejudicial harrangue or to the drafting of some fool law or other that will best suit in the large corporations.

And when they have gotten all the personal prejudicies and personal interests looked after, if they have any time left, they usually tamper with the tariff a little, and invariably succeeding in making a little bigger mess of something that is already in a very bad shape. We wonder just what will be done with the tariff this session for the worse?

The Sweeper wishes to congratulate our friend, Hon. Charles B. Kennamer on his appointment to the Federal Judgeship of the Middle District of Alabama. And while we are proud to see such a staunch and stalwart republican as Mr. Kennamer elevated to this high bench, we at the same time feel that we could have rejoiced more wholesomely in our praises of the Senate and the powers that be, would have been just a little louder, if the appointee could have been our own Chilton Countian, Hon. Grady Reynolds.

And now since Kennamer's appointment will create a vacancy in the office of the District Attorney for the Northern District, we would like to see Hon. J. Osmond Middleton given this post. Mr. Middleton has for some time been serving as assistant under Mr. Kennamer.

We don't know if Mr. Gillespie has taken our hint of last week or not. We have not been able to learn just how much of the forbidden "joy juice" he has been finding, but we are reliably informed that he has been looking into the liquor business quite a little since he has taken over the office of Sheriff.

If Mr. Gillespie and his able assistants keep up the gait they have set, it won't be long till it will be hard to find any "sweet spirits of cats a-fighting."

Our new Commissioners are now in office and will get into their real working harness the second Monday in this month. Lets hope that they get busy and do some things the retiring commissioners either did not have time to do or just did not feel the need of. We have placed a couple of mighty good men into these seats and they should prove their trust by a careful and judicious administration.

Leaving these thoughts with you to think and ponder, we will get to sweepin'. Be around to see you folks again next week. Be careful of the dust!—The Sweeper.

A FRIEND IN DETROIT

Ediotor Union-Banner:

Enclosed find a dollar with which you may extend my subscription. I want to say hello to everybody in Chilton County. Times are a little tough here, but Ijust can't get along without the dear old Banner. It is like a letter from home every week.—Sam Johnson, 1603 Hubbard, Detroit, Michigan.

A PERTINENT QUESTION

In a recent speech before the University Club, Boston, Mass., Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, stated: "You can talk about the legal effect of our adherence to the World Court. But what is going to happen if the League of Nations asks an advisory opinion affecting the welfare of the United States from a body of which we are a member and we do decide to get out? It would result in an uproar. It would fling the U. S. Senate into an interminable discussion, it would arouse racial and nationalistic dissensions. We would be caught in a nice trap, and that is all there is to it, a trap."

JUST PLAYING POLITICS

Democrats in the Senate are repeating their follies of 1924, when they dissipated any chance their party may have had of success in the national election by acting as a tail to the insurgent dog, and wagged into existence the LaFollette third party movement which split the opposition to the administration and brought about a sweeping Republican victory.

Just at present the coalition is engaged in an attempt to manufacture political medicine for the campaign of 1932. Little attention is given to business before the Senate. An entire week was expended in clamor leading to a vote requesting the President to return to the Senate nominations of members of the Federal Power Board whose appointments had already been confirmed. President Hoover was applauded by the country for denouncing this action as an attempted usurpation of the executive power. The Senate majority was attempting by this action to take control of minor appointments through the threat of recalling confirmations of any official who may displease the Senate opposition in the selection of subordinates.

It is clear that what the coalition has in mind its forcing an extra session of Congress by filibustering against the passage of the government supply bills. By refusing to the government the money necessary to maintain the government during the next fiscal year, the Senate coalition can compel the President to call the Congress into extra session between now and July 1st. Few people believe that the continuance of the purely political uproar on Capitol Hill throughout the summer will be beneficial; most people believe that utilization of an extra session to begin the campaign of 1932 will be an obstacle to the return of prosperity. Since the resumption of normal business would doubtless handicap the opposition to the administration and party in power in the next campaign, the realization of the necessity of keeping business disturbed figure in the detrmination of the coalition to force an extra session of Congress.

What the coalition apparently fails to realize is that the people are more anxious for the ending of depression and unemployment than the furtherance of the ambitions of politicians. They have grown weary of the clamor of political grand-standers and sensationalists, and a reaction is setting in.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Isn't is awful that we can't possibly be satisfied with the weather, For two weeks now the days have been perfectly lovely. But such weather at this time of the year is positively dangerous. If strawberries get into bloom, which they will surely do in this kind of weather, they will be killed a few weeks later, when the late cold days of spring arrive.

My observations of late lead me to believe that people of this section are very much interested in planting gardens. There have been many thousands of plants of one kind and another sold in Clanton since Christmas. The seed stores are putting out great quantities of garden seeds. Grow a garden in spite of everything is a good plan. Then grow other things to eat, things that will last through the summer, and carry over to next fall and winter.

It is a frightful situation to think about a man working hard all the summer on a farm in this county, and coming to the next fall and winter without anything in store for his family to eat. Only a few bales of sorry good for nothing cotton, which will not pay the rent; then if there happens by accident to be a few bushels of corn and potatoes, that has to go to help piece out the cotton deficiency. Such a program is a case of the cart before the horse, but it happens that way in lots of cases.

Earle Thomas, Mr. Stapp, and Mr. Montgomery, I understand, are planning to get a number of boys in Chilton County to take a sow and a litter of pigs, and raise some hogs to be sold at some suitable time this winter. It appears that such a program would be profitable. Hogs are a scarce article in this country. They are entirely too scarce. I have heard of some farmers who did not even have a hog to kill for meat this winter; I mean farmers who own their own farms and appear to be doing fairly well.

My opinion is that no farmer can call himself doing well if he does not fatten a few hogs to make his own meat, even if he does own his own farm. There is something wrong somewhere with such a farmer.

I heard last week that a man from Maplesville came to the courthouse trying to swap his Ku Klux card for a pair of plow lines.

If the sentiment of the country is summed up in editorial opinion following the dispatch of this Presidential note to the Senate, it must be conceded that the country decidedly approved the action of Mr. Hoover. Newspaper comment, regardless of political considerations, generally took the stand that the President had given the Senate some excellent advice in regard to the encroaching of senatorial authority on executive authority. It is to be remembered also that Mr. Hoover is not the first President to call the Senate's attention to this unfortunate habit. Similar advice was given in no uncertain tones by two former Presidents, both of whom happened to be Democrats and whose memory is held in high esteem by Americans everywhere—Andrew Jackson and Grover Cleveland.

MORAL ECHOES

By D. W. Haskew

I have seen two lazy men in my life. One of them would sit in a rocking shair with his hands on his lap. When a house fly decided to tickle his nose, he would curl up his lips and blow at the fly, but he was too lazy to use his hands to knock the fly away. All the day long he would sit in that position and blow flies. The other fellow had his wife to feed him okra because he did not have to exert himself in swallowing it. We hear many voices being lifted in a cry of "Hard times." From the way things look now, that voice is going to be louder than ever. The steam that creates the noise—"Hard Times," comes out of the lazy man's boiler. Laziness will bring starvation. If a family is too laxy to make a garden, they have no right to expect sympathy when they are hungry.

The other day a big steel train passed through Clanton. The ground quivered under its tread, and its whistle rent the air. It seemed to have no use for Clanton, other than to tell it to get out of the way, and give it room to pass thrugh. It paid us no more mind than it would have given to a gopher hole by the roadside. Well, I have had folks to treat me that way, these big fellows who think they own the world. They think that the earth trembles beneath their tread; they blow their whistles and tell the rest of us to get off into the ditch. I have done that very thing to save my life, and so have you, but that did not keep us from wondering why fools were allowed on the highway of life.

One day I stood on the outside of the back yard gate and watched eight pigs as they pushed themselves against their lunch stand. It was a busy time for each pig, and each pig was busy. All at once two of the pigs that were standing side by side, let go the lunch stand and started to fighting. A little boy standing near me asked, "What do you suppose they are fighting about?" I told him that I was not sure but I rather thought that it was because one of them called the other a pig. Lots of two-legged "Pigs" are seen to leave the real task where life is sustained and go to fighting each other. I do not know why we should get into a fight when there is a lunch counter for each of us.

A farmer sent his hired man out to the lot to milk his cow. The man delayed to return with the milk and the man of the house went out to investigate. He found the fellow sitting in a chair that he found in the barn, and was calling to the cow, coaxing her in sweet words to back up to him so that he could milk. The cow refused to back up and so there he sat, hoping that she would finally decide to bring the milk pouch to him. That is like a lot of folks in this day of easy chair, and they are calling for the old cow depression. They have seated themselves in an to back up and let them milk their pail full. This is a time when we had better throw the chair to one side and follow the source of supply with dilligence. The world is not going to "back up to you" and let you milk a full bucket as you sit in an easy rocker.

On the road to Thorsby I saw a man in front of his country home grading the yard, planting shrubbery and flowers. He was showing the pride in his home by his works. What are you going to do with your home this spring? The time has come for us to plant flowers. Why not make Clanton a flower garden? Let's show our interest in our homes by our work. It takes time and perspiration to have flowers, but they are worth it. There are three classes of persons who do not have flowers—those who are too sickly to fool with them, those who are too busy doing things that have less beauty in them than flwers, and those who are too lazy. I have seen many a house where people lived with not a flower and not a shrub on the place and that house seemed to be saying, "No one cares for me."

GOOD WILL A COMMUNITY ASSET

By D. W. Haskew

Friends of the Kiwanis Club, I am happy to be with you about this festal board today. I am glad of the opoprtunity to bring to you the message of this hour. We are thinking today about the question of good will as a community asset, and I assure you that it is a question of vital importance to each of us and to all of us.

The most of you are fathers, and you know what it means, and you know how you feel, when your child comes home with a hundred per cent report from his teacher in school. That report makes you swell with pride, and whether you say so or not, your judgment is that you have a very fine boy in your home. The thought that I want to get home to you at this time, is that we should have a city located on the Montgomery-Birmingham highway, that is one hundred per cent in her records as a community of civic pride. In order to do that we must be one hundred per cent in our good will for Clanton.

It is needless for me to ask you, "Do you really love Clanton?" That is evident among this bunch of men, but I may ask, "Are you a bundle of walking and talking propaganda for your home town?" I know a lot of men who have just as good wife as any man need to want, but you would never think so if you were to listen to what he says, and watch the way he acts. You have a good town here in your midst. It is the capital of Chilton County, and it may be that we have dropped down to that low level of accepting it, just like we accept our wives. "It is hard to get along with them and hard to get along without them, and so we fume and fuss our lives away." It is difficult for the outside world to determine whether we love or hate our home town.

It is a fact that we make the citizenship of Clanton, and to us the citizenship of this community will be just what we think them to be. A wise old farmer was one day digging post-holes by the side of a highway. Along came a man who had all of his goods on his truck. He stopped to chat with the farmer, and to ask him what kind of people lived over in the next community. The farmer asked him, "What kind of people lived where you come from?" "Why those people where I came from were terrors," said the man, "And that is why I am moving." "Well," replied the farmer, "You will find them same kind of folks where you are going." The mover traveled on with fear and apprehension. Late that afternoon another truck came along loaded with household goods. It stopped to have a friendly chat with the man. The man on the truck had his family with him, and he let it be known that he was moving into the community just over the way, and said he to the farmer, "What kind of people live over there." Again the farmer asked him what kind of people lived in the community out of which he had just moved. "Just the finest folks in the world," said the man, "and it broke our hearts to leave them." "Well," said the old Philosopher, "You will find them same kind of folks wha' you am going." In other words you will determine what Clanton is to you. If you look at Clanton through a yellow glass, the whole city will look yellow. If you look at it through a green glass, the city looks green to you. That is just the reason why so many of us are constantly lamenting the times and the citizenship with whom we have to live. Get a clear glass and look through it, and you will see the sunshine and hope will come down upon you like the falling of the dew.

This is a day when political lines are drawn and we pride ourselves that we belong to the Republican party, or the Democratic party. It is all right for you to be a Democrat, or a Republican if you so desire, but I would like to organize a new party in these days of gloom. I would not make it a "Duke's Mixture," as the most of our parties are today, but I would make it clear and full of sunshine. I would name my new party "The Radiance Party." I would call a meeting of all those who believed in my party, and together we would lay down the planks of our platform. The first plank that we would nail down good and hard would be the plank of working and not weeping. We would put every man in our party to doing something. He would not be allowed to stand on the street corners weeping for a job while the soil was calling for some one to come and make it a well of production.

The second plank that we would nail down would be that of boosting and not knocking. Do not understand me to say that I approve of some of this wild, reckless boosting that we hear before Rotarians, Kiwanis, and other clubs. But I do approve of a hard set boosting that keeps hope and courage alive. There would be no place for knockers in my new party.

The third plank would be that of cheerfulness and not grouchiness. A grouchy man can be a Republican and he can be a Democrat; but he can not belong to the Radiance party. One of the serious troubles of today is that we are going about as though we had a grouch with the government, the weather and the Lord. The soil has not gone out of business, the weather man is not on a strike, and God is not dead; and why should we go moaning about the streets?

My fourth plank in my Radiance party would be courtesy and not abruptness. These Democrats and Republicans have about forgotten the fundamentals of courtesy. They are abrupt in their speech, mannerism and ways. The members of my new party would be required to speak in courteous language, act in a courteous way and deal with his fellowman in a courteous spirit. We would live together in courtesy and kindness.

A fifth plank in my party platform would be patience and not complaining. The members of these old line parties are acting today just like they have never known of such times as we are now having. Business ran down in 1914 and in 1921 just like it is now. It is coming back just like it did then. We need a new party of patience so that we will not go wild with complaining. I visited a sick patient not long since and he filled the room with his groans. I asked the family if he were in agony. They said not that they could detect. They told me that he had formed the habit of grunting whether he had pain or not. I sometimes think that we are about like that patient. We have formed the habit of grunting, whether we suffer or not. The Radiance party members should be patient.

The last plank that I would nail down in my Radiance party would be that of economy and not wastefulness. I would drive this plank down with twenty-penny nails, and then I would clamp it with iron. It does not matter which party held the governmental reins, the most evident thing in practice was that of wastefulness. We have wasted enough in the last ten years to tide over any kind of depression times. While the dollars were rolling toward us, we caught them and rolled them away, and now we are crying our sad bosoms empty because we have no more dollars to roll. You note that I have made work to be the beginning plank and economy the closing plank of my new platform, and that is not a mere happen so. They are where they belong. The Radiance party is founded upon work and economy, and it thrives upon boosting, cheerfulness, courtesy and patience. I would take this new party with its platform, and I would stand it in the streets of Clanton, and I would face it to the future and not to the past.

I know no place where conditions are more favorable for the growing of this Radiance party than right here in Clanton. We are in the center of the State. We are near the half-way line between Montgomery and Birmingham. We have a county filled with country white people, the very bone and blood of American life. We have a farming section that can not be surpassed anywhere in the state. We are the heart of the Alabama Power Company. We are out of debt as a county. We have a link-up of the best school system to be found anywhere. We have fine churches in Clanton and nice country churches on every hill top in the county. It looks to me that this new Radiance party would grow in this favorable soil.

If this Radiance party has your good will, may I ask that you show it. Show it by taking off that slouchy garment that is to be seen thrown around our city in some places. When Nehemiah traveled around Jerusalem he discovered that there was much rubbish scattered in every section of the city. They secured wagons and carted this rubbish off to the dumping grounds. You Kiwanians look around Clanton and see if you can not find much rubbish. When there are unkept lots, rubbish piled here and there, the city looks just like a woman with a beautiful face and yet with a slouchy dress. The first thing that I saw on entering Clanton was that unsightly swamp that you find almost within a stone's throw of your business section. Mud, slush, and weeds. If you have a good will for your own community, you will do your best as an individual and as a club to remove the slouchy garment that is to be seen resting on the body of our beautiful little city.

If you will join our new Radiance party, we are asking that you show it, not only by removing the slouchy garment, but clothing your city with a bright garment of care, pride and prosperity. The premises about our homes need more care. Our buildings need painting. There should be a wholesale planting of flowers. The man's heart that is right toward his own town, will clothe his home and premises with a new garment that shines.

In the third place you should show your willingness to join this new party by entering into the progressive movements of your city and county with a heart that is all aglow with interest and enthusiasm. It is easy to be a well wisher for progress, but it is hard to lead in the ranks of progress.

I close with this statement: The good will of the citizenship of a community means as much to the well being of that community as the blood means to the body of an individual. If the blood that goes flowing through your veins is an asset to your life, then your good will for your city is an asset to the place where you live. I thank you.

Painful Condition

"When I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time.

"After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

Conveyors Carry Ford Car Parts

Trains unload in the plant. Bodies starting through the shop.

Conveyors carry wheels with mounted tires over a line on which cars pass to completion.

The highly important part played by conveyor systems in all Ford Motor Company manufacturing and assembly plants is graphically shown in the above three pictures taken in the recently opened Edgewater, N. J., plant. One of the pictures shows how parts may be unloaded from freight cars within the plant only a few feet from the various assembly lines. Another picture shows automobile bodies starting their trip on a conveyor while the third view is of the conveyor system used to bring wheels to the chasses which are also moving on a conveyor. As indicated in the picture, a constant flow of wheels on which the tires have already been mounted moves around and over the chassis assembly line.. As a chassis enters the section, workers, in groups of four, each take a wheel from the hooks and fasten it to the chassis.

VOLUME XXXVIII.—TEN PAGES CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1931 NUMBER 42

20 BOYS ASKED TO RAISE PIGS

Cooperative Hog Sale Planned When Pigs Are Six Months Old

Mr. Earle Thomas, vocational teacher at Isabella, and chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, was instrumental in getting the Kiwanis Club to sponsor what seems to be a splendid project for the boys this year. C. E. Stapp and S. J. Ezell are on the Agricultural Committee with Mr. Thomas, and all of them are pushing the program heartily.

The plan is as follows: To get at least 20 boys who are interested in pigs to take a litter farrowed early in the spring, say March or April, and care for them properly until this fall when most of the pigs will be about six months old. All of the pigs will be finished out about the same and on a set date all the boys will be asked to bring their hogs to Clanton where buyers from the packing houses will bid for the lot.

It is preferred that the boys take a good sow so they can get the experience of proper handling the sow and pigs from before farrowing time until they are ready for market. This will encourage the boys to take care of the sow and litter at farrowing time so as to have as large litter as possible to enter the contest with.

The boy who has the heaviest and best finished out litter on the date of sale, age taken into consideration, will be awarded a nice prize.

County agent Stapp states that the outlook for hogs is pretty good, and he is anxious to see this project go ever in a big way. He is now ready to enroll boys who want to enter the contest.

ANDERSON BAKER DIED LAST SATURDAY

Anderson Baker, age 61 years, died last Saturday Night at his home in Macedonia comunnity, near Lay Dam. His death was caused from cancer, with which he was a sufferer for only a few weeks.

He is survived by his wife, Georgia A. Baker; three sons, Cleve Steve and Pete Baker; three daughters, Nettie Catherine, and Elizabeth Baker.

Burial was at Macedonia cemetery Sunday, in charge of Mell Martin. The funeral was conducted by Rev. A. L. Foshee and Rev. G. G. Williams.

Mr. Baker was a highly respected citizen of his community. He was born and reared within a mile of the place where he died. His entire life was spent in that community. When he was about 28 years old, he answered the call of the ministry, in which capacity he was actively engaged until the year 1918, when he was forced to retire on account of the impairment of his sight. He was a Baptist. His life was sincerely devoted to the cause of Christianity. Among his neighbors he was loved, honored, and respected for the stand which he took on the side of right living and clean morals.

He was one of the pioneer families of Chilton County. His father, Anderson Baker, Sr., and his mother, Catherine (Weldon) Baker were prominent in the early days of this county.

The burial and funeral of Mr. Baker Sunday was carried out in the manner which was his request before he died. He sleeps peacefully now in the little cemetery near the home, where he lived and died. A vast throng of friends and neighbors and loved ones were present Sunday when his body was laid to rest.

FINE SINGING HELD AT WALNUT CREEK SUNDAY

Somebody said to me Monday: "There surely wasn't much singing at Walnut Sunday afternoon, as I think I saw everybody going up the highway toward Jemison." But that somebody was sadly mistaken. We are sure that there were lots of folks going up the highway all right, but all the singers were not going up there. One of the best singings the Central Society has had this season was at Walnut Creek last Sunday afternoon. It was late about starting, but when it did start it started good and got better until the close.

Prof. W. M. Devaughn presided. Only one member of the committee being present, the chairman called out the directors. Somehow, everybody was just in a notion to sing, and nearly everyone in the class did their best for every director. One special number was arranged by Prof. Devaughn, which the audience seemed to appreciate very much.

The society meets next Sunday afternoon at Refuge. Everybody try and attend next Sunday afternoon. The society needs your presence and help, and you will find a welcome.

MRS. FLORENCE HUETT BURIED AT SHILOH CEMETERY FEB. 10

Mrs. Florence Huett, widow of the late James Alfred Huett, of Enterprise community, was buried at Shiloh cemetery Tuesday at noon. Mrs. Huett died Monday, February 9th, about noon, at her home.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. D. Hughes of Coopers, who was for several years an acquaintance and esteemed friend of both Mrs. Huett and her late husband. A big number of sorrowing relatives and friends were present to pay their last respects to the earthly remains of this good Christian soul. She is survived by two sons and two daughters, all of whom are married.

POULTRY CAR DATES

With the price of egs so low and with the indications that eggs as well as chickens will still go lower, another poultry car has been scheduled as follows:

Verbena, Wednesday, February 18 from 2 till 5 p.m.

Clanton, Thursday, February 19—All day.

Jemison, Friday, February 20, until noon.

This is likely to be the last car for some time as prices are expected to go lower.

Teh following prices will be paid at the car:

Colored hens, 15 cents; Leghorn hens, 12 cents; Roosters, 8 cents; Stags, 12 cents; Friers, (1and one-half to 2 and one-half pounds) 22 cents; Turkeys, 20 cents; Geese 8 cents.

Cull your flock close, because at the present price of eggs, only your best hens lay enough to pay for their keeping. Your good hens will still make you a little money.

FIDDLERS CONVENTION

There will be a fddlers convention at Enterprise School house, next Friday night, February 20th, beginning at 7:30. All fiddlers are invited to come and take part in the contest. Banded Duck Came From Abbeville, La.

Report Received On Bird Killed At Mims Lake On January 27

The Union-Banner is in receipt of the following letter from the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey, Washington, D. C., relative to the banded duck which was killed at Mims Lake on January 27:

"The bird carrying band No. A689,419 was a male ring-neck banded at Abbeville, La., by R. D. Gordon, January, 1931.

"By means of these numbered metal bands important investigations relative to the migrations and other facts in the life histories of North American birds are being advanced. The bands are attached to the birds by volunteer cooperators, both in the United States and Canada who serve without pay. Success in the bird-banding work is therefore dependent upon the reports of persons in both countries on such banded birds as come to their attention.

"Migratory waterfowl have been banded in large numbers at more than 50 stations scattered over the continent and have been recovered as far south as Central America and the Island of Trinidad. Small song birds have been banded in still greater numbers, and many interesting facts concerning their movements are being discovered. The Biological Survey, accordingly, desires to have a report on every banded bird that may be recovered, and it is hoped that you will continue to help in this work by reporting any bands that come to your attention, giving the number (with series designation, if any, as A, B., etc.), date of recovery, and the locality."

Government Loans For Drouth Sufferers in Chilton County

County Agent, C. E. Stapp, Is Receiving Applications Now From Farmers Who Are Eligible for Relief

County agent Stapp, Mr. W. L. Popwell, Mr. J. C. Page, and Miss Zora Guv attended the drouth meeting in Montgomery Sunday.

A representative of the Federal government addressed the meeting and explained who was eligible for the Government loans.

Only farmers in the drouth stricken area will even be considered. The act of Congress pertaining to loans in the drouth stricken area states plainly that only farmers whose crops were materially decreased by drouth last year will be considered. It further states that only such farmers who cannot get help anywhere else, (as from banks, supply merchants etc.) will be eligible.

Mr. Stapp is holding meetings this week as follows:

Verbena High School, Tuesday night, February 10th, at 7 p.m.

Enterprise School, Wednesday night, February 11th, at 7 p.m.

New Cedron school Thursday night February 13th, at 7 p.m.

He is asking only farmers in the drouth stricken area of this county who cannot get help from other sources attend one of the meetings. It is understood that the specified drouth area in this county includes only beats 5, 6, 10, and 15.

Farmers who live in the south end of the county and were damaged by the drouth and who do not get to attend one of the above scheduled meetings are asked to call at Mr. Stapp's office Friday, February 13th.

Mr. Stapp is anxious to find out this week who may be eligible for government loans.

This is going to be a difficult task and Mr. Stapp asks that only farmers in the drouth area and who cannot get help anywhere else make application for a loan.

Mr. Stapp states that it will be necessary for him to cancel all engagements for terracing, orchard work, etc., until he has finished with the drouth relief work.

There are many details involved in loanding government money, and Mr. Stapp will have to stay in his office and give practically his full time to these loans for the next two weeks.

A farmer, to receive a drouth loan in 1931:

1. Must have farmed in 1930.

2. Must have suffered severe crop losses due to drouth, storm or hail in 1930.

3. Must be unable to secure finances or supplies from any other source in making a crop in 1931.

Each farmer must swear to the correctness of his statement to the above conditions.

5. Farmers receiving drouth loans must use funds only for the purchase of seeds, feeds, and fertilizers.

6. The committee of Chilton County is composed of Mr. W. L. Popwell, Mr. T. F. Patterson, Mr. J. C. Page and Miss Zora Guy. This committee will receive applications for loans at the Farm Bureau Office in Clanton, beginning Monday morning, February 9th.

7. The county agent will assist farmers making applications. The Chilton County Drouth Loan Committee will forward applications to Farmers Seed Loan Office in Memphis, for final consideration. Where passed upon favorable loans will be made by Memphis office.

8. Applications will be received from landlords and tenants, white and colored.

9. The applicant must agree to use such seed, fertilizer and methods of farming, to plant a home garden and a sufficient acreage of feed crops to supply feed for livestock in accordance with recommendations of the local representative (county agent) of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

10. Farmers receiving these loans must give a short mortgage on his 1931 crop, and this money must be paid back to the United States Treasury from the first sales of 1931 crops with interest at 5 per cent per annum.

METHODISTS WIN TWO GAMES OF BASKETBALL

The basketball team of the Clanton Methodist Church won two games last week, by decidedly impressive score. Thursday night the Mt. Pleasant team was trounced by the score of 16 to 4. Friday night the Thomas team was severely beaten by a score of 45 to 10.

The games were played on the outdoor court of the Clanton Methodist Church, at the back of the Church building. It is stated that a schedule is being inaugurated that will bring two or three games a week to the Methodist Court each week for a while.

Visitors are welcome to the games. The court is outdoors, is well lighted, and a good place to sit and watch the game is provided.

James Arnold is recorded as a basketball wonder. He shot 18 of the points in one quarter of the game against Thomas last Friday night.

JUDGE REYNOLDS TO SPEAK AT TUSKEGEE

Judge L. H. Reynolds will be one of the speakers at a Farmers Rally Day at Tuskegee Saturday, February 14; also at a similar meeting at Notasulga in the afternoon of the same day.

The subject which has been assigned to Judge Reynolds is "What Diversified Farming Has Accomplished for Chilton County." Other speakers on the program will be John H. Drakeford, president of Alabama Bankers Association, and Joseph O. Thompson, field representative of the Federal Fard Board in Alabama.

Cotton acreage control and better farming methods is the main objective of the movement out of which these meetings have come in Macon County. Similar movements have been inaugurated and meetings held in practically every county in Alabama.

Plant More Oats and Follow With Hay Or Lespedeza, Dennis Advises

According to census figures for the year 1929 Chilton County planted 30,000 acres in corn producing only $15.00 worth of corn per acre.

Three thousand acres were planted in oats, producing only $21.00 worth of oats per acre. If this had been reversed and 30,00 acres planted in oats and 3,000 put in corn there would have been an increase of $162,000.00 worth of feed produced in our county and our lands left in much better condition with more hay and less leached and gullied fields.

Good crops of cow peas or soy bean hay may be produced on the oat land after the oats are harvested.

Oat land not needed for hay may be seeded to lespedeza which is a good grazing and soil building crop. For further information consult your county agent.

A pair of plow lines usually costs 25 or 30 cents. The offer of Mr. Rockett is one that will be attractive to all who need a pair of plow lines. But remember that you must fill out this coupon in this advertisement this week, and bring it to his store next Saturday in order to get this special offer.

EARLE FOSHEE HURT

Earle Foshee, age 9 years, son of Rufus L. Foshee, of the Mt. Pleasant community, was brought to the Central Alabama Hospital late Sunday afternoon, suffering from a fractured skull. His injury was supposed to have been the result of being kicked by a mule.

Reports from Mr. Foshee say that Earle went to the barn late Sunday afternoon to gather up eggs. The mules were loose in the lot. Peculiar groans from the boy soon after he had gone to the barn attracted the attention of his father, and when he went to him he was lying in the barnyard in a pool of blood. The only possible theory for his injury is that he was kicked in the head by one of the mules.

The boy was brought to the hospital in Martin's ambulance. Surgical treatment was administered and his condition, though serious, showed immediate signs of improvement. Reports from the hospital Tuesday morning said that he was getting along fine.

THE COUNTY SPELLING BEE

It seems that there is some misunerstanding about the Spelling Bee which is to be held in connection with County Play Day. According to a report from the office of the Superintendent of Education, each school in the county may send one of its best spellers. The school is to select this one best speller from any grade through the ninth grade. Then the two best spellers in the County Spelling Bee will go to Jacksonville to spell in the district Spelling Bee.

A handsome trophy will be awarded to the winner of the Jacksonville Spelling Bee. This trophy will not be awarded to the individual but to the county represented by the winning contestant.

HALL—BEAN MARRIAGE

Mrs. R. H. Bean announces the marriage of her daughter, Pauline Austus, to Elebert Hall, on February 21, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Meade, of Thorsby.

Series Of Lectures Will Be Announced

R. S. Gulledge Plans To Make Speeches All Over County

We understand that plans have been perfected whereby a series of educational lectures will be given in the leading communites of Chilton County by Mr. R. S. Gulledge, of Birmingham. Mr. Gulledge is a native of Chilton County, a son of Gen. J. W. E. Gulledge, and is well known to many of our leading citizens.

His intimate knowledge of the agricultural and educational status of this country, as a result of many years of careful study, will assure his hearers some very helpful information. He is an advocate of organized cooperative effort in all matters pertaining to the advancement of agriculture and education in any community or county.

We hope he will be given a cordial reception by the citizens of our county in the various communities he will visit. He will talk about subjects that are very close to the interests and future welfare of our people.

The Union-Banner is thoroughly interested in the progressive development of Chilton County. We want our people to have the benefit of every good idea and suggestion that is possible for them to have. Mr. Gulledge is very enthusiastic in his analysis of some of our important present-day problems, and we think it will not be amiss for the people of Chilton County to hear him speak.

From time to time we shall give to our readers more and more of the plans, purposes and program of Mr. Gulledge.

IRBY TRAYWICK ADMITS KILLING

Sent Back To Missouri To Answer Charge of Murder

Selma, Ala., Feb. 5.—In an alleged signed confession to Chief of Police Norman Stanfill here today, Irby J. Traywick, young white man of Pletcher, Chilton County, Ala., told how he beat to death with a hammer W. T. Long near Nevada, Mo., over four months ago, left the body in an open field and drove Long's car back to Alabama.

Love for his wife and children was given by Traywick as a motive for the slaying, officers said. He declared that he wanted to come home to see his family, and also wanted "to have some way to take them around," Traywick is quoted as saying.

Continued use of Long's car led to Traywick's arrest near Clanton a week ago. He was placed in the City Jail here and Missouri authorities notified.

At that time, Traywick announced that he would fight extradition and steadfastly maintained his innocence. He was employed by a gas company in Alabama when taken into custody.

With Traywick's purported confession, which he is said to have given voluntarialy to Chief Stanfill before a notary public, a mystery which has baffled authorities for more than four months apparently has been solved.

Chief Stanfill said that he expected Missouri officers within a few days to take Traywick back for trial.

According to Chief Stanfill, Traywick outlined the details of the slaying, which took place at mindight near the Missouri town. After hitting Long in the head with a hammer, Traywick drove into an open field and left the body there, officers said. Traywick is said to have admitted that he took a watch and about $30 from the body of the dead man.

When asked if he and Long had any difficulty, Stanfill said that Traywick told him, "No sir, we had no difficulty, but had a disagreement and I will tell you what it was. He was going to get his girl and take her with us and I told him if he did I would not go because I was a married man. That was what it was about."

Traywick emphatically denied that this had caused him to murder Long, insisting that his love for his wife and children had caused him to do it, the Selma police official said.

Following his confession Traywick is said to have declared that he had not enjoyed a night's sleep since the slaying. He thanked Chief Stanfill for being kind enough to let his family visit him in jail.

A portion of the signed confession, consisting of questions and answers, according to Chief Stanfill, follows:

Q. "Did you kill W. T. Long?"

A. "Yes, sir."

Q. "Now just go on and tell me the circumstances. What did you do and why did you do it?"

A. "It was for the love of my wife and two little children that I did it. It was not for myself or money or anything.

Q. How did you kill him?"

A. I did it with a hammer."

Q. "Where did you get the hammer?"

A. It was in the car."

Q. "How much money did you get off him?"

A. "I don't remember, but it was not but about three ten-dollar bills."

Q. Did you get his watch?"

A. "Yes, sir,"

When the prisoner was asked if there was anything else about the slaying that he wanted to say, Stanfill said that Traywick told him: "That is all I know about it except that I did not commit this murder for money or myself. I did it for the desire to come home to see my wife and children and to have some way to take my dear children around. That is why I killed him and took his car. I just loved my wife and children too much."

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

RIGID CULLING OF COWS IS ESSENTIAL

The effect of the business depression and the drouth tend to obscure the underlying condition of the dairy industry. There is a widespread tendency in the United States to make further increase in the number of milk cows kept on farms. The dairy farmers have been and apparently still are saving more than the customary number of heifer calves and reports from stock yards would seem to indicate that the number of aged cows being disposed of is still somewhat below normal. As long as this tendency continues, together with lower prices for imported farm commodities such as cotton and wheat the long time outlook of dairying points to lower levels than have characterized the industry during the past ten years.

In view of the above and other facts about dairying the following recommendations are made for Alabama farmers and dairymen:

1. The outlook for dairying in Alabama is for temporarily reduced returns due to poor pastures and the unusually small production of hay and grain and the reduced purchasing ability of local consumers.

2. Vigorous culling of low producing cows must be practiced if dairying is to be profitable. A goal of 300 pounds of butterfat per cow must be set in all counties where as we now have an average production of 109 pounds of butterfat.

3. Production-bred bulls are now available at prices farmers are willing to pay. This phase of dairy work must be emphasized.

4. The place for dairying in Alabama seems best as a supplement to rather a substitute for the main money crops. On this basis we can continue our 5 cow program, depending on it to furnish a cash income at regular intervals which make it possible to finance the production, and, when desirable, the holding of crops.

The export demand for American apples is greater this season than last. The latest official report of the season gave 1,981,000 barrels, compared with 1,940,000 barrels up to the same date in 1929. At the same time the export demand for boxed apples was 4,985,000 boxes, compared with 2,710,000 boxes reported at the same date last year.

DEPARTMENT WANTS FARMERS PROTECTED

Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture and industries, has asked for amendment to the truck and bus bills in the legislature of Alabama so the bills will not interfere with farmers hauling their own farm produce. He has been assured by many of the senators and representatives that such amendments will be made.

One paragraph in house bill number 54 reads:

"For each motor vehicle transporting property with a carrying capacity of three tons or less, one per cent for each mile; for each motor vehicle with a carrying capacity of more than three tons, but not more than five tons, three cents each mile, and for each motor vehicle with a carrying capacity of more than five tons, but within legal maximum, five cents per mile."

As first written the bill provided that these rates be applied for transporting "passengers and property on the highways of this state by motor vehicles for hire or compensation, or in furtherance of any private commercial enterprise." Mr. Storrs said the clause "in furtherance of any private commercial enterprise" would affect farmers and truck growers. "For this reason I urge an amendment exempting farmers and truck growers in the transportation of their own produce," he said.

ALABAMA IS A THREE BILLION DOLLAR STATE

Alabama is a three billion dollar state producing about $560,000,000 worth of new wealth each year, says the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries.

The Bureau of Census estimated value of all tangible property at $2,-015,430,000 in 1912 and $3,022,043,-000 in 1922. "Since 1922 the declining price level has tended to decrease this amount, but the accumulation of new property has probably more than off-set that tendency," the agriculture department said.

The actual production of wealth in Alabama is confirmed to agriculture, mining and manufacturing. In 1927, the latest figures available, the production of wealth in agriculture was $252,000,000; in mining, $79,-000,000 and in manufacturing $233,-000,000, making a total that year of $564,000,000 fo new wealth added to the state.

BETTER STAPLE COTTON FOR ALABAMA IS URGED

Better staple cotton for Alabama in order that the State will not suffer a severe penalty because of short staple and poor quality is one accomplishment which Alabama farmers, bankers, merchants, county agents and other agricultural leaders are determined to make a start in solving during 1931.

F. W. Gist, statistician of the Department of Agriculture, has joined the ranks in urging to grow better staple cotton. "Since the cotton growers squarely face both foreign competition in shorter staples and a falling demand for a large per cent of his products it is very important that he find some remedy for the severe penalties which the state has been suffering because of short staple," he said.

"The cotton division of the bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture 44.8 per cent of the cotton grown in Alabama in 1929 was less than 7-8 of an inch in staple; 52.6 per cent was 7-8 to 29-32 of an inch, and only 4 per cent was one inch and over. Only 1.2 per cent was untenderable on account of low grade.

The 1928 crop was better than this, 23 per cent being less 7-8 inch and only 2 per cent was untenderable on account of low grade. In both years, however, Alabama had the highest percentage of short staple of any of the cotton producing states. In 1929 Florida had 37.6 per cent of less than 7-8, while Oklahoma had 28.5, Texas 25.6, and Georgia 21 per cent. The average for the United States was 20.1. In 1928 Tennessee had 21.4 and the average for the United States was 14.3 per cent.

A recent press dispatch from London says that Dr. Weston Hurst of the Lister Institute of Preventive medicine has discovered an innoculation for the prevention of infantile paralysis.

During the year 1930 the Federal government paid to the State $96,-355,890 as its share on completed federal-aid work. This was an increase of approximately $19,700,000 or 25 per cent over 1929.

An Associated press dispatch says that Henry Ford apparently is abandoning his huge rubber farming venture in South America after having investing several millions of dollars in it. Objection of native employees to the application of Ford's methods and practices is named as the main reason for his decision.

OATS FOR FEED ARE ADVISED BY AUBURN

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 9.—Every Alabam farmer who wishes to make a good crop of feed at a low cost and have it ready late in the spring can do so by planting oats immediately. Such is recommended by the county agents and also by the experiment station and the extension service of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn.

Varieties recommended by the experiment station for spring planting are red rustproof, Fulghum, and Burt. Seeds should be planted at the rate of two bushels per acre, J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, said.

They should be fertilized with 100 to 200 pounds per acre of either nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime applied as a top dressing when the oats have started growing and the danger of severe freezing has passed.

Lowery pointed out that Alabama farmers have been producing only 40 per cent of the oats and corn needed in the state, and only about 30 per cent of the hay needed. Consequently there is need for a larger acreage of oats under normal conditions and especially under vceptional conditions such as at present when the feed shortage is greater than usual and the supply of money and credit for buying is very limited. Oats are an excellent feed for poultry and other animals as well as horses and mules.

This recommendation by the county agents, and from Auburn, is made despite the fact that oats planted in the fall on the experiment station at Auburn have yielded twice as much as oats planted in the spring.

MAPLE SPRINGS

Our Sunday school and preaching sunday was fine. Brother Hayes delivered a wonderful sermon, for a young man just beginning. I wish more of our church members would have been there and heard him. We had a good lesson in Sunday school.

Next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days, but on account of a pastor's conference to be held at Clanton, Brother Lockhart will not preach at 11 a.m. Saturday, but will preach at 7:30 Saturday night and Sunday. Let's all come Saturday night and Sunday and see what he has to tell us. Brother Willie Jones may come with him Saturday night and we all know he will tell us something good. Don't forget Sunday school at 10:00 o'clock

Miss Edith Dobbs was the dinner guest of Misses Mary Sue and Emma Dean Smith Sunday.

Mr. J. W. Coggins and family of Mt. Springs visited Rev. A. C. Nelson and family Sunday afternoon.

A large crowd attended church here Sunday and Sunday night, but on account of our pastor's wife being sick he did not come Sunday night; but we had a good Christian Endeavor service.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gray visited theri daughter, Mrs. Lola Nelson, Sunday.

Miss Ida Bell Dobbs visited Mrs. Cornelia Coggins Sunday.

We have a real good Sunday School here every Sunday in the year. Do you boys attend Sunday School? If not bring them next Sunday.

Judge Lewis L. Fawcett, of New York, says "my experience during 23 years on the bench, in which time over 4,000 boys under the age of 21 years were convicted of crime before me; of whom but three were members of Sunday Schools." Sunday Schools and churches cost something in money, effort, energy, but it is worth it all. If all the boys and girls would attend Sunday School and church each Sunday it would not be long till every jail and prison house in the land would be closed.

There are four kinds of churchgoers.

1. Those who attend when they feel like it, but do not often feel like it.

2. Those who attend Easter, Christmas and revivals, but are afraid to get in the habit of going to church.

3. Those who attend when nothing prevents, but are satisfied to fall back on any old excuse for staying away.

4. Those who alow nothing to keep them away from church that woud not keep them away from their work.

Which kind are you? Be a loyal church goer. Come to Sunday School next Sunday.

LAWLEY NEWS

This community sustained a great loss in the sudden death of Mr. Harvey Gentry, Sunday, one week ago. He had for some time been sufferering from heart trouble, but the day before his death, he was seemingly doing fine.

He was 42 years old, born and faithful member of the Rehobeth Baptist church.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Jasper Gentry, whom he had been with since the death of his wife three years ago. He is also survived by two children, Mary Ruth, age nine years, and James, age three years. Two brothers, Mr. Euell Gentry of Montgomery, and Mr. Homer Gentry of Auburn, and three sisters, Mrs. Will Moore of Lawley, Mrs. Edna Kinney of Cullman, and Mrs. Rufus Gentry of Lawley. They all attended the funeral services, which was conducted by Rev. J. W. Dean of Blocton, now pastor of Rehobeth.

We extend to this bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and pray God to assure the anguish of their bereavement.

Mrs. Edna Kinney of Cullman spent last week here with her mother, Mrs. Jasper Gentry. She returned home Friday accompanied by her niece, Mary Ruth Gentry, who will live with her aunt since the death of her father.

Mr. and Mrs. Lum Hicks are moving into the house with Mrs. Jasper Gentry.

We welcome to this community, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe and three children, of Marvel. They have moved to the farm of Mr. Brooks Latham.

The W. M. S. of Rehobeth Baptist Church held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Clyde McGee last Saturday afternoon. The devotional was lead by the President, Mrs. Perry Hicks. After a brief business period an interesting missionary program was renedred, with Mrs. J. S. Dunlap chairman of the program committee in charge The program had been so carefully planned that is was indeed every entertaining and inspiring After the program a social period was enjoyed. Delicious cake was seryed by Mrs. Bettie McGee to 14 members of W. M. S. Three new members were added to the list of twenty. Each member seems so enthusiastic, we feel God is blessing us in our work.

The P.-T. A. here will give a play entitled, "Alabama Coon," next Saturday night at the school auditorium, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. It is a black face comedy and you will not regret having seen this play. The admission will be 15 and 25 cents, which will go to the school fund for improvements, so while you are enjoying this play you are giving to a good cause. We should all think thus: "If all the parents were just like me, what kind of a school would our school be?"

Mr. Harvey Raley, principal of the Lawley school, carried his 8th grade boys to Montgomery last Saturday to look the town over. They reported a wonderful trip, and are so grateful to their teacher for the interest he is showing toward his pupils. Valentine for All the World

We can safely say that this picture has been "heartily" indorsed by the popular screen actress shown herewith.

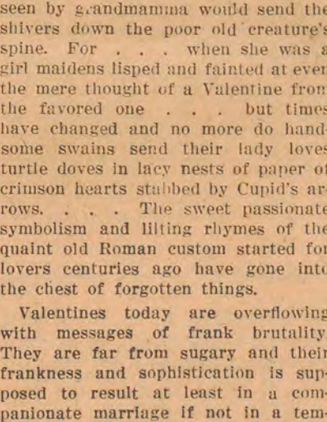
No Change in Heart Appeal of Valentine

In days of old girls got their thrills
From Valentines all fired with frills.
While we go in for simpler stuff,
Tell 'em nothin'; treat 'em rough.
But we are none the less sincere;
Come be my Valentine, ol' dear!

There you have it! The Valentine greeting of 1931 and one which if seen by grandmamma would send the shivers down the poor old creature's spine. For . . . when she was a girl maidens lisped and fainted at even the mere thought of a Valentine from the favored one . . . but times have changed and no more do handsome swains send their lady loves turtle doves in lacy nests of paper of crimson hearts stabbed by Cupid's arrows. . . . The sweet passionate symbolism and lilting rhymes of the quaint old Roman custom started for lovers centuries ago have gone into the chest of forgotten things.

Valentines today are overflowing with messages of frank brutality. They are far from sugary and their frankness and sophistication is supposed to result at least in a companionate marriage if not in a temporary affair. For instance let us compare a rhyme of the Byronic era with one of today. The earlier one went:

If love were what the rose is
And I were like the leaf
Our lives would grow together
In sad or springy weather.



Then this one:

How delicious is the winning
Of a kiss at love's beginning,
When two mutual hearts are sighing
For the knot there's no untying.

For the boy friend who is irked by the high hattishness of his favored one this is a dandy little token of affection a la 1931:

Your conceit and assurance
Hand me quite a laugh,
For your friends say you haven't
The sense of a calf.

Heaven help us. It is an age where there is no romance. Not even in a Valentine. Focus your eyes on this verse, to be sent to a too talkative damsel:

Your chatter is so endless,
So silly at its best,
That I often go to talkies
Just to give myself a rest.

And one for the lady with the mascara and shadowed eyes the crimson mouth and artificially painted cheek:

Don't think you fool me
With your powder and paint,
For I happen to know
That you're no plaster saint.

But, if you prefer the old-fashioned Valentine, the one of sugary verse, or one of the gifts of another day, chocolate creams in scarlet satin heart-shaped boxes, sheafs of roses or clusters of violets or a book of passionate poems, you can do it, but it will not be tres chic, as the French would say. The swank of romance in the Twentieth century will be lacking. Cocktail shakers, cigarette cases and lighters, pocketbook flasks are the tokens of affection and esteem for the girl friend this St. Valentine's day.

And as for old boy Valentine—here is a charming but pathetic bit of gossip we ungarthed about him. St. Valentine was no other than a handsome youth named Valentinus who lived in Rome centuries ago. He belonged to one of the earliest of the Christian families and was terribly ambitious in the church. There was, however, a villainous creature residing in Rome at the time, one named Governor Calpurnius, who was a pagan, and threw Valentinus into prison for his religious undertakings. The inevitable happened. Valentinus fell for the keeper's daughter. All the time he was in prison he amused himself by cutting curious designs out of paper, on some of which he wrote pious exhortations and assurances of love to the lady. The morning of the execution dawned and before Valentinus was dragged to the Flaminian way for the beheading act his parting message on a frilly sheet of fancy paper to his loved one was: "Your Valentine." History tells us there is great reason for supposing that incident to be the origin of the quaint custom of observing St. Valentine's day.

Trend of Times Shown in Valentine's History

There is a fascination in following the history of any utterly useless thing. The valentine, always a caprice, a whim, is tender, ostentatious, low or sentimental, according to the trend of the time. Its history can be briefly put down. The day was once the Roman Lupercalia, the festival at the beginning of spring, when every man had the right to express his affection and every girl as well. Each drew the name of his valentine out of an urn. Here was no diffused sentiment such as pervades the valentines popular in America, which read "To Baby," "To Mother," or "To Grandfather." Some religious houses on the continent encouraged their members to choose saints as valentines and to inscribe verses to them. But in general the church frowned on the festival, for moral reasons.

L. & N. DENIED RIGHT OF TWO CENT RATE

Interstate Commerce Commission Holds Reduction Would Discriminate Against Points

Washington, Feb. 10.—The Louisville and Nashville railroad was refused permission today by the interstate commerce commission to install a two cent a mile passenger rate for day coach riders.

A similar rate went into effect this month throughout a large portion of southwestern and southern territories. The St. Louis-San Francisco system initiated the reduction and the group of carriers operating in competition with it promptly met the reduction insofar as they operate in direct competition with the Frisco lines, but maintained the standard 3.6 cent per mile rate on other portions of their system unaffected by Frisco competition.

The Louisville and Nashville met the commission's opposition today by endeavoring to accomplish a somewhat similar object. That railroad proposed to sell transportation from St. Louis on the north to Birmingham and Pensacola on the south and reverse for two cents per mile.

At the same time the L. and N. schedules provided for maintaining the 3.6 cent rate to and from all intermediate points.

The commission regarded this as involving discrimination against the intermediate points and the business of the intermediate territory, with the result that the Louisville and Nashville schedules were ordered cancelled.

Editorial in Montgomery Advertiser, Jan. 30, 1931

"J. C. Dickerman, engineer-examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, who has been looking into the affairs of the Alabama Power Company, makes a report to the Commission, which has been summarized as follows, according to Russell Kent, The Advertiser's Washington correspondent:

1. The company's steam plants are of high class, strategically located, and protect their immediate areas from serious interruptions of service usually supplied from hydro system.

2. Operations are well organized with efficient staff. Use is made of modern methods for recording and directing operations.

3. Book fixed capital of several of the plants built by the company now show low or moderate unit costs.

4. Average revenues from all sales have ranged between one and 1.21 cents per kilowatt hour sold in the past four years.

5. Rates have been closely supervised by Public Service Commission.

6. Rates set at a moderate initial figure, 5½ cents per kilowatt hour being the top step and falling in domestic schedules to 1½ cents. Power schedules scale down to ½ cent.

7. Ownership of property and direct conduct of operations are limited strictly to Alabama.

8. The company is large and well organized and equipped.

This is doubtless unpleasant information for the people's evangels in journalism and politics in Alabama. But it is not unpleasant to those callous individuals who are merely interested in advancing the industrial welfare of the State, in seeing its key industries conducted along sound and correct lines, and in seeing judicious compliments paid by disinterested non-political critics."

Fort Eustis, Virginia, Jan. 23.—Eugene Foshee, formerly of Jemison, Alabama, and the son of Mr. E. H. Foshee, of that City, is now serving his 11th year in the United States Army and is at the present assigned to the Headquarters Company, of the newly organized Mechanized Force, stationed at Fort Eustice, Virginia. Service with the Mechanized Force promises to be among the most interesting and valuable in the Army for the instruction, education and entertainment of the personnel comprising it, from the viewpoint of the mechanical and tactical work to be done by the force and because of its location in a section of the country, rich in its historical points of interest.

The Mechanized Force is the largest in our country and is a result of the policy of the War Department to keep abreast of the mechanical age in the interest of national defense. The impetus given mechanization in all commercial fields during the last decade is apparent on every hand. The population of the country is being trained in an ever increasing ratio in the use of mechanical apliances of all kinds and with motor vehicles in their daily life and work. The position of the United States as the most highly industrialized nation in the world and the leader among the nations in automotive, mechanical and radio engineering gives us a potential superiority which the War Department has determined to develope.

MRS JOHN ELLISON DIED LAST SUNDAY MORNING

Mrs. John Ellison of Collins Chapel community died about 10:30 last Sunday morning. She had been in ill health for some time, but lately seemed to have regained part of her strength. However, she was subject to weak periods, and the end came as a result of one of these.

Mrs. Ellison was in her 46th year. She was a daughter of Bill and Elizabeth Mims of Macedonia community, who died a few months ago. She is survived by her husband and ten of her thirteen children. The children who are left are Mrs. Paul Mims, Fonza and Lonza Ellison, Mrs. Clarence Burnett, and Mrs. Alfred Gentry; at home there are four boys and one girl—Louise, Marvin, Otis, Bill, and John, Jr. Besides the children there are several brothers and sisters.

Mrs. Ellison was held in high esteem by all who knew her; she was a faithful and devoted wife and mother. The funeral was held at the home Monday morning, with Revs. Davis and Appleton in charge, after which interment was made in the Mullins cemetery, near Jumbo.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Spring Football Training Begins

(By Herman Harris)

Now in a few days, according to Coach Walker's promise to the boys, spring training for football will start off with a bang. More interest is being manifest about spring training than ever before. There is some splendid material to pick from, and many of the boys say they are coming out for practice.

The basketball season is nearing the end. We feel the boys have enjoyed a fairly successful season. The tournament is February 20. It will be held at Tuscaloosa. While in the druid city, Coach Walker and the boys will be guests of the University of Alabama. Other courtesies will be shown the various visiting teams from over the state while in attendance at the tournament. The only expense to the boys will be to Tuscaloosa and back to Clanton. Mr. Walker's influence for clean athletics is reflected in the playing of every member of his team. He plays to win, but never at the sacrifice of the high principles of manhood and good sportsmanship. The school appreciates the services of such a gentleman.

Mr. Haskew Honors School With Another Visit

(By Esther Lee Dennis)

Mr. Haskew made our school another visit last Monday morning at the 10:15 assembly period, and gave the student body a most interesting and inspiring talk. It was about the "Little Things in Life." He showed very plainly how the little things lead to greater things either for good or bad. He explained how the habit of taking another's pencil, tablet, book, or pen, would probably lead one to take things of even greater value belonging to another and in the end develop in one a most serious and deplorable trait. He urged the students to hold consistently to the things that are honest, upright, and good.

Musical Number At Chapel

The student body last Tuesday morning at the assembly period was delightfully entertained by a violin duet played by Miss Annelu Burns, instructor, and Miss Josephine Martin, a member of our faculty. This is the first number from our music department, but the entire school is looking forward to next Tuesday morning when Miss Burns has promised to present the entire music class in an ensemble number. The work of this department is progressing rapidly and the school feels fortunate indeed to be able to secure the services of this splendid musician.

Miss Burns is assisted in the music department by Miss Ruth Barlow, one of her most talented pupils who accompanies her on the trip each Tuesday.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

The girls goals are up and they are playing every day now.

The boys had a nice game over at Thomas Jr. last Friday. The regulars played the first quarter, while the subs completed hte game. The final score was 18 to 7 in favor of Enterprise.

Miss Lee Silas will entertain for the Jr. I class at her home Friday night. Only class members are invited.

Our attendance hasn't looked so good this past week. Let's get together and make next week a perfect one.

Rae Samuels Finds the Theatre Is Coming Back Into Own

Houses for Legitimate Will Again Dot Land, She Declares

New York City.—All this talk about the passing of the American legitimate theatre is bunk, says Rae Samuels who as the "blue streak of vaudeville," has toured every town and hamlet in the U.S.A.

"The public wants good shows just as much as it ever did," she declares. "For a time all our playwrights became scenario writers and now they are doing talkies. What we need now is a new crop of writers and then you just watch the public step up to the box-office.

"In vaudeville, the same situation holds. Good acts always get over. I think that in a few years from now there will be more legitimate theatres than ever and more houses playing vaudeville.

"The theatre is an integral part of our life and the personal touch with the audience can never be supplanted.

"Music, too, needs a lot of coming back. For a while, all of our writers did nothing but theme songs, simply because 'Ramona' made a fortune for its writers. The country wants good novelty tunes and sweet ballads. 'Sweetheart of My Student Days,' comes as near to being what the public demands as anything I've heard. It carries you back to life's happiest days and does it in a deliriously tuneful manner."

Miss Samuels, one of the few stars of the stage who has not succumbed to pictures, is one of America's best loved singers.

PROSPERITY SEEN FOR AGRICULTURE

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 10.—"Prosperity is coming, and it's headed straight for Agriculture!" one of the most famous of American business analyists and prophets was quoted as saying recently.

Leading the race to the horn of plenty will be those farmers holding the key to successful farm management—farm account records, from which they can make a business study of their farm operations which will enable them to steer clear of unprofitable enterprises.

Appreciating the importance of the keeping of farm records in modern farm management and wishing to encourage 4-H Club members to engage in farm record keeping projects, the Parker Pen Company is sponsoring a new national 4-H Club contest it was announced today by the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, Chicago.

Any boy or girl 4-H Club member keeping a farm account record during 1931 is eligible to compete in this contest for two national scholarship awards and 96 state prizes. A complete account of the business of the farm must be kept by each contestant for a period of eight months, beginning March 1 and ending October 31, 1931.

Each boy or girl club member who does the most outstanding work in keeping farm management records in their respective states will be awarded a pen and pencil gift or a desk set. The reserve state winner will receive a fountain pen. The records of the state champions will be judged by a committee of state club leaders who will select two national winners.

The national winner will receive a $400.00 agricultural college scholarship and the reserve national winner will be awarded a $100.00 agricultural college scholarship.

The winners will be announced in December, 1931. The scholarships shall be used within one year of the date of award except where the winner may be a regular attendant at school. Club members desiring more information relative to this contest may secure full details by writing to their state club leader or county extension office.

Bilious, Dizzy, Drowsy Feeling

"WHEN I was a child, if I did not feel well, or if I had a cold, my mother gave me Black-Draught," says Mrs. Orpha Hill, of Wofford, Ky. "When I was married, it became a family medicine in my own home, as it was in my mother's.

"I take it for headache and especially for constipation. When I get bilious, my skin gets yellow and I have a very bad taste in my mouth, and a drowsy feeling all during the day. My eyes burn and I get dizzy, or my head is 'swimming.' When I take Black-Draught, it seems to drive the impurities out of my system and I feel fine. I am seldom without this reliable remedy."

BILLY SUNDAY REVIVAL ENDS ATMONTGOMERY

Evangelist to Speak at Other Alabama and Florida Cities

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 9.—Completing a weeks series of evangelistic services at the City Auditorium Sunday night, Billy Sunday was swinging into southern Alabama and Florida this week, preparing the country for what he said was a needed spiritual awakening. Troy, Hurtsboro and Opelika, Alabama, and Pensacola, West Palm Beach and other Florida cities were to hear him before he opens a revival in Boston next week.

The Rev. Bob Jones, head of the evangelistic college bearing his name annd is sponsoring Mr. Sunday's appearances in Alabama, said prior to Sunday nights services that the week here had not been intended as a soul-winning campaign, but rather was an effort to create the desire for nation-wide revival. He said larger numbers than had been expected had come to the altar to give the evangelist their hands as an indication they wanted to accept Christ although the real purpose of the campaign was to expound the need of a spiritual awakening.

The baseball evangelist had as his subject for the last scermon here the doctrine of atonement, whereby Christ suffered for the sins of the world. He said that is was im possible for man not to believe in the divinity of Christ without committing intellectual suicide.

"I have yet to find the first argument against the doctrine of atonement," he declared. "It is the rule of life for innocent to suffer for the guilty. You see this doctrine of substitution in everyday life, the innocent suffering with and for and more than the guilty. Christ, once waited upon by the angels, was spit upon and stoned to earth. He wrapped himself in our anguish and our guilt; did for us what we could not do for ourselves."

Redemption and salvation, he continued, are two different things, explaining that when Christ died upon the cross he atoned for the sins of the world and redemption was universal, whereas salvation is only for those individuals who accept Christianity.

Answering what he said weres charges that Christianity is a "bloody" religion, he asserted that if "you take the blood out of the Christian religion you would have only a jumble of words. Jesus Christ bought you; you are with-holding from Him what rightfully belongs to Him by virtue of purchase with His own blood. But God does not hate the sinner—he hates sin."

The evangelist concluded by calling for a world revival of the old time religion, declaring that young people are becoming cynical and old before their time because "the world is robbing them of their faith in God."

Mr. Jones in a concluding talk said all expenses of the campaign had been raised, and that Mr. Sunday had been asked to come back to Montgomery, details to be worked out later. He expressed his appreciation for the organization of business men who aided in bringing the evangelist here.

The Democrats now know that if they will nominate Governor Roosevelt in 1932, Senator Norris will carry Nebraska for him just as he did for Al Smith in 1928.

LINCOLN WHEN HE WAS 23

Depicting the Civil war President as a woodsman when he volunteered at Salem, Ill., for the Blackhawk outbreak. At this period he had just been elected captain. The statue, a large bronze, is by Leonard Crunelle, well-known sculptor, and has been done at the expense of the state of Illinois. It stands on the north bank of the Rock river in Dixon, at a spot where it can be visited conveniently by tourists. Crunelle has fashioned an erect, youthful, chin-up Lincoln with a thoughtful but untroubled face.

Pen Picture of Lincoln's Last Hours

An intimate picture of the home life of Abraham Lincoln was presented last year in Hearst's International Combined with Cosmopolitan Magazine in an article entitled "Lincoln's Last Day," by Mrs. Honore Willsie Morrow, which brought to light two hitherto unpublished letters of the great President's widow, Mary Todd Lincoln.

The letters were written to Frank Carpenter, a New York artist who had painted the President's portrait two years before, and a friend of the Lincoln family. They were occasioned by his request for photographs of the entire family as they were in 1861 when the President himself and the son, Willie, were alive, that from these he might build a group for a painting of the family.

The letters are the possessions of Paul Coster, Jr., of New York, who inherited them from his late uncle, Robert Coster. They reveal Mary Todd Lincoln in a light in which she has possibly never before been pictured. They show her, the author says, "Not as a Xantippe, not as a clod, but as a lovable, cultured, suffering human soul."

The author bemoans the fact that such a rich source of facts regarding the martyred Lincoln should have been neglected by biographers and historians of the day.

"Fifty years too late," she writes, "historians are beginning to realize that Lincoln's wife could have given them more than any other human being about his psychology and his history; could have given them precious facts. Nothing I have read has shown me so clearly as these letters what history has lost by their inexcusable neglect.

"For nearly fifty years the name of Mary Lincoln has been shrouded in contumely. She has been written into history as a coarse, ill-educated scold, a curse to her husband and her children—and then, through the discovery of letters such as these she suddenly, after a half century, reveals herself to us."

The letters were written while the widow was still in the throes of the shock attendant to the assassination of her husband. She had, says the author, fled to Chicago and had buried herself in a hotel in Hyde Park with her two sons.

Throughout both letters there is evidence of her grief over the loss of her husband and her son. The memory of the fatal day is indelibly imprinted in her memory.

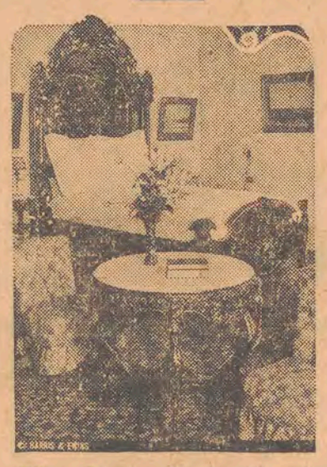
"How I wish," runs the letter, "you could have seen my dear husband the last three weeks of his life. Having a realizing sense that the unnatural conflict was near its close, and being most of the time away from W. (Washington), where he had endured such conflicts of mind within the last four years, feeling so encouraged, he freely gave vent to his cheerfulness.

"Down the Potomac, he was almost boyish in his mirth and reminded me of his original nature, what I had always remembered of him, in our own home—free from care, surrounded by those he loved so well and by whom he was so idolized.

"The Friday, I never saw him so supremely cheerful—his manner was almost playful. At three o'clock in the afternoon he drove out with me in the open carriage. In starting I asked him if anyone should accompany us. He immediately replied, 'No, I prefer to ride by ourselves today.'

"During the ride he was so gay that I said to him, 'Dear husband, you almost startle me by your great cheerfulness.' He replied, 'And well I may feel so, Mary. I consider this day the war has come to a close.' And then added, 'We must both be more cheerful in the future—between the war and the loss of our darling Willie—we have both been very miserable.'

"Every word then uttered is deeply engraven on my poor, broken heart."



In the second epistle, written December 8, 1865, she refers to the late Thanksgiving day as, "the saddest of all my very sad days. . . . Only those who have suffered and lost what made life so well worth living for can fully understand the return of anniversaries."

She again refers to the dead Willie and tells the artists that in the picture of him she has sent for the family group, "justice is not done him—he was a very beautiful boy with a most spiritual expression of face."

Carpenter was running a series in a New York paper, says the author, on his White House experiences, and he had used part of Mrs. Lincoln's letter. She rebuked him with:

"I must say I was greatly surprised to see a simple letter of mine, written when my heart was bursting with its great sorrow, in print. I will forgive you—in the hope it may never occur again."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

LINCOLN'S BED

When Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, visited Washington he was a guest at the White House, and slept in the bed used by Abraham Lincoln when he occupied the executive mansion. The bed, built in Springfield, Ill., especially for President Lincoln, is nine feet long and six feet wide.

Emblem of Democracy

In one of the great squares of London there is a statue of Abraham Lincoln. It may be that in time to come the gaunt figure of this American citizen will stand in every capital of the world as an imperishable emblem of the humanity and democracy that will have become the ideals of all people.

Kruschen Salts—(a perfect combination of the six mineral salts your body should have to function properly) purify your blood of harmful acids, and aid the kidneys and bowels to throw off waste material—the continual formation of which is probably the cause of your fat.

In this modern age of living, it's impossible to get these salts from the fancy foods you eat—but don't worry just as long as you have Kruschen Salts.

Take a half teaspoon every morning before breakfast in a glass of hot water—little by little that ugly fat disappears, you'll feel better than ever before—years younger, more energy. You'll soon possess that enviable beauty, clear skin, sparkling eyes, superb figure which only perfect health can impart.

An 85c bottle (lasts 4 weeks) at Alred Drug Co., or any progressive druggist in America. Money back if Kruschen doesn't convince you that it is the safest, quickest, easiest way to lose fat.

A Hartford woman writes, "I'll tell the world Kruschen Salts is wonderful stuff to reduce." An Ohio woman lost 10 pounds with one bottle.

PUT BROODER STOVE IN FIRST CLASS CONDITION BEFORE BROODING CHICKS

No matter of how good quality the baby chicks are and the care and feed that you give them, they will not grow into profitable birds if the brooder stove should go haywire and the chicks get chilled or overheated.

The brooder stove is one of the most important factors in successful brooding. Even though you may not expect to brood chicks for several weeks, set it up and see that it is in working order. Examine the grates to make sure that they are not burned out and go over the stove pipes to see if they are rusty so that they will not leak while the brooder is full of chicks.

Inasmuch as the efficiency of the brooder stove depends on the thermostat, be sure it is in working order. If there is any doubt as to its condition, you probably would be better off to get a new one.

Three days before you expect to put the chicks in the brooder, start the stove so that you will have time to regulate it. The tempature at the edge of the hover two to three inches from the floor should be about 100 degrees. If upon putting the chicks in the brooder they crowd close to the stove, it is too low; while if they crowd together in one corner, it is usually due to a floor draft: When the temperature is too high, the chicks will be found trying to get away from the stove. Chicks that are comfortable will encircle the brooder stove at night.

Twenty-First Anniversary of Scout Movement Is Being Celebrated Everywhere This Week

Local members of the Boy Scouts in Clanton and Chilton County together with leaders and Scout officials, are this week celebrating the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scout movement.

Throwing his full official sanction and personal endorsement behind the Scout movement, Hon. J. Lee Smith, Mayor of Clanton, has caused to be issued the following proclamation, bringing the Scout anniversary celebration to the attention of the people of Clanton:

PROCLAMATION

Whereas, the week of February 14 celebrates "the coming of the age" birthday of the Boy Scouts of America and the President of the United States has seen fit to set aside and proclaim this week as Anniversary Week that such should be observed throughout the Nation; and

Whereas, the year 1931 marks the twenty-first year of the existence of the Boy Scouts of America and it has been for such time a power in the teaching of boys leading them into the principles of right thinking, clean living, and constructive citizenship; and

Whereas, day by day, month by month, and year by year this great organization has shown itself to be a great force for good and because it is deserving the commendation, interest and active support of our good people; and

Whereas, Clanton and her surrounding communities have enjoyed the benefits and influence of the character development and citizenship training organization,

Therefore, I, J. Lee Smith, mayor of the city of Clanton, do hereby proclaim the week of February 8th through the 14th. Anniversary week in this city and that we do honor the Boy Scouts of America, and I call upon the people to observe with the Scouts and Scouters alike, that they should pledge their active, moral and financial support and continuance of same in the work of this great organization.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal of said city, and caused the same to be attested by the clerk on this 2nd day of February, 1931.

J. LEE SMITH,
As mayor of the city of Clanton.
Attest: C. H. PIPES, Clerk.

DAN SMITH GIVES PROGRAM OF LOCAL SCOUT TROOP

This is a great week for the Boy Scouts and it should be observed with much respect, because it is the twenty-first anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America. Boy Scouts all over America are celebrating it with programs, banquets, hikes etc.

On Febuary 8th, 1909 the Boy Scout movement was starting out and now on the streets of towns and in the country you see a boy dressed in a khaki suit, a boy scout and proud of it.

But I mustn't write any more about that now, I must tell about our own local troop and our celebration. To get everything right, I will begin with the first. Tuesday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock, all the Boy Scouts of this troop, with some exceptions, met in front of the Baptist Church to have our picture made. The reason for taking this picture was to have it put in the Booster Edition of the Chilton County News. The picture was made by Mr. Scott, local photographer. Tuesday night we met at the Church to plan a hike for Wednesday, February 11th. We planned to leave about 3:30 o'clock and go to the camp on the river, and stay till sometime in the night. The other part of our program this week is a basketball game with the Lay Dam Troop. As we go to the camp we will go to the dam and play this game.

Sunday all the scouts will attend the Baptist Church. This will conclude our program for the twenty-first anniversary week.

Troop meeting Friday night, February 13, 6:30.

VALENTINE PARTY AT ISABELLA

Come to the valentine party at Isabella Friday night, February 13, beginning at 7:30. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. There will be a program of songs and contests, and candy will be sold. Come and enjoy it with us. Admission will be 10c.

KEEP SMILING AND BE HAPPY

A sage of the long ago said, "A smile is priceless; a frown is worthless."

That is true today. A smile is likened to sowing good seed on fertile soil, threatened with roaming weeds. A frown is the reverse. If more people would smile, more people would be happier. Frowning over things that happen in every-day life accomplishes nothing. One with a cheerful disposition rarely seeks aid for indigestion and kindred ills. The one who looks on the dark side of life misses much of life's pleasure—and is generally the one who complains over the doctor's bill.

Keep smiling. Keep laughing! Keep your eyes on the sunshine and you will live longer and do much good in the world.—Omaha Health News.

32,500 KILLED IN THE U. S. BY AUTOMOBILES IN 1930

The automobile accident problem is of the first magnitude. There were 32,500 persons killed and more than 960,000 hurt in 1930. In the last 15 years more than 282,000 persons have been killed.

During the eighteen months the United States was in the World War, 50,510 men were killed. During the past eighteen months 50,900 Americans have been killed in automobile accidents.

"I want you to find a government position for my boy."

"Is he intelligent and a hard worker?"

"Naw; if he were I would use him on my farm."

"I see you have a sign in your store, 'We Aim to Please,'" remarked the irritated customer.

"Certainly," replied the proprietor, "that is our motto."

"Well," retorted the I. C., "you ought to take a little time off for arget prastice."

FRANCE AND UNITED STATES HONOR AT PARIS EXPOSITION

France and the United States will join in honoring the memory of the patriots of both countries who helped to win independence for the American Colonies, and especially in paying homage to the memory of George Washington, during the six months of the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition, sponsored by the French Government, which will open near Paris May 1. The American exhibit at the exposition will bring the world-wide celebration of the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington in 1932 to the attention of all natiops.

To emphasize and cement the long-standing friendship of the United States and France, which began during the American Revolution an exact and full-size reproduction of Mount Vernon, home of George Washington, is being constructed on the banks of the River Seine to serve as the administration building for the American exhibit.

C. Bascom Slemp, of Virginia, who is the Commissioner General of the United States to the French Exposition, is also a member of the executive board of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission. He has just returned from Paris and is now busily engaged in arranging to have appropriate furnishings and other material sent fro mthis country to be placed in the duplicate of Mount Vernon on the Seine and to have the overseas possessions of the United States represented by appropriate exhibits at the exposition.

DEAD NEGRO WAS MACARONI WRIGHT

The negro found dead near Coosa River above Mitchell Dam last week was identified as Macaroni Wright, son of Roscoe Wright who lives 3 miles east of Coopers.

Roscoe states that the boy, age 17 years, left home on December 5 to go to Mitchell Dam. When he failed to return home it was thought that he had gone to Florida, as he was known to have been thinking of going to Florida. His father identified him by the clothing he wore.

The body was buried in the negro cemetery at Clanton last Thursday.

THE NAVAL SCUTTLERS ARE GETTING BUSY

It was to be expected that some pacifist organization or other would start a new movement to scuttle the navy immediately upon receiving news of the ratification of the London conference treaty by all the powers concerned. The aggregation which has done so, calls itself the National Council for the Prevention of War. A more accurate appelation would be National Council for the Prevention of the Ending of War.

Next to some movement designed to break down the London pact and bring about a resumption of unrestrained construction of fighting vessels. We can think of nothing more hostile to the maintenance of peace on the high seas than the further ruin of the American navy would be.

Continuance of the fleet of the United States at treaty strength or thereabouts is a sacred obligation to the world. The American navy is a part of the general international police power which has been retained for the purpose of ensuring good order and security on the high seas and in backward parts of the world. If this country should allow its fleet to deteriorate, it would be a shirk, and deservedly would earn contempt and lack of confidence from fellow signatories, and likewise would find itself becoming impotent to keep a check on the vivacities of such bellingerently minded lands as Itally and France.

Because the naval powers have agreed to cut their establishments to a minimum it is especially important that they be kept up to that minimum. The millennium has not yet arrived. The era of universal peace is still far away. The old rule that the country which wishes to command respect for itself and its rights, and keep out of war, must be able to fight, still holds good, imaginings of dreamy theorists to the contrary notwithstanding.—Detroit Free Press.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

The purpose of the United States Senate in attaching Reservation Five to the resolution passed during the Coolidge administration for our adherence to the World Court was that of guaranteeing if possible that the World Court should not pass on any question in which the United States had an interest without the consent of the United States for such action. It was this reservation to which several powers which are members of the court, made objection. Then followed the drawing up of the so-called Root protocol, for the purpose of overcoming foreign objections to Senate Reservation Five.

Those friendly to U. S. membership in the World Court claim that the Root protocol does not change the situation from what it was under Reservation Five and for that reason the World Court resolution with the Root protocol attached ought to be ratified by the Senate. No one, however, has yet been successful in satisfactorily explaining why, if the Root protocol makes no change in the situation so far as the intent of Reservation Five is concerned, many foreign nations objected to Reservation Five but all are willing to accept the Root protocol.

It is all well enough to tell us our interests and our independence of action are as well protected under the Root protocol as under the Senate reservation. But even Mr. Root himself in his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations committee the other day conceded that our safeguards under the World Court as they would now stand are rather vague. It occurs to us that vagueness is a prime objection. The average American will remember that it was vagueness in the American Constitution as to the provision of state rights whcih divided the country for decades and finally brought on the Civil War. Following is a part of the record the Senate Foreign Relations Committee bearing on the subject, as taken from the Washington Herald the morning after the hearing. It speaks for itself, even if it speaks "vaguely" at times:

Senator Borah—"Mr. Root, under reservation five adopted by the Senate, the Court could not render an advisory opinion touching a matter in which the United States had an interest or claimed interest?"

Mr. Root—"Yes."

Senator Borah—"Are there any circumstances under which the Court can now render an advisory opinion in which the United States has an interest or claims an interest, without its consent?"

Mr. Root—"I do not think there is. I do not think there is, but under the effect of the general amendments to the Court statutes"—

Senator Borah—"Under Article 68?"

Mr. Root—"Article 68, I think."

Senator Borah—"But taking the formula that we have before us, the question with me is whether or not under any circumstances which may arise, the Court may proceed to render an advisory opinion without our consent in a matter in which we have an interest, or claim an interest."

Mr. Root—"I think not. I think not. I think that when you consider the effect of the general amendment which are a sequence to the adoption of this protocol that we are not discussing, after having accepted the provision that they should not have jurisdiction to entertain any question which involved the interests of the United States, without its consent, and accepting the arrangement about publicity of advisory proceedings, they want to put into the statute by way of amendments in the other protocol, to put into the statute the substance of the rules of the Court."

Senator Reed—"That is rather vaguely done in Article 68, is it not, Mr. Root?"

Mr. Root—"It is rather vaguely done. You have got to read it with reference to the history; and they added Article 68. When you read that, you must recall the decision in the Eastern Corelia case, and the provisions regarding contested cases which come into court in the ordinary way, which limits the jurisdiction of the Court to cases in which consent is given."

The Senate will do well to see to it that our right of self-determination shall remain as well defined as in Reservation Five and that it is entirely devoid of vagueness. The effect of the Root protocol seems to be to destroy the essence of Article V, which gives the United States the power to prevent any advisory opinion on matters in which we claim an interest. The right of withdrawal from the Court does not cover the case, because it was already provided in the Fourth reservation.

Al Smith is listed and Heflin omitted from British "Who's Who." Publishers probably were trying to avoid the possobility of "spontaneous combustion."—Los Angeles Times.

The year's most prominent expected visitor is prosperity.—Dayton (Ohio) Journal.

THE PROHIBITION QUESTION

Since the adoption of the 18th amendment much of the time politics has interferred with the enforcement of the Volstead act. There has been consequent graft and laxity. Prohibition has not had a fair trial. Naturally the sensible conclusion is that such a trial must be made over a period of years before there is just ground to urge that the great experiment be abandoned. It took thirty years to make enforcement effective in Kansas. But in the end the joints were driven out of the wettest centers of the state.

The Wickersham report may be expected to expose frankly the evils that have developed. But mature persons whose memories have not been dulled, will remember the far greater evils of the pre-prohibition days. The choice is not between a blissful age of good old days of saloon domination and the modern age of the bootlegger and hijacker. It is between an era in which the most serious of these evils have disappeared, although ideal conditions have not been reached.

There is every reason to believe that present evils will be minimized through the continuous tightening up of enforcement in accordance with the policies of the Hoover administration.—Kansas City Star.

Some concern has been expressed about the conditions of drinking water at some places in the Baker School community. Laboratory test of the water from the well at Baker School showed 2,500 bacteria. It is stated that the test of a well at the home of W. J. Bice showed over 7,000. A count of 200 bacteria is regarded as suspicious. There have been three serious cases of typhoid at the home of Mr. Bice recently.

Reese Baker seems to be an expert at the game of catching hawks. Last week he observed some hawks near his home. They appeared at the same place for several days. Mr. Baker secured a steel trap, placed it in one of the trees, baited with a bird. The result was the successful fastening of two of the birds. One measured 48 inches and the other 47 inches.

If Prof. Dewey expects to pull any of these professional political insurgents into a third party he must first show 'em a majority. It is only a college professor who could enjoy being lonesome as well as righteous.

* SOME AMERICAN *
* OBSERVATIONS *
* By Jay Taylor *
* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

The members of the World Court have done everything possible to oil the way for American entry, says one of the League of Nations' editors. They have gone so far as to have League of Nations' experts help Mr. Root write the formula which we are now asked to accept as a substitute for the senate reservation.

Mr. McFadden, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, in an address at Providence, said that the governments of Europe are impoverished and they are insisting that we pool our wealth with them in order that pre-war conditions may be re-established. Mr. McFadden believes that the United States can make the greatest contribution to the world's civilization by maintaining its financial independence.

In a radio address delivered some time ago under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Richard Washburn Child, former United States Ambassador to Italy, made some observations on the World Court. To protect the interests in the United States, said Mr. Childs, the Senate put up a fifth reservation which was rejected by the League of Nations. Then came the Root formula, which was drawn up by Mr. Root with the aid of the British Foreign Office. "By joining the World Court under such terms," the ambassador said, "we put ourselves politically in the hands of the League. Ten minutes after we were in, the League could ask an advisory opinion affecting, perhaps some vital interest of ours.

"We could protest.

"The protest being unheeded—could withdraw.

"How?

"By acrimonious debate in the senate, by a divided and inflamed press, by the appearance—political appearance—of being unwilling to submit to the opinions of the so-called impartial court, by suffering the onslaughter of a foreign press enjoying the sight of a great power caught in a political trap.

"Not for me—as an American.

"I am for the heart, and the intelligence of America—kept free."

In the last hundred years eight million homes have been financed by American Building and Loan Association. These institutions now have assets of nine billion dollars and Dr. Klein of the Commerce Department thinks they will play an important part in our business recovery.

We are informed by an intelligent Englishman that Europe cares nothing at all for our advice or our counsel. They would like to get us in a position where they could tell us what to pay or how to cooperate with them to promote their own plans. Beyond that they expect us to mind our own business.

THE CINDER PILE

(By The Sweeper)

Phew!

Every so often The Sweeper feels the call of nature and hies himself hither to the country to "follow the furrow" for a spell and we have just seen the end of such a period of time spent on the farm of our father.

You know, it kinda rests a feller to get back to the country occasionally and do a little real work on the old homestead. One seems to forget his cares and worldly troubles and just imagines the world is his oyster when he gets to following old Beck up and down the furrows and hears the care-free birds singing their songs of hope and cheer.

When you get the scent of freshly turned soil and see the wonders of nature being performed right before your eyes, knowing that when the evening sun sinks low on the western horizon, and the day's work is done that you can stick your feet under a well-laden table and partake of one of those gool old-fashioned country cooked meals, the greater majority of which are products of your own farm, the average farmer has nothing to worry about and should be content to let the other fellow do the yelling about "hard times."

But here is the "nigger-in-the-woodpile" of this train of thought: Too many of our farmers do not make it a point to see that there is sufficient feed and food-stuffs raised on their farms each year to supply the needs of their families and stock. They are too much concerned about a cotton or "money crop" to give these other items the attention they should have. But listen here, you farmers! If you will see to it that there is plenty to eat raised on that little farm of yours as a first consideration, and then any additional cropping that can be done in the cotton line, there will be no reason why every single farmer and his family in Chilton County cannot sit back and see themselves in a position to consider the world theirs at the end of another year.

It is cretainly a source of joy to The Sweeper to see so many of the people who left the country and the carefree life of the farm for the public works a few years ago, making an honest effort to return to their native heath. This back to the farm movement will do more, and do it in less time, to relieve the unemployment situation in the cities and to better the general economic situation in this country than any other one single thing that could be put into practice.

Speaking of the unemployment situation reminds us of the number of people we saw in attendance at the regular session of Commissioner's Court Monday. There was a lot of people before the court looking for work. The Sweeper has not seen so many people as anxious to work for anything in the way of salary or wages they could get, or do most anything that comes to hand, as we have seen in the last few months.

We are informed that the Commissioners have at last taken some definite action relative to the disposal of the new jail controversy. An order was given the architects for plans covering rebuilding the old jail at its present location, subject to approval by State Prison Inspector, Dr. Andrews. Personally The Sweeper does not approve of this action on the part of The Court. We think that the present jail is too far removed from the court house and entails far too great an inconvenience in transferring of prisoners to and fro between the two buildings.

The Court has already purchased the Potts property adjacent to the court house lot, with the intention of building the new jail on this lot. Owing to a controversy between the Court and the membership of the First Baptist Church, together with what the Court considered too heavy an expense in such proposed structure, the decision to rebuild the present jail was reached.

We feel that the citizens of the county as a whole would like to see the jail moved and a new and modern structure erected on the property adjoining the present court house. We also believe that if the question was submitted to a vote of the people that the larger and better building on this lot would be authorized by a large majority.

Relative to the question upon which the church controversy hangs, we do not think that there would be many times in a great while that prisoners in the jail would interfere with the church activities. There have been a goodly number of converts in jails and prisons, and in most every instance a good sermon would be more likely heeded by a man or woman who has already strayed from the path and been caught in the snare of the law, than by that same person if they were free. An amplyfying system would put the church services in the jail and possibly be a well paying investment in humanity. Let's have some thought on this matter by our people and express our opinions on the same both through the paper and to the Court. Let's have this jail business settled in the very best possible manner and agreeable to all parties concerned if possible.

Our heart jumped way up past our mouth a day or so ago. Yes sir, we were that scared. The postman handed us a letter from the office of The United States District Attorney in Birminghm, and we were sure we had incurred the displeasure of our Uncle Samuel in some manner or other and were in for a calling down. But we were spared this humiliation. It was only a note of thanks from our friends, Hon. C. B. Kennamer and J. O. Middleton for our kindly mention of them in last weeks' Cinder Pile. For this we thank you, Mr. Kennamer and Mr. Middleton.

A reader has asked why we refer to ourselves as "we." Well it is like this: You folks out there who read this junk from week to week play a big part in its preparation and our ideas for each weeks' musings are drawn from incidents we see happen or hear about, therefore we desire to share with you the authorship of this column.—The Sweeper.

If there was some way to induce the rich to spend more money and the poor to save it, then all of the political economists would be satisfied. —Loe Angeles Times.

Another way to solve the unemployment problem would be for the banks to name some more vice presidents.—Indianapolis Star.

Naturally Senator Norris is opposed to joining a third party. He already belongs to two.—Toledo Blade.

Wins the Cookie—Charlie Chaplin's funniest remark will always be the one in which he said he wanted to play Hamlet.

Nothing Seems Permanent—The fundamental propositions of econmoics are now being challenged, and the reputations of modern authors shift in value like stocks in Wall Street.

Penalty for Fighting—Stags, moose, caribou, and elk often fight so furiously that their horns are hopelessly interlocked and the animal starve or die of exhauston.

WHERE QUALITY BEATS QUANTITY

"There ought to be a law," the stock American reaction to almost any problem, will soon be echoed in forty-three state capitals.

The open season for law making begins in a few days. Careful students of the subject estimate that before warm May or June days send the law makers home they will have added some 20,000 laws to the statute books.

There will be many unwise laws passed, numerous useful measures will fall by the wayside. It is safe to predict the usual assortment of "jokers." They will cause some mischief before common sense nullifies them by ignoring them.

So it is timely once more to issue the familiar warning that not more laws, but better laws are the chief need of the nation. We want a custom job in legislation instead of stock models rolling of the assembly line a law a minute. Here is a place where quantity production is likely to be very costly.

And along with the making of the new laws should go a vigirous policy of repealing old and useless laws. Every State, Ohio included, is bedeviled every now and then because some law useful and necessary forty, fifty or one hundred years ago bobs up to halt progress. These obstructions on the smooth road of the government should be taken out of the way.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hell is a place where you get a tax notice by every mail. — Ohio State Journal.

BANDITS IN NICARAGUA

The slaying of several American marines by bandits in Nicaragua is a matter for profound regret. Yet unfortunate as it is, the demand made by certain seators for complete withdrawal of our marine forces from this Central American country is not justified. We certainly ought to know by this time through repeated experience that some American assistance to the Nicaraguans is indispensable.

If we should abandon the Nicaraguan officials at this juncture, telling them to run their country as best they can, it is a practical certainty that we should have to begin all over the work of restoring order and a decree of stability which we commenced at the conclusion of the rebellion led by General Sacasa and Dr. Moncada. And it is hardly necessary to remind the senators who are clamoring for complete withdrawal that we have given a pledge to help the country maintain order until it can rely wholly upon its national guard.—Providence Journal.

Why has no statesman thought of the simple expedient of relieving the whole situation by putting everyone on the federal pension roll at $5,000 a year? Perhaps because he knows some other politician would come right along and raise it to $10,000.

A period of depression is of interest, at least, in showing just how many freak political and economic ideas it can sprout.

In view of the predictions made by Pat Harrison as to how many billion dollars would be added to the cost of living by the new tariff, it is now evident that if it were not for the tariff we would all be living for less than nothing.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

General J. W. E. Gulledge is stirring around again these days. He was on the street Tuesday all buttoned up in his big overcoat, cheerful and jolly. The main thing he is looking forward to right now is the Confederate Veterans reunion which will be held in Montgomery in June.

County Agent Stapp is into the drouth relief program for Chilton County this week. He is engaged in helping farmers in the drouth area make their applications for government aid. On the front page of this paper is an article which explains this matter in full.

Rev. Haskew mentioned in his talk to Kiwanis recently something about some of the bad looking spots in Clanton, referring particularly to some of the old junk piles of dilapidated automobiles. That does look bad, honestly it does. It surely is not necessary for owners of such property to assemble it in a conspicuous place and spoil the appearance of our town.

But the old automobile junk piles are not all the bad looking places in town. It may be that the owners of the old cars figure that since there are so many other ugly looking things in town, it will not make it much worse for folks to see their display of old automobiles.

I want to commend the plan of Earle Thomas for getting a group of boys interested in raising pigs. It would be a fine thing next fall to have about 200 fine pigs brought to Clanton at one time for a joint sale of the whole lot. Get into it boys.

This week is the twenty-first birthday of the Boy Scout movement. You are requested to read the proclamation of Mayor J. Lee Smith, on that subject. Boost for the Scouts. They deserve it, and the efforts they are making are highly commendable.

SCOUTING COMES "OF AGE" THIS WEEK

The Boy Scouts movement in America "comes of age" this week. It is twenty-one years old. In commemoration of the founding of this great work, Boy Scouts and the organization officials throughout the country are celebrating the twenty-first birthday of the organization.

It is reassuring to come to the twenty-first birthday of such a worth-while thing as Scouting and contemplate the vast good that has been stored up in the minds and hearts of men of today through their contact with Scouting in the days of their youth.

Likewise, the future is made pleasant to contemplate because of the far-flung lines of Scouting today which is building into hundreds of thousands of boys a fibre of life that will make in them bone and sinew of mature men as they approach the responsibilities of life ahead of them.

About five million Scouts—many now already grown to manhood—have at one time or another taken the Scout oath, which is expressed in the following words:

"On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout law; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

Is it any wonder that Scouting has made itself felt in this generation, and has gained the whole-hearted support of the moral leaders of our age, when one contemplates the meaning of the pledge which is made the individual point of contact between the boy and the movement?

Locally in Clanton, the Boy Scout movement is new, we are sorry to say. But we are glad it is here, even if it did arrive a few years late. This word from Scout Executive, Sigwald, is heartening. He says he feels that Scouting is being promoted in Chilton County in a much faster ratio than other communities which are as new to Scouting as Chilton County is."

Scoutmaster John D. Mullins, of Troop 47, at Clanton, is doing a good job. Scoutmasters Sam Powers at Lay Dam and John Hollis at Mitchell Dam have their programs well under way.

It is hoped that every grown person in Chilton County will do some thinking about the Scout movement. It is worthy of our whole-hearted support. Let us join with the Scouts in celebration of the anniversary of Scouting in America. Hon. J. Lee Smith, of Clanton, has very graciously risen to the challenge of the hour by issuing a ringing proclamaiton concerning the anniversary event of this week.

THIS MAY EXPLAIN DESIRE FOR SENATORIAL CONTEST

The Opelika News intimates that possibly one of the reasons why Senator Heflin is so insistent on a contest over the recent election is that contestants draw $800 a month until the hearings are over.

The News may or may not correctly interpret the Senator's motives, but nobody has noticed Senator Tom overlooking many opportunities to draw salary checks from the public coffers. He is quite adept at the art.

The proposal of Senatos Heflin to force a probe of the Alabama election continues to occupy much space in the public prints. Almost universally we discover his position is being assailed and the position of Senator Black, defending "Alabama's good name" being praised. The exchange of verbal pleasantries in the senate between the two Alabama senators during the past two weeks has brought almost unanimous journalistic commendation for the one and condemnation for the other.

Even the Alabama legislature has taken a hand and resolutions were anopted condemning Senator Heflin's "lack of sportsmanship." The press dispatches state that only three negative votes were cast against the resolution in the house, these coming from those legislators generally identified as "independent."

Even Percy Pitts, republican, from Clanton, Ala., is declared to have uttered a vigorous "aye" when the measure was brought up. Whether by accident or design, at the time of the roll call, Mr. Pitts was reported to have been standing in a cloakroom and hearing the clerk read his name, gave voice to a favorable vote in such a tone that it reverberated all over capitol hill.

Those who are familiar with Mr. Pitts' highly developed sense of humor probably are inclined to the view that he adjourned to the cloakroom in order that he might have a better opportunity to express vocally his attitude toward the Alabama senator. Mr. Pitts' mind is so alert that once, when the democrats in the house were declared to have been raging at each other over some pending measure, he appealed to the speaker to declare a recess "so the republicans could go into caucus." Winning his plea, he grabbed his fellow republican member by the arm and the two stalked from the house chamber, while smiles, then laughter came from the democratic colleagues and a serious breach was averted.

Mr. Pitts apparently is convinced that even republicans can appreciate lack of sportsmanship when they encounter it and in Heflin's post-election contest he is convinced, along with most democrats, that he certainly has encountered an amazing absence of that right noble characteristic.—Decatur Daily.

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

The centenial edition of the Corollo, University of Alabama year book, has been compiled and is ready for the printer, Hugh Carden, Centre, editor in chief, announces. The 1930-1931 Corolla will number about 400 pages, and sixty-two staff members are assisting in the preparation of the annual.

Five faculty members of the University of Alabama have been named on the Alabama Commission on the Enrichment of Adult Life, just announced y the National Education Association. They are President George H. Denny; Lee Bidgood, dean of the school of commerce; Dr. J. J. Doster, dean of the college of education; Prof. Ben E. Harris, vocational education; and Dr. V. M. Sims, professor of psychology.

The University of Alabama Glee Club made their annual spring trip, appearing February 5 at Gadsden, and February 6 at Anniston. Twenty-seven men made the trip. An added attraction was the appearance of Fred Sington, Alabama's all-American tackle, and Ben Smith, star end and alternate captain of the tide next year. These gridmen gave talks on Alabama's recent victory over the Cougars of Washington State College in the Rose Bowl.

Dr. R. E. Tidwell, director of extension at the University of Alabama; Dr. Pawl W. Terry, head of the department of psychology; and Dr. V. M. Sims, professor of psychology, will appear on the program of the National Education Association at Detroit February 24-27.

A summary of dairy herd improvement association work in Alabama last year made by C. M. Ling of the Extension Service at Auburn shows that the cost of feed for making one pound of butterfat varied from 15 cents to 58 cents, a difference of 43 cents. The average was 29.09 cents.

CLEAN YOUR BROODER BEFORE PUTTING BABY CHICKS IN IT

Before putting baby chicks in the brooder house you used last year, give it a good cleaning.

The first thing to do is to scrub loose the droppings that may be stuck to the floor. Brush the walls and the ceiling to remove the dust which has accumulated. When this has been done, you are ready to give it a coat of whitewash, adding to the gallon one pint of disinfectant.

If you had any trouble with chicks dying, due to gasping or choking to death, it would be advisable to fumigate the house with formaldehyde. In cold weather it will mean starting a fire in the brooder and heating the room up to at least 75 degrees. Then soak the brooder-house with water. Formaldehyde can only do a thorough job of fumigating when the room is warm and damp. For an ordinary colony brooder-house, a pound of potassium permangunate and a quart of formaldehyde should be used. Put the potassium permanganate in a tin quart pail and then pour the formaldehyde over it. Have everything arranged so that you can get out of the house when this is done. Be sure to have all the windows sealed and do not open the brooder-house for twenty-four hours. Before putting any chicks in it or attempting to work in it yourself, allow the house to air out thoroughly.

Fumigating will kill any mold spores which may have been brought into the brooder-house, as well as the disease germs. One form of mold seems to find chicks' respiratory system an ideal place for rapid growth and in turn causing the chicks to choke to death. It probably has been responsible in a great many more instances for heavy losses of chicks than we realize. Brooder pneumonia no doubt has been unjustly blamed.

Good chicks housed under clean, comfortable quarters and given a good feed will grow into large, healthy, vigorous layers.

WINTER DROUGHT THREATENS TIMBERS

Montgomery, Ala., Jan 9. — The owners of timber and cut-over lands are facing critical conditions on account of the current winter drought, according to Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. All timber growth starts with seedlings, and the latter can easily be wiped out by the woods fires that occur so frequently during the winter and spring.

By keeping a close watch over the woodlands, especially on dry windy days, and by taking prompt action to extinguish fires shortly after they start, many thousands of dollars of damage can be easily avoided. Over the greater part of the woodland sections of the state, local forestry agents employed jointly by the operation among the landowners in forest fire protection and other branches of the forestry. However, the prevailing business depression has reduced the income of the forestry department so that a great many of these agents have necessarily been placed on furlough. This materially increases the responsibility of the landowner himself in his timber growing project.

Forest fires in Alabama are comparatively easy to extinguish, providing action is taken before they become very large. Light surfaces fires can be whipped out with a fire swatter or even a pine top. If the burning extends down into the forest floor, a hoe is necessary to stop the spread of the fire. A rake is very handy in scratching a clear line in front of the fire, across which it will have difficulty in burning. If there is a heavy wind it often is necessary to back-fire from some clear strip such as a path or road. The two most common errors in fire fighting are failure to start the back-firing sufficiently far in advance of the main fire, and thinking the fire is out when it is not

Help us keep the church on the move by giving to us your presence. We are not trying to run an organization of entertainment, but a church where Christians go to worship. When you enter God's house it is time to be full of reverence, and be just as mindful of your words and conduct as if you were in the presence of the President of the United States. The church is God's throne.

Worship with us at 9:45 a. m., at 11 a. m., and at 7 p. m., next Sunday. We are encouraged and we are looking forward with hope. For three Sundays our Sunday School has gone far above the average mark. We can make it better.

WEST CHILTON

Had a fine rain Sunday night, which was quite refreshing on newly set plants and other garden vegetables.

Such a beautiful spell of weather in February is quite unusual, and, the farm work now done is really amazing. Never saw so much land broken at this date before. So the agricultural class has not given up yet. But they have been dealt a serious blow, and they are now getting, as usual, a lot of free advice.

Rev. G. W. Freeman and wife of Randolph were at Macedonia Sunday, and at eleven o'clock Mr. Freeman preached. The service was opened with the song "Amazing Grace." Closing with the "House not made with hands."

Mr. Pratt Crumpton and Mr. Hugh Waldrop made a business trip to the Aldrich district Saturday.

There seems to be an over production in everything our farmers produce, unless the consumers are reducing their supplies. All commodities are selling low, this is good for the consumer. But tough on the producer. What a tangle we are in.

In a few more weeks all the talk will be fertilizer. We hardly think the amount used for cotton will be extremely larger this year. But if other crops are grown to a greater extent than at present, we may soon run right up against over production again. So after all, it looks as if we are not capable of self government.

Hurrah for the Sweeper around the Cinder Pile.

Several visitors at Macedonia Sunday.

We think the commissioners, at the suggestion of L. G. Posey, in West Chilton did wisely in providing for the unemployed as much as they have. While it did not help all the needy, yet it did good.

LIBERTY HILL

The Liberty Hill-Cedar Grove singing society met at Liberty Hill last Sunday afternoon, with lots of visitors. Among the visitors was Mr. Johnnie Minor, Mr. S. A. Henley, Mr. Mack Durbin and Mr. W. We meet at this place every second Sunday and at Cedar Grove every fourth Sunday.

The directors for the afternoon were: Messrs. Hiram Littlejohn, Houston Melton, S. A. Henley, Johnnie Minor, D. T Melton, Mack Durbin, with Hiram Littlejohn and Mr. Minor directing the second time. Several quartets were sung. There were several directors present but were unable to sing. Pianists were Mrs. Gussie Littlejohn, Mrs. Lela Thornton and Mr. W. G. Culp.

We were glad to have the visitors and hope more will come next time. Be present at Cedar Grove next fourth Sunday and help us.—Secretary.

President W. A. Fraser to Speak at W. O. W. Meeting in Alabama

Head Camp Meeting to Be Held in Montgomery March 19-20-21; Many to Attend

THE state-wide head camp meeting of the Woodmen of the World of Alabama will be held in Montgomery, March 19, 20 and 21, according to an announcement made today by Head Consul John N. Cochran, of Florence.

The head camp meetings are held every two years, and, according to Head Consul Cochran, delegates and members of their families will journey from all parts of Alabama for the meeting this year at Montgomery.

The Woodmen of the World is exceptionally interested in Alabama because the national association owns more than $800.000 worth of Alabama municipal, county and state securities.

"The Alabama camps this year are fortunate in being able to prevail upon President W. A. Fraser of the association to make the principal address this year," said Mr. Cochran. "Mr. Fraser will make only a few speeches at head camp meetings this year, and he has honored the Woodmen of the World of Alabama by including our convention among his dates. We are going to turn out the greatest crowd that has ever confronted President Fraser at an Alabama meeting."

Head Consul Cochran stated many new members are being obtained and will be initiated at the time of the Head Camp meeting in honor of President Fraser's visit.

Mr, Fraser is one of the leading fraternalists of the world. He has had more than 30 years experience in the fraternal insurance field. He has been associated with the Woodmen of the World since 1897. For many years Mr. Fraser has been active in the field of public and community service. During the World War he was connected with the bureau of conservation of natural resources and chairman of the advisory board for the division of military and naval insurance.

W. A. Fraser

Last June 6 the Woodmen of the World celebrated its fortieth birthday.

Climbing steadily the Woodmen of the World now is the strongest Fraternal Organization in existence, recently being declared 104.6 percent solvent, holding total investments in securities of over $98,000,000, with gross assets amounting to over $102,000,000.00. The membership of the society is estimated over 500,000. Since its organization in 1890 the Woodmen of the World has paid in death losses and disability benefits more than $203,000,000.

Two of the largest enterprises that have placed the Woodmen of the World in the fore ranks of progressive Fraternal Insurance societies, and made it nationally prominent are the War Memorial Hospital at San Antonio, and Radio Station WOW at Omaha, Nebraska.

At the present time the Woodmen of the World is constructing a $150,000 Chapel and Bird Sanctuary at San Antonio, Texas, on the grounds of the Memorial Hospital.

The following students were named: Jasper Calloway, Clanton, Ala., Rundle Campbell, Youngstown, Ohio; Daniel Dougherty, Middletown, N. ACCOUNTS AGAINST STATE

"The registration of the State debt is being rapidly completed," said S. H. Blan, State Treasurer, when questioned by a representative of this paper.

"The law requiring registration was signed by Governor B. M. Miller on January 30th. The law requires the registration of all outstanding warrants and accounts against the State, which were due and unpaid at that time, January 30th. Thirty days are allowed by law for the registration of these outstanding warrants and accounts against the State. All debts due by the State not registered within thiry days are barred by law for a period of two years."

Mr. Blan stated that March first will be the last day upon which warrants and accounts may be registered, and that therefore anyone having an unplead warrant or account should send the same to the State Treasurer for registration. The sooner these are sent in the better, as they are paid in order of registration.

After March first the registered State debt will be totaled, and the Governor will then treat with the legislature as to the best and most economic method of handling the same.

OFFICER TO INSPECT SOLDIER HOME SITES

Washington, Feb. 16.—An inspection tour of the Southeastern States to determine the general area for the location of the new soldiers home is to be made by Col. John J. Phelan, engineer of the construction division of the Veterans' Administration.

While Congress has adopted a policy of expanding facilities at existing veterans hospitals with part of the money originally proposed for the new soldiers home, that project as a separate institution has not been abandoned entirely and if sufficient funds remains after the allocations for hospital additions a new institution will be established probably this year.

Col. Phelan will visit Alabama, Georgia, Florida and the two Carolinas on his inspection tour and will report to Washington before definite steps are taken to select a specific sight. Hearings on the latter subject will be held before action is taken.

The advantages of the respective states which are bidding for this home have been placed before the Veterans Administration at hearings held in the fall by a sub-committee of the hospitalization board and the hearings held in Washington before the full board members at which members of Congrfess testified.

JESS SPIGENER IN JAIL HERE

Being Held in Connection With the Death of the Young Negro Who was found Dead near River

Jess Spigener, negro, was brought up from Verbena Monday and placed in the Chilton County Jail. He is being held for investigation into the mysterious death of a young negro, Macaroni Wright, whose body was found close to the river above Mitchell Dam some weeks ago.

Rosco Wright, father of the dead boy, stated that the boy left home on December the 5th to go to Mitchell Dam. He was not seen or heard of again by his family untill his dead body was found near the bank of the river.

We were unable to find out just what developments have arisen to implicate the Spigener negro with the death of the boy. One rumor has come from the negros of the community which asserts that the boy was killed and his body was concealed in a camp house near the river for several days. This rumor further states that the body was placed at the spot where it was found only the night before it was discovered.

This is mere rumor, however. There is no telling what kind of a story will come from the negroes when the law begins to close down on them.

INCREASE IN SCHOOL ENROLLMENT

Some interesting figures have been given out from the office of County Superintendent Lawrence, relative to school enrollment in Chilton County.

For the session of 1929 and 1930 the enrollment was 6,177, with an average daily attendance of 4,130.

Indications are that the enrollment and attendance this session will break all previous records, says Mr. Lawrence.

Alabamians Back U. S. Farm Board

Joseph O. Thompson Pleased With Results Of His Tour In This State

At county-wide mass meetings held in 56 Alabama counties during the past eight weeks, 50,000 farmers, bankers, and business men, unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the "policies and practices" of the Federal Farm Board.

This is reported by Joseph O. Thompson, farm board field representative, who spoke at the meetings and proposed the resolution. "There has not been one dissenting vote," he said.

In all addresses, he stressed the extreme need for producing less cotton and the resolution passed also endorses an acreage reduction program.

County agents members of the Auburn agricultural extension service, Farm Board officials, and others interseted in rural welfare have cooperated with Thompson in staging the mass gatherings.

In many cases he spoke at meetings called by extension workers to consider a "live-at-home" program.

"Crowds varied in number from 100 to 3,000, averaging about 1,000 per county," he said. Courthouses were too small to hold many of the crowds, and open air meetings were held.

"Such wide-spread endorsement of the Farm Board by Alabama farmers is especially significant in view of the fight being made against the governmental agency by the American Cotton Shippers' Association, the United States Chamber of Commerce, and other agencies," said Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, after hearing of the Farm Board official's report.

Thompson says he has found that farmers resent attacks being made on the Farm Board as an effect to break down their organizations. "If any change is made in the act which created the board, farmers feel that they are the ones to suggest it," he added.

The resolution passed also endorses the work of the Alabama Farm Bureau and the Auburn agricultural extension service.

Encouraged by the action, Mr. Thompson foresees a bright future for cooperative marketing of cotton. "I confidently believe that farmers of Alabama will be selling the majority of their cotton cooperatively within the next five years," he predicted.

He will continue his campaign to bring about cotton acreage reduction until planting time, but will intensify his work by speaking in the future at community gatherings in the principal cotton growing counties.

BOY SCOUT ITEMS
By Dan Smith

In my report last week I told you that our boys would go on a hike Wednesday, February 11, but it was planned for Friday instead of Wednesday. And after all we didn't get to go because of rain.

Friday night, February 13, we held a troop meeting. We also found that Friday, the 13th, was unlucky. A Ford coupe, 1931 model, belonging to Grady and Morgan Reynolds was stolen from in front of the church. After the excitement was over sandwiches were served, and much to our sorrow we had no drinks, because they were in the car. Bad luck, I call it.

After eating the sandwiches games were played between the two patrols, each patrol winning a game. The first game was the familiar crane and crow, which the Kangaroo Patrol won. The Scoutmaster played on their side, because it would be uneven if he didn't. We had agreed that the losing patrol would have to run through the gauntlet. After each member of the Wolf Patrol, the losing patrol, had gone through the gauntlet we played "Capture the Flag." In playing this game the lights are cut off, thus making it an exciting game. The Wolf Patrol won this, and Hal Broadhead, one of its members, was the star player, because he got the Kangaroo's flag.

As soon as each member of the Kangaroo Patrol had run through the gauntlet we were dismissed by repeating the scout oath.

J. Mell Martin, president of Clanton Kiwanis Club, went to Birmingham Wednesday night to attend a Kiwanis meeting in honor of International President, Raymond Crossman.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp. County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

BURNING NEW GROUND MAY DAMAGE THE SOIL

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 17.—Fire drives nitrogen out of the soil, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. This chemical element is one that plant life cannot possibly do without, and it happens to be the only one of the principal substances required by plants that fire completely destroys. Mist of the others are found in the ashes of the burned vegetable material, but the nitrogen leaves with the smoke.

Thousands of farmers will be preparing new ground for cultivation during February and March. Burning is a convenient way to get rid of down timber, stumps and wood debris. However, it is much better to pile this material compactly before burning than to set fire to the entire tract. In the former way most of the ground can be spared from the heat of the fire and the nitrogen will thus remain in the soil.

Naturally, fires used in clearing new ground should not be allowed to spread to other areas, especially the higher ground about the fields. Nitrogen and other elements of fertility do not remain entirely where first become a part of the soil. The subsurface water drainage dissolves much of these materials and carries them to the lower ground where they add to the richness of the cultivated areas. If the uplands are burned off the lowlands lose a great deal of the fertility which they otherwise would acquire in this manner.

HOGS BRING $17,905 AND POULTRY $6,030

Andalusia, Ala., Feb. 16.—Five cooperative hog sales in one month returned to 267 Covington County farmers $17,903.33 for hogs, County Agent W, T. Cheney reported. Three cooperative poultry sales returned $6,030 for 36,000 pounds of poultry.

SIX EGG MARKETING LOCALS ESTABLISHED

Bay Minette, Ala., Feb. 16.—Six local stations for receiving eggs from farmers and marketing them are now operating in Baldwin County. Poultry feed is carried at these stations for convenienee of the growers. County Agent E. E. Hale said that improved service to poultrymen and continued growth of the poultry industry are results of the arrangement.

ALABAMA FOOD AND FEED ONE EXTRA CASH CROP

Eutaw, Ala., Feb. 16.—Greene County farmers have two goals in mind this year. They intend to produce all the food and feed they need and one cash crop in addition to cotton. H. C. Appleton, county agent, is encouraging and directing the work.

From Salinas, Cal., came a press dispatch saying that rubber production on a commercial basis from sage brush has begun at Spence Switch, seven miles south of Salinas. The American Rubber Producers, a subsidiary of the Inter-Continental Rubber Company, Inc., has constructed a plant costing $150,000

TREES COMMIT SUICIDE

Kent, O., Feb. 16.—Trees, like human, beings, commit suicide. So says Martin L. Davey, head of the Davey Institute of Tree Surgery, but he explains that self destruction in the world of trees is never intentional. The result, however, is just as effective.

Under certain conditions, new roots encircle and bind other roots, or the trunk of the tree. As the roots and the trunk grow the pressure becomes greater until, in time, the tree is starved to death. The life-giving sap cannot pass the points of pressure.

The roots that do this are known as girdling roots. They occur most frequently in trees that have sidewalk on one side, and street on the other, and in trees that grow in hard-packed lawns. Where resistance is great the new roots seek the line of least resistance and entwine themselves round existing roots, where the soil is more porous.

Was Underweight Gains Ten Pounds

WILLIAN M. BARNER

"About a year ago I began to suffer with indigestion," said William M. Barner, 1711 Dartmouth St., Bessemer, salesman for the Hill Grocery Co. "After nearly every meal I'd have trouble from gas on my stomach. Taking purgatives continually for Constipation kept me feeling weak and I was considerably underweight. But in three weeks after I started taking Sargon and Sargon Pills I was free of indigestion and constipation entirely and had gained 10 pounds! I'm on the job every day now full of pep and feeling as fit as I ever did in my life."

20,000 FARM BOYS TO DO 4-H WORK IN 1931

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 16.—Enrollment of Alabama farm boys in 4-H clubs this year is expected by Thomas A. Sims, state club leader at Auburn to be approximately 20,000. In 1930 the total was 18,059 and 1931 enrollment reports received by Mr. Sims from county agents show an increase over 1930.

More boys will do cotton work than in any projct, Sims said. Corn will be next, and hogs third. Pig clubs are exceptionally strong this year, and an increase in other livestock clubs is expected. Dairy cattle and beef cattle clubs are popular. This reflects more interest among Alabama farmers in the production of livestock.

To enroll the boys and assist them in organizing clubs, county agents ar visiting schools. They have been doing this since January and will continue through March.

Most of the clubs for 1931 are a continuation of old clubs. New officers are being elected and other work done in preparation for 1931 work.

In the Spring, country club rallies will be held, to which all club members in each county will be invited.

In a study of the work of 1930, Mr. Sims found that boys who followed instructions made money. They also learned many valuable lessons about succesful farming. In addition they served as demontrators, for their work was visited and studied by neighbors and friends.

CHEVROLET BREAKS RECORDS

January production of Chevrolet Motor Company was 70,766 cars and trucks, according to W. S. Knudsen, president. Output schedules for February, wit hthree fewer days, call for 67,429 cars and trucks, exclusive of schedules in the company's Canadian plants.

January's production compares with an output of 64,019 in December, the largest December month in the company's history.

The month just ended is the third in succession to establish new high production marks over previous months since Chevrolet brought out its new line of cars in November, when 45,000 cars were made, setting a new out put record for that month in any year.

According to President Knudsen, output in February likely will exceed tentative schedules now set and each month during the remainder of the year is expected to show an increase over the preceding one.

Chevrolet factory employment as of Saturday, January 24, totaled 34,447, an increase of more than 2,000 over the corresponding date in December and 8,000 more than when the company commenced production of its new cars in early November. During the current month employment is expected to reach 40,000, Chevrolet's normal operating force.

Railroad land-grants were not gifts from the Government. . .

According to an official press release issued by the War Department, the Secretary of War, in a recent address at St. Louis, said:

"Long stretches of the public land domain were freely bestowed upon the railroad companies that built our great railroads."

This statement has since been frequently repeated by others, principally by the proponents of waterways and bus transportation, with the clear implication that the land-grants were outright gifts.

Instead of being "freely bestowed," long ago such railroads as received land-grants—and many did not—compensated the Government for them, and it is still being more than amply rewarded.

To June 30, 1930, 132,173,225 acres of land, the great bulk of it lying west of the Mississippi River, had been actually certified to the interested railroads. During the twenty-year period, 1850 to 1870, when most of the grants were made, the average price received by the Government for land sold to others was 94c an acre. In other words, the railroads received title to land worth, in the aggregate, $124,242,831; but, in return, the land-grant lines are required, under the law, to handle Government troops, munitions of war, and other Government freight, at rates substantially lower than commercial rates, and United States mail at 80% of the standard or authorized rates. Because of these reductions, the actual monetary saving to the Government now averages about $5,000,000 per year. Moreover, other competing railroads that did not receive land-grants were, and are, likewise subjected to these reduced rates, which serves to increase further the Government saving.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

It is seen, therefore, that the value of the land is repaid to the Government, at the least, every twenty-five years.

Not only has the Government already been handsomely repaid—more than once—for every acre of land turned over to the land-grant lines, but payment, under the law, will continue indefinitely.

The railroads built this country, and railroad transportation must remain the backbone of industry. Give them a square deal. They are asking for nothing more.

JESUS BEARING THE GOOD TIDINGS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 8:1-40.

GOLDEN TEXT—And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Teaching About God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaching About God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—"Take Heed How Ye Hear."

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Cultivate an Honest and Good Heart.

I. The Field of Jesus' Ministry (v. 1.)

"He went throughout every city and village." It is the will of God that the gospel should be preached to the whole world.

II. The Message of Jesus (v. 1).

The gospel message is truly good tidings, for God the Great King is offering to rebellious sinners salvation through Jesus Christ.

III. Jesus' Helpers (v. 1).

The twelve apostles were with him. The gospel preacher should utilize the help of others. Those who have heard the good tidings of the gospel glady join in preaching it to others.

IV. Jesus Supported by Saved Women (vv. 2, 3).

Certain women who had been saved from Satan's power, out of hearts of gratitude looked after the comfort of the Lord and his disciples. This throws light on how Christ and the apostles were supported.

V. Jesus Teaching (vv. 4-21).

Jesus was not only a gospel preacher but a great teacher. When the people from every city gathered unto Him, He taught them.

1. By the Parable of the Sower (vv. 4-15). (1) The sower was Jesus himself (Matt. 13:37). (2) The seed was the Word of God (v. 11). (3) The kinds of ground (vv. 5-15).

The kinds of ground show the condition of the human heart as the Word of God is preached.

a. The wayside (v. 5). The foot-trodden path of the wayside pictures the hard-hearted hearers upon which no impression can be made. The word preached finds no entrance and Satan snatches it away as the birds pick up the grain from the hard-beaten path.

b. Stony ground (v. 6). This is not ground where stones are mixed with the earth, but a thin layer of earth in a ledge of rock. This pictures the hearer who receives the gospel with joy, but when persecutions and trials come, he gives up and deserts the company (v. 15).

c. Thorny ground (v. 7). The ground here is good, but it has thorns growing in it. This pictures those whose lives are fruitless because of being preoccupied with earthly cares, riches, and the pleasures of life (v. 14).

d. The good ground (v. 8). The seed here sprang up and bore fruit to the full measure. This is a picture of the honest heart which receives the gospel message and allows it to produce in its life a full harvest of grain (v. 15).

2. By the lighted candle (vv. 16-18). The Word of God is compared to a lamp or lighted candle. A lamp is of use only as it sends out light. One who hears God's Word and does not witness for Christ is as a lamp covered up.

3. Kinship with Jesus Christ (vv. 19, 20). Only those who receive the message of God's Word and render glad obedience to it can claim relationship with Christ.

VI. Jesus Performing Wonders (vv. 22-40).

1. Calming the storm (vv. 22-25). Jesus fell asleep while the disciples were sailing the ship. They were overtaken by an unusual storm and were affrighted. In response to their cry of distress Jesus arose and rebuked the storm, and likewise the disciples.

2. Casting out demons (vv. 26-39). When Jesus came into the country of the Gadarenes he was met by a demon-possessed man. Knowing their doom, the demons requested permission to enter a herd of swine. Jesus granted their request, after which the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake. The effect upon the people was such that they besought Jesus to depart from them. The salvation of this man from demon possession ought to have awakened gratitude on the part of the people. The delivered man desired to be with the Lord. His request was refused because it was more important for him to make known to his friends at home the great deliverance which had come to him.

FORD CAR STOLEN LAST FRIDAY NIGHT

A new Ford coupe belonging to Grady Reynolds, was stolen from in front of the Clanton Baptist Church last Friday night. Grady, Jr., and Morgan Reynolds had gone to the Baptist Church in the car to attend a meeting of the Boy Scouts. It is said that the Reynolds boys got out of the car in front of the church and carried the key with them when they went inside; then Scoutmaster John D. Mullins, borrowed the car to go some place for a few minutes, and when he returned he left the car with the key in it and went inside the church. A few minutes later the boys went out to get some things out of the car and it was gone.

A man and two boys, strangers, who were in Clanton Friday, are suspected of stealing the car. They were at the Ford place during the day, representing themselves as being connected with a used car dealer at Tampa, Florida. Their actions were a little supicious.

The cover that was on the spare tire of the Reynolds car was found by Mr. Reynolds the next morning near Maxwell Field in Montgomery. It was learned Sunday that a man and two boys with two cars like the Reynolds Ford that was stolen had been in Troy last Friday night about three hours after the car had been stolen in Clanton. The suspicious man and boys here Friday had a car like the Reynolds car.

Mr. Reynolds is manning every effort to recover his car and to capture the thieves. He offers $50 reward for the car and a liberal reward for evidence that will convict the parties.

Sam Lowery, from the Pate Arledge place near Union Grove, brought a mommoth mushroom to the Union-Banner office last Saturday. It measured 14 inches across the top. We have heard of folks eating mushrooms. If this were the eating kind, it would certainly give somebody a square bait of mushroom.

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

Valentine has come and past and is a memory. Spring is gradually coming into its own. Football candidates labor hard for Coach Thomas as he installs the Notre Dame System, and he seems to be getting results. Others who do not indulge in the pigskin frolick are hard at work on our studies.

Alpha Delta Pi installed its Eta chapter here Saturday and among its members we noted Misses Elizabeth and Myra Johnson of Clanton, and Miss Elizabeth Hubbard of Verbena.

The new swimming pool is well under way and will be opened soon.

At last it has happened. What? Alabama lost a basketball game,—but beat Vanderbilt Friday 36 to 29. Alabama Lacrosse Team meets Georgia Tech in the near future.

The track team is getting in shape for the indoor meet in North Carolina soon.

Did you hear the Alabama centennial broadcast last Thursday afternoon? If not tune in on WAPI next Thursday afternoon from 4:00 to 4:30, and hear the blacn friars tell you about Alabama's past and coming centennial.

Dr. Denny announces that even due to graduation of some hundred students plus some who have dropped out, the enrollment is still over 4,000. Ten years ago it was less than 1,800. Today the greatest school at all (our own opinion). We are looking for C. C. H. S. over at the state basket ball tournament. Carbolic acid—that's good bye in any language.

BETHSALEM

There was a large crowd at Sunday school Sunday, for which we are glad. There are new ones coming in almost every Sunday. It makes us feel that we are trying to get closer to the Lord, and trying to serve him more.

Our pastor, W. P. Lowery, preached a fine sermon Sunday morning and also that night, which was enjoyed by a large crowd.

The special songs which we have in classes is an enjoyable feature. The Juniors will sing next Sunday.

Come eveybody and help us in our Sunday school work.

COLLINS CHAPEL COMMUNITY

Last Friday afternoon the Collins Chapel Jr. High School department motored to Union Grove to have a spelling match. There were 22 on each side. The Collins Chapel side was victorious.

The last one standing up on the Union Grove side was Clarence Gilmore. He was turned down on the word "Cleveland." There were three still standing on the Collins Chapel side. They were Ruth Collins, Ruby Willis and Pleasant Right.

There was also a basketball game between the small boys of the schools the same evening. The score was in favor of Union Grove.

They are planning on returning the spelling match and the basketball game February 27. The parents are especially invited to attend and see how your children can spell.

The attendance last week was not so good but it is better this week due to the fact that those that were sick last week are well and in school this week.

Pity is love stooping, love drawn down by helplessness and want. Pity is love touched with sympathy, love sorrowing and suffering in our sorrow.—C. H. Spurgeon.

WASHINGTON'S WRITINGS SHOW HIS RELIGIOUS ATTITUDE

Had High Regard for Religious Practices and Encouraged Recognition of God's Goodness Among the People at Large.

As a boy, George Washington probably thought as much about religion as did the average normal, healthy boy of that age. As he grew older, he steadily developed a deeply religious turn of mind, according to the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

At the age of twenty-three, he counted the bullet holes in his coat after Braddock's defeat and acknowledged, with common sense practicality, that a power higher than man had saved him. The Revolutionary War taught him lessons he was too honest to deny, and as a result, Washington's belief in God became the simple faith of a child, confirmed and strengthened by the actual living experience of a man.

The personal record of church attendance, his estimate of the value of religious practices amoug the people at large; his desire and effort to encourage and to inculcate in the people a spirit of gratitude toward the Diety; and his own expressions of opinion respecting God, give concrete evidence of his faith.

His religious record practically starts with the time when he was commanding the Virginia troops on the western frontier after Braddock's defeat. At Fort Loudoun, Winchester, at the age of twenty-four, this Colonel of Virginia militia, on Saturday, September 18, 1756, ordered that "the men parade tomorrow morning at beating the long roll, with their arms and amunitions clean and in good order, and to be marched by the Sergeants of the respective companies to the fort, there to remain until prayers are over."

MAKING SOMETHING TO EAT

I heard a little story with a big moral the other day.

A farmer came to a business man in Clanton and asked for five dollars to buy something to eat.

The business man said: "You go down to Mr. Ed Carleton and tell him to make you something to eat."

"You surely did not understand what I wanted," returned the farmer. "I said I wanted something to eat. You don't think a blacksmith could make something to eat, do you?

"Well, I don't know," said the business man. "If a farmer can't make something to eat on his farm, I guess he had just as well try the blacksmith as anybody else."

Double Primary Bill Is Ready for Miller to Sign

Legislature Also Prepares Redistricting Measure for Final Enactment. Calendar Shrinks

Two important bills, one abolishing second choice voting in party primaries, the other redistricting Alabama into nine congressional divisions, were enacted Tuesday, except for the Governor's signature. The Senate passed the Snodgrass double primary bill, previously approved in the house, and the House concurred in the Senate substitution redistricting bill, over weak opposition. Both branches of the legislature made diligent efforts to reduce their calendars, and when adjournment was taken shortly before 6 p.m., to reconvene at 10:00 a.m. today, the Senate had passed 16 bills, while the house had passed 28.

The session in both houses were harmonious except for a division of the Jefferson County delegation in the lower branch over a bill to abolish the Board of Revenue of Jefferson County. Lewey Robinson, who led the minority in the Jefferson delegation of seven House members against the measure, had a sympathetic gallery, but the House membership sided with the majority in the delegation. This bill was passed and sent to the Senate where it will be supported by Senator Lee Edmondson of Jefferson.

Debate on Division

There was another flare of debate in the House when the Senate substitute redistricting bill came over for concurrence. Members of the House from the new Fifth District, created in the Senate bill, were defeated in a mild effort to block concurrence and appointment of a conference committee.

As soon as the Senate message, transmitting the bill to the House, was read, Representative Culver, of Etowah voicing a motion for non-concurrence and Representative Guy of Lowndes, moving for adjournment, vied for recognition by the chair. Mr. Culver was permitted to put his motion before Mr. Guy was recognized, but then the motion to adjourn was shouted down.

Representative Sanderson of Montgomery, urging concurrence in the Senate substitute, was followed to the floor by Representative Lovelace of Tallapoosa, who opposed the substitute for the bill which had passed the House.

Percy Pitts, Republican member from Chilton, expressed the appreciation of the minority "that a Democratic Legislature had been so fair to the Sixth district, which includes Chilton, as to leave Cotton Tom out of the Sixth District." He expressed no other sentiment with regard to the Senate substitution.

Steam Roller Cry Raised

Representative Parker of Cleburne joined the non-concurrence group, accusing the proponents of the measure of steam-roller tactics, wailing that his district, the Fifth, not only had been rearranged to take in Cotton Tom, but had been stretched out from Montgomery to Chattanooga. Mr. Culver, regaining the floor, took up the Heflin ailment. "Into this District," he said, "you have included the County in which Heflin was born and that is bad enough. Worse still, you have included Chambers County, where he now resides, and you have added insult to injury by inclusion of the Town of Heflin." At this point Mr. Guy again sought to shut off consideration of the measure by moving adjohrnment but he was again shouted down. The final vote was 74 to 13 for concurrence.

During the roll call of the Counties for introduction of bills, Representative Callaway of Montgomery offered a resolution congratulating Governor Miller upon the appointment of William F. Feagin as head of the Board of Administration. It was sent to the rules committee and that committee met but in the rush of the House members to clear pet measures from the calendar the committee's report was not received. It was understood that the committee had a report making several special orders and it is expected that the report will be brought in when the House meets this morning.

The doubzle primary bill as amended places the primary on the first Tuesday in May instead of the second Tuesday, making five weeks between the first and second primaries. It was explained that this amendment had been made to give printers sufficient time to print ballots for the second primary.

It also was amended to exempt certain county offices in Jefferson County from its provisions.

The restriction bill as finally passed throws Congressman L. L. Patterson, now representing the Fifth District and Miles B. Allgood, of the Seventh, into the new Fifth, and leaves the other eight congressmen without a conflict.

The chief changes are in the present Seventh and Fifth districts, the Tenth becoming the Seventh and the Seventh and Fifth split, with the new Fifth composed of Chambers, Cherokee, Cleburne, DeKalb, Etowah, Talladega and St. Clair Counties.

The new Seventh will be composed of Blount, Cullman, Fayette, Franklin, Lamar, Marion, Pickens, Walker and Winston.

Senator Darden of Coosa, in opposing the bill, said he did so because of the effect on Congressman Patterson and the sentiment of my two counties that the Fifth District should not be dissembered.

He suggested that the Tenth District be dissolved, since it was the last district created, and declared it was "an effort to eliminate Congressman Patterson."

Feagin Ouster Postponed

The Senate committee on revision of laws yesterday postponed consideration of the Kelly bill amending the act creating the office of Director of the State Board of Administration, because of lack of a quorum.

The bill as introduced by Senator Kelly of Morgan would prohibit W. F. Feagin, director of the board of administration, from serving, since it provided that the director should not within 12 months of being appointed have been employed by "any person, firm or corporation," dealing in text books for sale to the State, pupils or patrons of public schools.

The bill also would amend the act of the current session of the Legislature by providing further that the director should not hold at the same time of his term, any other remunerative position. In drafting the new act, this feature which previously applied to the president of the board of administration was left out.

After the committee had been unable to convene, Senator Kelly said it was probable that an amendment to the bill would be submitted in committee to eliminate that feature concerning previous employment, but that the bar to holding another position concurrently would be left in it.

Changes Have Made Men Subservient to Women

All fights for freedom, that succeed, go too far, and become in turn the infliction of a tyranny. Like Napoleon or a Soviet. And like the freedom of women.

Perhaps the greatest revolution of modern times is the emancipation of women, and perhaps the deepest fight for 2,000 years and more has been the fight for women's independence, or freedom, call it what you will. The fight was deeply bitter; and, it seems to me, it is won, D. H. Lawrence writes, in Scribner's Magazine.

It is even going beyond, and becoming a tyranny of woman, of the individual woman in the house, and of the feminine ideas and ideals in the world. Say what we will, the world is swayed by feminine emotion today, and the triumph of the productive and domestic activities of man over all his previous military or adventurous or flaunting activities is a triumph of the woman in the home.

The male is subservient to the female need, and outwardly, man is submissive to the demands of woman.

Great Painter Showed Genius in Early Years

For sheer precocity no artist ever beat Sir Thomas Lawrence, who died a century ago, writes "Looker-On" in the London Daily Chronicle. When he was only nine his father would place him on the table at Bear inn, Devizes, where he was brought up, and ask the coachloads of ladies and gentlemen who stopped for refreshment: "Will you have my son Tommy recite to you from Shakespeare or draw your portraits?" Many chose the latter alternative, with the result that by the time he was ten his fame had flown all over the kingdom, so that he was able to go to Bath, hire a house and set up as a portrait painter at a couple of guineas a time. Within a few years he had drawn half the aristocracy of England, and at seventeen actually held a one-man exhibition. He was only fourteen when he drew his famous portrait of Mrs. Siddons as Zara.

Interesting Old Castle

Lumley castle, near Chesterle-Street, England, it is thought, can establish its claim to be the oldest inhabited castle in the two counties of Northumberland and Durham, says an article in the Montreal Family Herald. It was originally built as a manor house about 933, and continued as such for about four centuries. In the Fourteenth century Sir Ralph Lumley had the castle remodeled by building the four corner towers or keeps and connecting the buildings on all sides but the west. The castle has been in continuous occupation of the Lumley family ever since its original erection in the days of the Saxon kings.

Mr. Gabbit—Told me I needed a rest, and that I must keep away from work for a month.

"I know. I told him that was the only rest I had."

In Person

Observers are surprised to know how quickly children adopt modern words and phrases into childish vocabularies. A worker at a children's museum was startled the other day by a little girl who, admiring a case of mounted animals, asked: "Lady, are these animals really in person?"

Standing nearby was a boy, evidently as well versed in movie parlance as the little girl. He quickly replied: "Sure they have been alive; did you think they were faked?"

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.
M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

JEMISON F. F. A. NEWS

The Jemison Future Farmers have constructed two flue-heated hotbeds to be used to grow potato slips from Big Stem Jersey sweet potatoes. These beds are located on the laboratory area and may serve as a pattern for the farmers and also will be used this season by the members and farmers. The Big Stem Jersey sweet potatoes will be shipped while green in carload lots to northern markets. This is a new enterprise for this section.

Another part of this year's program is to run a variety test on strawberries, using the new variety, Blakemore, in comparison with the Klondike now being grown in this section. The U. S. Department of Agriculture in their recent circular No. 93 advises that the Blakemore should have a thorough test wherever the Klondike is grown. The laboratory area is being used for this test.

The year's program also calls for the introduction of the Young variety of dewberry, recommended to us by L. & N. Railroad agricultural agents to replace the Lucretia variety now being used in this section. A variety test will be conducted in the laboratory area. One cultural test will be conducted by the Future Farmers. Strawberries will again be used comparing the hedge system with the matted row system.

The F. F. A. boys are continuing with their last year's program; the proper beautification and sanitation of the school grounds. Last year the grounds were sodded and additional shrubs were planted. The F. F. A. members take pride in the fact that their school led the way for school ground beautification in Chilton County and apreciates the many compliments that people over the county have given the school for its landscape work.

DEPICTING THE NATION'S GRIEF

Illustrative of the Parade of Mourning, indulged in by the nation after the death of George Washington, is a unique print, engraved by Thomas Clark of Boston, Mass., dated 1801, and which is now in the possession of Miss Alice Neilson of that city. The print was handed down to her by succeeding generations and is now regarded as being extremely valuable. This attempt to make visible the nation's grief was very popular at that period and one of these prints was hung in every loyal home in the Colonies.

Washington

HE STRUCK with firm courage
the blow of the brave,
But sighed o'er the carnage that spread;
He indignantly trampled the yoke
of the slave,
But wept for the thousands that bled.
Though he threw back the fetters
and headed the strife,
Till man's charter was fairly restored,
Yet he prayed for the moment
when Freedom and Life
Would no longer be pressed by the sword.

Records Show Washington's "Human" Side

George Washington was a good bookkeeper and a most human sort of individual, who liked to have the staircase and the furniture polished and house well prepared when he returned to Mount Vernon with his bride. This is revealed in an examination of several illuminating old documents that are in the possession of the Mount Vernon Ladies' association, Uthai Vincent Wilcox relates, in the Boston Herald.

But it is in the letter written regarding his homecoming with his bride that George Washington reveals his kindness to all others in similar positions. This new letter, just brought to light, was signed "G. Washington" instead of the usual "Geo. Washington." He wrote:

"I have sent Miles on today, to let you know that I expect to be up tomorrow, & to get the Key from Col. Fairfax's which I desire you will take care of. You must have the House very well cleaned & were you to make Fires in the Rooms below it w'd air them. You must get two of the best Bedsteads put up—one in the Hall Room, and the other in the little dining Room that used to be, & have them very well rubd & cleaned—the Staircase ought also to be polished in order to make it look well.

"Enquire abt. in the neighborhood, & get some Eggs and Chickens, and prepare in the best manner you can for our coming; you need not however take out any more of the Furniture than the beds Tables & Chairs in order that they may be well rubd & cleand.

"I am yr. Fd. &c.
"G. WASHINGTON."

Early Platonic Affection.

As a surveyor Washington went to live with the Fairfaxes. George William Fairfax was a boon companion and very close and intimate friend of the young Washington at that time, although somewhat older in years and experience. Living with the Fairfaxes after his friend had married, he found in the companionship of youthful Mrs. Fairfax, who was only eighteen, that which interested him greatly. It was a platonic friendship and innocent in its character, yet his letters and his diary show that he enjoyed greatly the hours that he spent with Mrs. Sally Cary Fairfax, for it was her interest in literature and history that stimulated him and encouraged his political aspirations.

Because of his close companionship and propinquity with this splendid woman, he came to have for her a mute, if hopeless affection. His letters at this time indicated that. Yet he never brought unhappiness to the home of the Fairfaxes.

His special interest in Mary Philipse of New York is noted in his records. Miss Philipse was a few years older than Washington. She was a belle of Gotham, a noted beauty, and her favors were much sought. It was apparent that her sophistication impressed young Washington. At the same time the society girl found something to interest her in the upstanding Virginian, with his courteous country manners and his acquaintance with military life. A short and spirited acquaintanceship was all that resulted.

Wooing Too Precipitate.

Washington was by that time older in years and the ways of the world and had developed something of a philosophic turn of mind in such matters. He made a note in his diary that indicates the reason for the loss of his suit for the hand of Mary, for, he wrote, he had "not waited until ye ladye was in her mood."

A writer of that time describes her as being rather below the middle size but being extremely well shaped with an agreeable countenance, dark hazel eyes and hair, and a frank engaging manner, indicating a high percentage in personality-plus.

In May, 169 years ago, a number of horsemen in uniform passed down a road in Virginia. The officers were dressed in the British scarlet and accompanied by a dignified black servant who was also on horseback. The commander in charge was George Washington.

A planter of the neighborhood, recognizing him, asked him to stop over for dinner, but he declined, saying that he must hurry to Williamsburg and lay before the governor and council of Virginia matters relating to the march of the British and the Colonials against Fort Duquesne. He said that he was in a hurry.

Charming Widow Custis.

Additional urging was of no avail until his would-be host happened to mention that he had stopping with him the charming Williamsburg widow, Mrs. Daniel Parke Custis. Evidently the information intrigued the young commander, for he then yielded to the repeated invitation. He told his old servant to have the horses in readiness, for after he had dined and exchanged compliments he would hurry along.

The old colored servant waited long that evening. It was dark and he was hungry, and still he waited with the anxious horse. Knowing his master George as a punctual man, he was fearful of some unknown trouble. The planter, happening to see the old servant, took it upon himself to order Washington's horse put up for the night and the servant into comfortable quarters. He thought that "Washington was going to stay for ye night."

Washington did indeed stay, for he had found the widow Custis most charming and had difficulty in leaving her even for a moment. The sun was high the next day before he pulled himself together to continue on his belated mission. But his courtship was most successful, for in May, 1758, his diary bears a record, "One engagement ring, 2 pounds 16 shillings."

One hundred and sixty-eight years ago, January 17, they were married.

Dick Hayes from Lay Dam was breezing around town Tuesday afternoon, pushing (or pulling) manfully on the back end of a great big cigar. As he entered Alred Drug Store he looked every bit as important as his brother, Senator Jack.

From the way things were clicking around Judge Smoot's courtroom Tuesday, one might be justified in predicting that the crowded condition at the Chilton County jail may be relieved by the end of this week. But if they do clean it out, it will not be many days before Sheriff Gillespie will have it filled up again, I reckon.

WHAT DOES MINING NEED?

The argument over the proposed copper tariff must be decided on the basis of facts, not on the basis of local prejudice or political expediency.

Mining is an essential industry, and if its future prosperity depends on protection from cheap-labor foreign importations, it should be given that protection. But if, on the other hand, mining can return to normal without tariff restrictions that is the better course.

At present, the effort of the copper producers themselves to adjust supply to demand is a good augury for the future. It may be that wise production procedure, coupled with all possible aid from state governments, is what mining principally needs.

BUSINESS TO SOLVE UNEMPLOYMENT

A new economic era, with business assuming the responsibility for unemployment, is dawning, in the opinion of Colonel Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's Emergency Committee for Employment.

"Arising out of this and earlier depressions," Colonel Woods says, "we have the beginning of an era in which business management realizes its responsibility toward the continuous employment of the producing unit, which is also the consuming unit. Business men know today that their employees are also their customers."

He made it clear that plans of individual corporations for relieving or preventing unemployment so far had been "experimental," but expressed the belief that while no common plan had emerged, "common principles are beginning to be apparent."

It may be that the depression will prove the means of developing an industrial consciousness that will prevent unemployment in the future.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

It is the favorite argument of many of our internationalists who propose placing Uncle Sam in the League of Nations or the League Court, that we must join immediately in order to prevent another world catastrophe similar to the great war. They start from the assumption that the world is again about to be plunged into bloody strife and that it is only our entrance into the game of European politics which can prevent this. Now the League of Nations and the World Court are already going concerns. It is true that Uncle Sam remains on the outside, wisely as most Americans think, and it is equally true that he is now, as he has always been, ready and willing to cooperate for world peace. Just how our mere entrance into a world political organization will prevent the outbreak of hostilities, these internationalists do not take the trouble to explain. As we can cooperate just as well if not better on the outside than within, there must be some other reason. Perhaps they feel that if Uncle Sam were once tied up securely he would be bound to use his army and navy in the "preservation" of peace. If this is the reason for our entry inside the internationalist portals, then most Americans will continue to believe that it is better to remain on the outside.

As a matter of fact our getting ourselves mixed up in foreign entanglements would not tend to assure the peace of the world, but rather to assure more troubles for Uncle Sam. It seems to be a sort of unreasoning belief on the part of internationalists that we can do nothing unless securely bound by some political arrangement. And yet it is a matter of fact that during the past ten years all great constructive steps for peace have been taken outside the League of Nations and outside the World Court. The disarmament agreements, the Lacarno Pact and the Kellogg treaty are examples. It is true too, that there has been much dissension inside the League and that the members themselves seem not to regard it with suspicion rather than with confidence.

Speaking of international agreements outside the League and the League Court, the recent agreement on the production and marketing of sugar is a good example. This agreement on the limitation of output, in the interest of the sugar industry everywhere, was brought about under the leadership of an American, Mr. Thomas L. Chadbourne, of New York. It has brought about in voluntary conferences, resulting in a voluntary agreement, entirely outside the League and the League Court. The agreement was only reached because there were no entangling rules and commitments to start with. No international political organization had anything to do with it. Compare his constructive accomplishment on the one hand with what the League of Nations has been trying to do during the past ten years in the way of disarmament and control of narcotics and human slavery, removal of trade barriers and so on. The League's efforts have accomplished little while the voluntary conference under Mr. Chadbourne has met with success. Here is something for the League advocates to study over. As the Chicago Tribune recently well said:

"Europe recognizes the importance of the League. When Europe wishes to accomplish something it flees from League auspices, as it did in the organization of the international bank. America outside the League can accomplish much, as Mr. Charbourn, Mr. Taylor, General Dawes, Mr. Young and others have shown in bringing about international agreements. If we were in the League we should be impelled to use that agency of frustration for adjusting our international contracts with loss to ourselves and incidentally to the rest of the world. Professional altruists who are forever complaining that our potential influence for good in a wicked world is being dissipated because we will not go to Geneva might well consider how little the League has done and how much has been accomplished outside the league, largely through American efforts."

NECESSARY FORESTS

Nothing so ages a nation as denudation of its timber lands. Forests and virility of a country go hand in hand. The process of depletion of forests is not necessarily a long one, nor are the effects long delayed. Without replacement of forests by the federal and state governments and private land owners, the United States would suffer the decay of great areas, such as are found in the river valleys of China, the arid stretches of Syria and vast regions of Asia where one-time flourishing nations are now but a name.

Intelligent human beings have not yet fully gauged the significance of the fact that man is first an animal, with zoological classification, before he is a builder of cities and states. Man can advance no further than his physical frame will permit unless he shall make good by conserving society as a whole. Zoologically considered the race and not the superior individual is what counts in the perpetuity of life.

It is this physical basis of mankind and civilization that must be kept in mind. In no direction is the warning more needed than in respect to perpetuation of forests.

Man long lived close to the forests and in his present highly civilized state he cannot thrive without them. He needs them to purify and enrich the air he breathes. He needs their products. They assure him an adequate and constant water supply. And these are not the only gifts of the tree to humanity. Take away the tree and where would mankind play and feast its eyes?—Lynn Evening Item.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

The bureau of standards is cooperating with the Ames Agricultural College of Iowa to find methods of utilizing one hundred million tons of corn-stalks that go to waste every year. They are meeting with some success. One factory in Iowa is now manufacturing considerable quantities of insulating board from these cornstalks, for which neighboring farmers receive ten dollars a ton.

THE CINDER PILE

(By The Sweeper)

Not much dust a-stirring around the ole Cinder Pile this week. What with the rain, and The Sweeper busy at other things than sweeping.

The Sweeper spent some time a few days ago over in The Central City, Selma. We had about reached the conclusion that times were harder here in Chilton than most places we had been, but we found the folks over in Selma talking hard times with about as much enthusiasm as we do here in Chilton and Clanton.

We are still unable, however, to see wherein the people generally have such a kick coming. We have come in contact with no actual cases of starvation, although we have heard of some. Everyone we have seen and talked with state they are having at least two fair meals a day and enough clothes to keep them reasonably comfortable, and this is more than they have had in a number of situations in the past.

Personally, The Sweeper has done no work worthy of mention since last October, but we are still able to smile and look for the rainbow, which we feel will certainly appear on the eastern sky of business before very long.

As we have said before, let's all forget this "hard times" business and get behind old Beck and begin to grow us some collard greens and taters and the world will soon look rosy to us all.

And, besides, if you just will persist in being hungry and cold, and can get the proper authorities to see and feel the same way you do, maybe you can get a little of that $20,000,000 President Hoover has just authorized with his signature to the appropriation bill, to help you out.

After various delays and hold-ups in the Senate Judiciary Committee, that body of gentlemen have at last confirmed the appointment of Hon. Charles B. Kennamer as Federal Judge for the Middle District of Alabama, succeeding to the place made vacant by the death more than a year ago of Judge Henry D. Clayton.

'S-funny thing, how people will come to town to hear damaging evidence against some of their neighbors and friends who have been caught in the snares of the law. Regardless of how much we all dislike to be hailed into court on some charge we may have committed, we always are eager to witness the other fellow's discomfiture under similar circumstances.

Did you ever take occasion to observe the "melting pot" in the postoffice lobby while No. 9's mail is being put up in the mornings? There is the place where you can get an eye full of the general habits of the people, and hear opinions voiced on the current events that you never thot of before. You get a slant on life by observing the patrons and listening to their conversations here that it is nigh onto impossible to get from any other source. Take a few minutes the next time you visit the postoffice at this time of day to do a little observing and we will wager the rubber tooth picks that you will learn something that will make you start thinking.

The weather man just about as well to close up shop so far as Chilton County is concerned. We have a source of information right here in our county that has the weather departments at Birmingham and Montgomery beaten all hollow. Stop the road machines for a while and we will have fair, warm and beautiful weather. Start them out over the roads and it will cloud up and be raining in less than a week anytime. The Court of Commissioners stopped the machines for a while and we have had the prettiest spell of weather The Sweeper has ever witnessed at this time of the year for working the roads. But lo, as soon as they started the machines again, what has happened? Rain of course. Beat that for weather prognostications if you can.

But while the road machines lost some mighty fine weather for dressing the roads, the farmers have certainly been "making hay" while the sun shone. No doubt, taking the county as a whole, there has been more farm work accomplished during the month of January and the first two weeks of February this year than has been done at this time of year in many moons. This spirit which the farmers have shown in getting their farm work started is most commendable indeed. If they will be as determined to raise something to eat and less of the "Fleecy Staple," as they are to get going, all will be well with them when the harvest moon shines in November.

Wonder what has become of those old-fashioned "log rollin's" that used to be so plentiful about this time of the year? Those were the good old days. Good fellowship among the neighbors—a spirit of helpfulness—the women folks all getting together and cooking up a feast fit for a king, and the whole thing wound up in fine style at night with one of those long-to-be-remembered "breakdown" dances or corn "shuckin's" where the first fellow to find a red ear, got to kiss the purtiest gal in the crowd. Let's have a revival of these good old times, and lots of red corn!

We think we will get out now and get to sweeping, and maybe some place among the cinders we will find an idea which we can use for our chat next week. So long!—The Sweeper.

EUROPEAN WAGES

The Minister of Economics of Germany has made public on an ordinance ordering a ten per cent reduction on all trust produced goods, comprising 45 per cent of all goods produced in Germany. This followed a recent decree authorizing a reduction in wages. The cartels affected by this offer are under semi-governmental control. It will be noted that the effect of governmentally directed price and wage reductions in Europe is to negative the protective features of our tariff. By reducing both prices and wages the effect of such changes may be absorbed, but lower prices of goods decrease the amount of ad valorem tariff to be paid on exports to the United States, and also increase the competitive pressure of these goods in our market. Reductions in wages have also been decreed in Italy, producing the same effect. The wage level is dropping all over continental Europe. No effort to maintain the wage level in the United States will be successful unless steps are taken to neutralize the effect of such wage reductions abroad in industries engaged in export trade.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw—and Some He Saw Not.

"Plant More Oats and Follow With Hay or Lespedeza, Dennis Advises." This is the heading of an article which appeared in The Union-Banner the last two weeks, written by Mr. J. N. Dennis. One of the little boys in Mr. Dannis's family, after reading the heading of the article, said: "Mother, who is Lespedeza Dennis?" This, it seems to me, is another very impressive example of the importance of punctuation marks. This little boy, of course, has not advanced far enough to appreciate the big meaning sometimes of a little thing like a comma.

This reminds me of a time several years ago when there was an election. A place was roped off by the side of the courthouse, and the voting was going on under the shade of the big oak trees. Uncle Charley Plier went inside the ropes, was handed a great long ballot, which he scanned up and down very leisurely. Then walking to the rope he touched Uncle Hugh Foshee on the arm and said: "Oh, Hugh, come here and help me a little bit. I don't just exactly understand all these comets and periods."

Dewey Rockett hatched up a little scheme last week to test out the power of advertising in The Union-Banner. When I saw him Monday morning, he was very ready to say it works. "It got results for me in the plow line business Saturday," he said. "We sold about 175 pair of plow lines in response to the advertisment which we put in last week's paper." It has been proven time and time again that if a business man has something he wants to sell, and will make the price attractive, an advertisement in the Dear Old Banner will get the answer. Try it if you don't believe it.

Our townsman, C. Fenn Jones, accompanied by Mrs. Jones and Grover Walker, went to Rockford last Saturday, to attend the funeral of Dr. Julius Jones. For the past half a century Dr. Jones has been a very active, prominent figure in the life of Coosa County. His was a mission of mercy, to relieve the suffering and afflicted. He served his fellowman faithfully and well. He was one of those good old time doctors who did his best at every call, whether he got paid for it or not. His memory will be cherished forever by those who learned to love him.

Here is some good hog news from Dale County. On January 28th 266 farmers sold cooperatively 1,939 head of hogs for $19,159.83. The hogs filled 25 cars, or almost an entire train. I do not know just what rate of profit there is in the hog business, but it is a safe bet that the farmers of Dale County are making money out of this business. Chilton County should be doing something of that kind.

MORAL ECHOES

By D. W. Haskew

I was invited to preach to a congregation of colored people. A country store was near, and it being cotton picking time, the negroes were able to buy chewing gum. On entering the stand I looked over the sea of black faces and I never saw as much chewing going on at any one time before. They chewed with their mouths open, and it seemed that I was looking into the darkness where there were hundreds of lightning bugs. Sometimes the whole audience would seemingly hit the gum at the same time, and then they would get scattered and it was a come and go process. Well, I have seen white folks do that same way. Chewing gum, like a dog, should never go to church.

When I was young in the ministry I felt called upon to rebuke any one who misbehaved during the services in a church. One night a drunk man came into the audience and started to talking out loud to a friend of his, and I proceeded to read the riot act to him. When the service was over the man rebuked made a rush for me, grabbed me in the collar, and then read the riot act to me. I thought that my time had come, as I could see fire in his eyes. Some kind brethren pulled him off. What a relief. On another occasion I was preaching in a country school building, and a grown young man amused himself by sticking pins into other young men about him. He would laugh and giggle. I gave him a piece of my mind. It tickled him the more to think that a preacher was noticing him. Then I gave him a double portion of my mind. When the service was over the boy's mother came to me weeping like a baby, and said: "Brother Haskew, I am sorry that you talked to my boy that way. He is not bright and does not know how to behave." Then I gave a treble portion of apology. Since meeting with those two experiences I rarely ever rebuke anyone for misbehaving in divine worship, for I am certain that they are either drunk or crazy.

I was holding a meeting and the house was filled with people—fathers, mothers, boys, girls and babies. About the midddle of the sermon a two-year old youngster set up a howl. I preached on for a moment, but I found that I had just as well be trying to preach against a sawmill. I hushed and left the audience to the yelling youngster. The mother paid no attention to the young fellow who was red in the face, and so finally I ventured to ask if she would please take the baby out until she could quiet it. When I said that to her, she jumped to her feet, grabbed the yelling boy, threw him under her arm and started down the aisle toward me. From the expression on her face I knew that she had decided that if I wanted the baby hushed that she would give me the job. She came right on toward the pulpit, but before she had reached it, I was backing up to a window. Well, she went by with her hip organ, and turned down the other aisle and on out at the door. I have forgotten whether I pronounced the benediction, or dismissed without one.

One of the greatest needs of today is church etiquette. We do not have to run away to California to find people who do not know how to act at church, or else they are nothing more than a blunder bus when they go to divine worship. Of all the places where we should be our best, and act our best, it is when we enter God's house. Our church buildings are the places where we worship God. No place in it should be a junk heap, no corner should be filled with rubbish, and no place left untidy. When we enter that house—the home of our God, the holy of holies in our community—we should do it reverently. God has given to us the great outdoor world in which to frolic, and in which to have our fun, and God intends that we should enjoy the sweep of nature; but when a church is built to His name, He reserves that as a place of worship. We do not believe in "Long-faced Religion," but we do believe in reverencing God's house. When Jesus entered the Temple at Jerusalem, He found that the Jews had defiled it with frolic and commerce, and His soul was stirred within Him. He drove out the Jews who had defiled it, saying: "My Father's house shall be a house of prayer." There is a fine art in church etiquette, and we should learn it and then practice it. We need to sit at the feet of the old Scotch Presbyterians and learn again the reverence that we should have for sacred things.

MRS. FLORENCE I. HUETT DIED

The hearts of the many friends of Mrs. Florence I. Huett of the Enterprise community were saddened and caused to break with grief and sadness on the account of her sudden death on February 9th, 1931.

Mrs. Huett was born in Coosa County, Alabama, February 6, 1878: Her parents being the late James Lawrence Neeley and Mrs. Mary J. Neeley.

Mrs. Huett did the wise thing in that of surrendering her soul and life to God when a young girl. She attached herself to old Olive Branch Baptist Church in Coosa County in her young childhood days and ever-thereafter lived an humble sacrificing life for Christ and though she be gone now to reap her reward, her life will still live on, and eternity only will be able to reveal the greatness of such a life as Mrs. Huett lived. She was of a kind and loving disposition. Carrying the very image of the Holy Nazarine in her expressions and was constantly seeking to serve the needy and to help the helpless, and to speak a comforting word to the sad.

In August of 1896 Mrs. Florence married the late James A. Huett and ever thereafter lived a true and devoted life to him until his demise in 1926, and since that time she has lived a lonely but cheerful and useful life in her old home in the Enterprise community, until on February 9th, 1931 when she was enjoying health and life with her children and friends and when death was least expected, the call came in a moment, in the twinkle of an eye, the grim reaper, death, came and wafted this great spirit and soul to the great beyond, there to dwell with the redeemed host of God, throughout eternity.

Mrs. Huett leaves four children, several grandchildren, several brothers and sisters, and a host of friends and near relatives to mourn her loss, and to all whom I would say, "Weep not for your loss is Heaven's gain, for Mrs. Florence is now in the hands of one who can care for her." Just emulate her life while here and you too will soon be permitted to enjoy the great blessedness we believe she is now enjoying.

One who knew and loved her.—J. Z. Mims.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

On last Sunday the Taylor family spent a most enjoyable day, it being the birthday of their father and grand father, T. G. Taylor. The Taylors and several of their friends gathered at the home of one son, Grady Taylor. Some went to Sunday School, but all were back by noon time. After which a bountiful dinner was served. Their father was seated at the head of the table and was presented with several nice and useful gifts. All the children were present but one. Games were played, and jolly conresation was carried on during the day.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Mims, Mr. and Mrs. Reedie Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Poole and son, Arthur Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Mc-Dowell and children, Carl and Delene, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Devaughn and children, Annie Pearl and Lamar, Mr. and Mrs. Ivy Blalock and children, Dorothy Nell and Thomas Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Jett Wyatt and sons, Osmond, Leonard and Odis, Mrs. Tom Wyatt and daughter, Eunice, Ola Mae Parrish, Mr. Horne, Clauton Poole of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Taylor and sons, Morris, Milton, and Edwin.

There were forty present. Everybody returned to their homes wishing their father many more years of happiness, and wishing they might have another day like that.—Mrs. Janie Blalock.

WOODS FIRES AND BOLL WEEVILS

In some sections of the south, farmers are still attempting to get rid of the boll weevil by burning their woods. In combating the boll weevil it seems to be the united opinion of experts on the subject that fence rows and ditch banks should be burned each year but in all cases fire should be kept out of the woods. The following statements of opinion and recommendatins from Federal and State authorities should be helpful:

Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chief, bureau of entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, says:

"It has come to the attention of the Bureau of Entomology that quite frequently cotton farmers practice fall or winter burning of forest cover for the purpose of destroying boll weevils in hibernation, thereby doing irreparable damage to forest reproduction. The Bureau of Entomology is in full accord with the Forest Service in the view that such practices should be discouraged. Indiscriminate forest burning is not recommended, as the loss out weighs the gain. This is due to the fact that weevils leaving the cotton field to enter hibernation concentrate immediately around the field and it is only in shelter immediately adjoining cotton fields that the population is heavy enough to warrant any winter cleanup measures. Consequently, we emphasize the the burning only of ditch banks, hedge rows and similar situations immediately adjoining the cotton fields and recommend most strongly against the burning over of woodlands."

Dr. R. W. Leiby, state entomologist, Raleigh, North Carolina, says:

"I do not consider that the burning over of wooded lands adjacent to old cotton fields has any value in the ultimate amunt of injury that may be caused by boll weevil the following season. Injury to the timber crop by fire is in all probability much greater than a possible small benefit by burning up a very few weevils that might die a natural death during the winter anyway. I think entomologists in general would agree to the above statement."

Dr. Haliard De La Parelle, former state entomologist, Atlanta, Georgia, says:

"The practice of burning over of forest lands should, in my opinion, be discouraged. It is our understanding that this practice is done not only to control the boll weevil but also to aid those men who gather the turpentine, in facilitating their movement through the forest and in lessening the danger from the attack of snakes which might be concealed in the grass. As far as the benefit from this burning in killing the boll weevil is concerned, we do not feel that the destruction of young trees is in any measure compensated by the destruction of the boll weevil. While we have no exact investigation data upon the amount of boll weevils hibernating in the forest grasses it is our opinion, and also that of other authorities, that the relative number is very small."

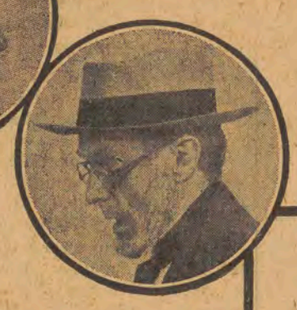
"We are doing all that we can to discourage the burning over of timberland and are glad to cooperate with you in this matter."

Mr. E. C. Westbrook, cotton and tobacco specialist, State College of Agriculture, Athens, Georgia, says:

"At one time a great many farmers believed that by burning the forests in the early spring that they could destroy a great many weevils before they emerged from their winter quarters. Thorough investigation made it absolutely certain that only a very small number of boll weevils are killed in this way. The damage to the forest very greatly exceeds any possible benefit that could be derived from burning the forest. Most weevils are too securely embedded in old stumps and dead trees, and in the moss, to be effected by fire."

Dr. George A. Maloney, field crop insect investigations, Tallulah, Louisiana, says:

"We deprecate very much the practice of some farmers of burning over their woodlands every winter with the idea of destroying boll weevils. The weevil does not pass the winter in large numbers close enough to the ground for the burning to be effective. The damage caused by such fires inflicts greater harm than would be possible by the few weevils which perchance might be destroyed by fire."



TEACHER TRAINING COURSE

It is understood that a county-wide program of teachers training in the Baptist Sunday schools of the Unity and Chilton Associations has been planned to begin about April 12th. The courses offered will be under the direction of trained instructors from the Sunday school Department of the Baptist State Board.

A number of central locations for the courses will be chosen over the county so that every Sunday School will have access to the places.

The decision to hold these training schools was reached last Saturday at the meeting of the Executive Committees of the Chilton and Unity Associations held at Clanton Baptist church.

KUDZU IS GOOD HAY AND GRAZING CROP

Kudzu for hay, for grazing, and for soil improvment is being recommended by the experiment station of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn. The recommendation is based upon the fact that Kudzu is more promising than any other perennial plant being grown in Alabama for hay and grazing. It withstands drouths exceptionally well.

To acquaint farmers with facts about kudzu the experiment station has published a new bulletin on it. The authors are R. Y. Bailey, assistant agronomist, and E. L. Mayton, assistant in agronomy. It contains a vast amount of general information about kudzu and also specific facts about research studies with it to date.

During a 6-year experiment at Auburn kudzu produced an average yield of more than two tons of hay per acre without fertilizer, Mr. Bailey and Mr. Mayton report. When used to enrich soil a crop of kudzu plowed under in 1919 increased the average yield of two crops of sorghum hay by 2,536 pounds per acre; 4 crops of corn by 19,3 bushels per acre; and 7 crops of oats by 7.9 bushels per acre.

The flavor of kudzu hay is relished by livestock. The nutritive value of it is high. It is relished as a grazing crop.

To get started with this crop Mr. Bailey and Mr. Mayton advise farmers to buy enough crowns to make a small planting from which crowns can be obtained for planting larger areas. This method requires more time but very little money is involved.

Contrary to a general opinion, they say that kudzu is not a pest. It may be eradicated by heavy grazing followed by plowing. At Auburn no trouble was encountered in preventing its spread to adjacent land over a period of 25 years.

FARM INVENTORY HAS REAL VALUE

An annual inventory of the farm is seen by Prof. B. F. Alvord, of the department of agricultural economics of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, as "one of the most valuable tasks a farmer can perform." It enables the farmer to know of his activities during the year, and it also gives his valuable information to be used in a business way, he said. Such an inventory should be made at the beginning of the year when farmers ordinarily have plenty of time for work of this kind.

"Such an inventory," he continued, "is just a classified list of the farm property with the estimated value of it. If taken every year it shows from one year to the next how much the farmer's net worth has increased or decreased.

"A farmer may feel that he has done well because he has money at the end of the year and he may feel that he has done poorly because he is short on money at the end of another year.

show that he sold produets' during one year that were produced in an-

A carefully taken inventory may other year. In this way the more successful year may have been the year in which money was scarce.

"An inventory statement showing the assets and liabilities is appreciated by bankers. A banker is in a better position to lend money if the inventory shows the farm has, for example, $200 worth of hogs nearly ready for sale, $200 worth of chickens that will be laying soon; $400 worth of cattle that are producing cream for sale; and $200 worth of cotton seed; and that the farm is worth $6,000 above any mortgages, than if he merely knows that the farm and livestock are worth $7,000. The inventory statement tends to show not only that the farmer can repay the loan, but it helps show when he can repay it."

POULTRY

CHICKS NEED A RATION LIBERAL IN QUANTITY AND OF PROPER QUALITY

While you may not expect to brood any chicks for several weeks or more, you no doubt have been thinning about it. There are many things, such as cleaning the brood house, checking over the brooder stove, ordering the baby chicks, selecting the ration, and the like, that one must do before the chicks arrive.

Few poultryment fully appreciate how much depends upon the first feed that baby chicks receive or they would exercise greater care in the selction of th ration. A chick starter to encourage rapid, sound growth and keep the chicks in good health, besides being easily digested, must be rich in available proteins, minerals and vitamins. A good portion of the feed must also be of such a nature so as to furnish both heat and energy.

The chick must not only have a sufficient supply of protein in the ration, but it must be of proper quality. A chick ration where all of the protein is supplied by the plant life is not inducive to growth or muscle building as is a ration which has part of the protein coming from an animal origin.

Possibly no part of a chick ration is so often neglected as minerals. Practically all feeds contain some mineral matter, but the average one is deficient in meeting the need of the chick. Often slow growth or unoven development in a flock may be traced to a lack of minerals.

A ration may be correct in every respect, yet if certain of the vitamins are missing, the chicks cannot grow. Vitamins A, B and D are very vital in the chick starter.

Practically all chick rations have an ample supply of carbohydrates and fat, but there is a difference of birds developed, depending on the kinds of cargohydrates used. Oatmeal, for instance, develops an unusually fine quality of flesh and fat.

It is quite apparent that the baby check demands a ration composed of a variety of ingredients combined in correct proportions. To make sure that hte chick gets just what it needs, select a good commercial chick starter. It will eliminate worry and insure rapid, economical growth.

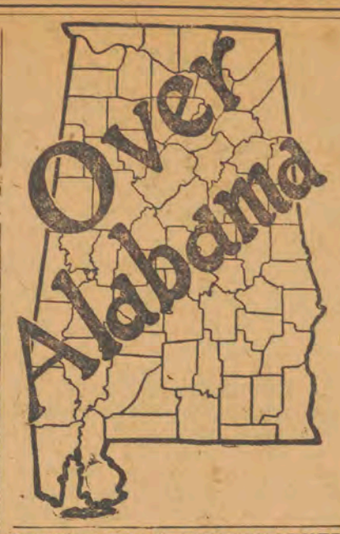
CHICKS NEED A HARD ACID-INSOLUBLE GRIT

There has been a difference of opinion as to the necessity of grit and types of grit to feed. Years ago poultrymen fed a granite grit; then scientists discovered the value of direct sunlight in the assimilation of minerals, and in their eagerness to supply an abundance of calcium in the ration recommended limestone grit. The real purpose for feeding grit was forgotten.

Limestone grit is readily soluble in acid. With the presence of hydrochloric acid in the stomach, a limestone grit is dissolved before it can be of any assistance in breaking down of the feed so the digestive juices can work on it properly. Lack of proper grinding material is apt to result in certain types of paralyses, diarrhea, toe picking, cannibalism, feather eating, slow growth and poor feathering.

Chicks need a hard, rough, acid-insoluble, granite grit. If you are not sure of the kind of grit you are feeding, put a few pieces of it in a glass of vinegar. If, after a few minutes, bubbles continue to rise, it is limestone and should not be used as grit.

If you want the chicks to grow rapidly and evenly, be well feathered, and not eat each other up, keep granite grit available. By sprinkling grit over the mash each morning the chicks are sure to get what they need in the way of grit.



BUTLER FORESTRY DEVELOPING

Butler County is forging to the front in forestry. For some time forward looking citizens of the County have felt that local participation in the program of the State and Federal governments for the use of otherwise idle lands for timber growing purposes was the natural solution of a very serious problem.

At a recent special meeting of the County Board of Commissioners a resolution was passed committing the County to join with the State and Federal Governments in such measures as may tend toward the promotion of the growth and safety of the forests in the County, and appropriating a stipulated sum to be deposited with the State Commission of Forestry as the County's portion of the expense in keeping up the work begun by the State in 1924.

The Federal government cooperates with the local communities through the State Commission of Forestry. Since the United States provides a very large proportion of the funds used in forest fire protection and other phases of forestry, it very properly insists that the work be carried on in as efficient a manner as possible and that full value be received for all money expended.

COLLINS CHAPEL SINGING

One of the best singings of the season was held at Collins Chapel Church last Sunday afternoon, conducted by the United Singing Society. Prof. Akins I. The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive

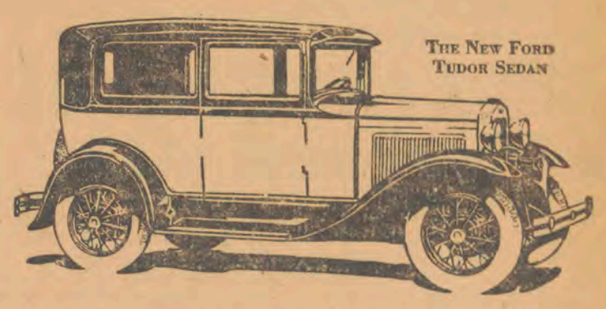
Low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation mean a distinct saving to every purchaser



THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner . . . low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

The reasons for this economy are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, the new Ford is an outstanding example of fine craftsmanship in automobile engineering.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact. . . . It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

THORSBY SECTION

(S. E Norton, Manager)

The Lutheran Ladies social for February will be held at the home of Mrs. Bosworth Thursday afternoon of this week.

Arrangements are being made for a series of meetings at the Thorsby Congregational Church, March 5th, to 15th inclusive. It is expected that Rev. James Davenport of Daisey, Tennessee will be the principal speaker. Bro. Davenport needs no instruction to the people of Thorsby among whom he lived for five years as a beloved pastor of this church, and he has made visits here from time to time for the purpose of conducting such meetings. The church people feel that they are fortunate in having him with them again in this work. Since Mr. Davenport proved himself a pastor to all Thorsby people, there are few who will need to be urged to attend these meetings.

Next Sunday, February 22nd will be the regular time for morning and evening services at the Thorsby Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gray, Mrs. Relius Franklin with Peggy Mims and Florence, of Jemison, spent Sunday in Prattville visiting Mrs. Gray's mother.

They are shipped in insulated boxes which he makes and packs by a method devised by Mrs. Norton. They carry in perfect condition, Within the past week shipments have been made by parcel post to Brattlesboro, Idaho; Valley City, North Dakota; Detroit, Michigan; Belle Foch, South Dakota and Denver Colorado, and many other places less distant. In every case so far heard from, they arrived in perfect condition.

On Lincoln's birthday Thursday morning at chapel members of the Junior class had charge of the program under the direction of Mr. Maddox. Oliver Lyon presided. Poems about Lincoln by Edwin Markham were read by Pauline Pool, Mary Ruth Nix, Helen Diefenderfer, Ruby Connatser, Albert Mims, Oliver Lyon and Bill Gray.

Friday morning at chapel Miss Fairbanks was in charge of the program in which different languages were represented. A few verses from the Old Testament were read by Mr. Butler in Hebrew, the original language that it was written in. Mr. King read some verses from the new Testament in Greek, the original language in which that was written. Miss Leech read the Lord's prayer in Sioux Indian. The Latin classes sang in Latin a round duc, duc, remose, duc. Mr. Maddox read a french fable and the Faculty trio, Miss Arthur, Miss McKee and Mr. Maddox sang in French "Au Claire de Lune." The boy who wins will receive $5 in gold and the girl who wins a like amount. Everyone is invited. Admission 15 cents for students and 25 cents for those not students in the Public School or the Institute.

The play, "Two Days to Marry." was presented last Saturday night, February 14th, at the public school auditorium and was a grand success. $39.20 was taken in. The characters in play were all well adapted to their parts, and each part was given with credit to the player. The play was put on by the Eastern Star, and Mrs. P. M. Smith, who coached the play, wishes to thank every one who helped to furnish articles necessary for the stage; also for the large attendance. It is expected now that the play will be repeated this week, Friday in Jemison.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Weldon of Clanton, who have been located in Missouri for several months, were visitors at the home of Mrs. R. M. Smith last Wednesday. Ruth Maddox, their daughter who has been staying with Mrs. Smith, returned to Clanton with them, where she is attending high school.

Mr. J. M. Bosworth has been on the sick list for several days.

Miss Ruth Gerald of Birmingham spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. H. M. Gerald.

Mr. C. A. Peterson made a business trip to Birmingham Monday. He was accompanied home by Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Peterson of Detroit, Michigan. Wilbur will be remembered by his many friends here.

POLITICS FOR RURAL SCHOOLS

"Three or four local bills providing for the popular election of county superintendents of schools rather than for appointments by boards of education have been introduced in the 1931 legislature," says President J. M. Burnett, of the Alabama Education Association, who is also the efficient city superintendent of schools for Tuscaloosa. "Severel of these measures were proposed in 1923 and others in 1927; and some of them became law because of the practice of legislative courtesy which allows local measures to go on through the law-making mill unless organized sentiment from counties affected can find some means of strong expression."

The school people of Alabama and of the nation, continues Mr. Burnett, are almost unanimously in favor of the board of directors system now in force in three-fourths of the counties, which provides popular selection of a board and then appointment of all executives by this body which will have time for consideration of the professional claims of all applicants for position, which will have the entire world as a field for seeking the best talent, and which is empowered to terminate contracts at will. This is the system of business management universally adopted by great corporations and by all enterprises which seek greatest results from the expenditure of money. This system has been proved to have certain advantages which cannot be gained through any more direct handling on the part of stockholders.

"Why do you think," asks the A. E. A. leader, "that all American cities and towns got rid of the elective system many decades ago? Why don't the people who start agitating for direct election of county school men propose some bills for city superintendents also? The reason is really quite plain, it is well known that city voters do not care to have their children's educational welfare thrown out into a partisan political battle, so they interpose a city council and a board of education between the political arena and the choosing of help for the intimate task of handling childish minds. The city superintendent of schools has the same job as the county superintendent; but his patrons have learned to have their politics fought out before they get very close to the children. I really cannot see that it is very complimentary to rural people for laws recognized as a backward step educationally to continue coming up for their consideration. It is my impression that nearly always the agitation is started by some person who wants a position for which he knows he cannot qualiy under the close scrutiny by a board."

Again, why should not the president of the University of Alabama, the president of Auburn, of Alabama College at Montevallo, the presidents of normal colleges, be selected by popular vote as well? Each of these officials plans for the expenditure of as much public money as any county superintendent in Alabama except one (the Jefferson County superintendent). Each of them has an executive job dealing with the instruction of students just as the superintendent. Why not limit the choice of these officials to some local men of popular type?

The average voter, if suddenly asked, "don't you think the people ought to elect the county superintendent?" will say, "Why, sure;" but his opinion is not generally such after he considers the history of the position and the facts concerning it. He will see that not the superintendent but the county board is the organization which corresponds in power to the Probate Judge and other county officers elected directly and given the authority to appoint clerks and other executives. The board is elected directly and is powerless unless it can "hire or fire" superintendents, teachers, truck drivers, and all other employees at will. If the people want to fight over their schools, they should certainly keep their contests at least one full step away from the head of the teaching job. Furthermore, the time is past when education can be considered a local or county affair. The state furnishes through its treasury too large a portion of the funds to allow local acts to impair the effectiveness of expenditure. The state legislature should set one method for handling the main details of Alabama public schools; and there is no matter more important than the providing of professionally trained, educational experts for the vital task of shaping county school policy and of leading our 17,000 teachers in their task. In this connection, political contests should be taboo.

"Nearly every one believes in expert evidence. If any proponent of popular election of school men in Alabama will write to twelve leading educational authorities in America and get even one of them to recommend the political campaign plan for selection of superintendents, I will permanently hush further comment upon this subject."—J. M. Burnett, Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Some needed repairs will be made to the building, a new coat of paint put on, and everything arranged for a neat and comfortable place for the administration of the county school business.

The office of the County welfare department in charge of Mrs. Stapp will also be moved. Mrs. Stapp has been given choice of the present quarters of the Superintendent of education in the courthouse, or rooms in the Potts building. She has not yet announced which she will take.

The grounds around the Potts building will be improved and beautified. The old barns back of the lot will be torn down. All in all, the looks of the place will be improved a great deal when the present plans are completed.

JUDGE REYNOLDS SPOKE TO THE MACON FARMERS

We clip from the Tuskegee News the following report of an address which was recently delivered by Judge L. H. Reynolds, of Clanton, to a meeting of farmers of Macon County, at Tukegee:

The principal address was delivered by Judge L. H. Reynolds, of Chilton County. His address dealt with the subject of "What Diversified Farming Has Done for Chilton County."

Judge Rynolds said, "Thirty years ago we had one bank in Chilton County, with $100,000 in deposits. Six per cent of this belonged to the farmers. Now we have six banks with deposits of about $800,000, and sixty per cent of this belongs to the farmers.

"Our farmers make money by growing poultry, watermelons, peaches, strawberries, dewberries, and other diversified products, in addition to cotton.

"Chilton County has a population of 23.000, and they are good people. Our County officials have determined to be as generous as the law allows in this time of need. Fifty thousand dollars will be deposited from county funds, in a bank on a four per cent basis of return to the county. This will help the bank to give farmers the help they need in making their crops this year.

"The distribution of $11,000 already and another $5,000 of money paid for working the county roads has had a wonderful effect in Chilton County. The people of our county are better satisfied and better situated than the average of today."

Charles B. Kennamer Is Confirmed For Bench Vacated By Death of Judge Clayton

Washington, Feb. 20.—The Senate today confirmed the nomination of Charles B. Kennamer to be judge in the Middle and Northern Districts of Alabama.

The appointment and confirmation of Charles B. Kennamer gives the Middle District of Alabama the first Republican Federal Judge since the death Oct. 1, 1901, of Judge John B. Bruce, who was succeeded by Judge Thomas G. Jones. Judge Jones was followed by Judge Henry D. Clayton, who retired in December, 1929, a few days before his death.

Judge Kennamer, as he will now be designated for the remainder of his life, is serving as U. S. District Attorney at Bimingham and has cases set through Feb. 28, it was learned yesterday. It is understood that as soon as he can dispose of these cases he will assume his duties as Federal Judge here, and doubtless will live in Montgomery.

Since the death of Judge Clayton the vacancy has been filled by appointment from time to time by Judge W. I. Grubb of Birmingham. Several terms of court have been held in the past 14 months, including two terms of the Federal Grand Jury. A full docket for both grand and trial juries is awaiting the new judge.

Grady Reynolds, U. S. District Attorney has prepared a number of indictments and states that as soon as Judge Kennamer is ready for a term of court here he will have his part of the work ready. It is his intention to ask for a term of the Grand Jury about March 9 if it is convenient for Judge Kennamer to hold the term at that time. More than 200 cases are awaiting the action of the Grand Jury and about 175 defendants indicted by 1930 Grand Juries await trial.

SINGING AT POPLAR SPRINGS WAS WELL ATTENDED ON LAST SUNDAY AFTERNOON

One was reminded of the annual Easter singing at Poplar Springs by the big crowd and large class of singers at that place last Sunday afternoon. The benches for the class were running over, and the rest of the house was jammed with attentive listeners.

The singing began at 2 o'clock and lasted until 4. About all of the directors were used, but it took rushing to get around. Two special numbers were used during the afternoon—one of which was a quartet by Profs. W. M. and O. L. Devaughn, L. T. Grant and I. D. Huett. The other was double-header, at it is often called, composed two people for each of the four parts. Both specials were well rendered and received with hearty applause from the audience and class.

Inasmuch as Easter Sunday comes this year on the first Sunday in April, in order that the annual Easter singing may be held at Poplar Springs, it was decided by the society that the meeting which would be regularly held at Coopers on the first Sunday in April be moved back to the fifth Sunday afternoon in March, and thus give a clear way for the annual Easter singing. It was also decided to extend to the United Singing society a special invitation to meet with us at Coopers the fifth Sunday afternoon in March.

The Central singers will meet next Sunday afternoon in regular session with the Concord class. Everybody is cordially invited.

Mrs. J. M. Curlee is in the Central Alabama Hospital where she will remain for a few days treatment.

AMERICAN LEGION WILL MEET MONDAY NIGHT

Post Commander, Joe Calloway, of Chilton County Post, American Legion, reminds all ex-service men that the regular meeting of the Post will be at the Courthouse next Monday night. All ex-soldiers are urged to come.

"I hope to have a visiting speaker from Montgomery," said Mr. Calloway, "who can tell us something interesting and valuable about the recent law passed in Congress providing for the payment of all ex-service compensation claims." Mr. Calloway expressed the belief that the payments which will be made under this law will be a great help to the ex-service men in this county and prove a decided stimulant to business conditions.

Chilton County Post meets regularly every first Monday night at the courthouse.

MILLER BORROWS FIVE MILLIONS

Bulk of Loan Negotiated In New York Will Go For Educational Program. Pay Teachers

The State of Alabama, through the First National Bank of Montgomery, Saturday afternoon completed arrangements for a loan of $5,000,000 for a period of six months. Correspondents of the First National Bank or New York agreed to the loan after a visit to the Chase National Bank there by officials of the First National Bank of Montgomery and a fiscal representative of the State.

The arrangements as entered into between the State of Alabama and the First National Bank provided for the certification of warrants and their payment up to $5,000,000 and at a rate of 4.5 per cent per annum, the certificated interest bearing warrants being redeemable by the State six months from the date of the loan. Money will be in hand next week for the certification of the $5,000,000 in warrants.

The temporary arrangement completed by the State will serve partially to relieve the financial embarrassment now being experienced by the State treasury due to the heavy deficit piled up by the previous administration. However, the relief is only partial at the present time as there are practically twice as many claims pending against the State as can possibly be paid by the $5,000-000 temporary loan.

Teachers to get Half

The bulk of the $5,000,000 which will be advanced toward the payment of State warrants will be used in carrying forward the educational program of the State. Practically half of it will go to teachers' salaries, approximately $1,000,000 being used to pay a certificated warrant issued by Gov. Graves in December, which money went to teachers' salaries and which will come due in the next few days. More than $1,-500,000 of the temporary loan will be used immediately to pay teachers their salaries since they were last paid.

A large portion of the temporary loan, after teachers, salaries are attended to, will go to maintenance of higher institutions of learing, the eleemosynary institutions such as the Insane Asylum at Tuscaloosa, to the Normal schools and to the common schools for running expenses. It is announced that no part of the temporary loan will be used to pay for school building construction. Pay ments for such work already done will be made as funds provided in the special trust fund taxes available for that purpose.

New law paved Way for Loan

Gov. Miller this week signed a bill just enacted by the Legislature authorizing a $250,000 loan contigent fund to be used by the Governor. It is from this fund that the interest will be paid on the temporary $5,-000,000 loan arranged for by the First National Bank of Montgomery through its New York correspondents.

Attorney General Thomas E. Knight Saturday rendered an opinion at the request of Gov. Miller to the effect that it is legal and proper for the Governor to use the $250.000 appropriation granted him in paying interest on certificated warrants.—Montgomery Advertiser.

JOHN CLARK DIED IN MONTGOMERY

Son of W. S. Clark Is Victim of Attack By Negro Gunman

John Clark, age 28 years, of Winona Avenue, Capitol Heights, Montgomery died Thursday night at a Montgomery hospital of bullet wounds received Tuesday, February 17, when attacked by three negroes on a Louisville and Nashville freight train, two miles north of Letohatchie. He was shot three times in the chest and shoulders. Another bullet grazed the head.

Clark, a former fireman of Montgomery, left that city Tuesday night with two boy friends, stating that they were going on a passenger train to Mobile to look for work, but later Clark was attacked by three negroes on a freight train. He was first asked to throw up his hands which he did and finding no money they demanded his overcoat, which he gave them. They walked back a few steps and then returned to him and demanded that he take off his shoes and socks. He hesitated to take them off telling them that he had no money in them. They shot four times then threw him off the train. Clark was picked up and later and carried to a Montgomery hospital, where his people were notified.

Shelby Weaver another victim of the negroes is reported improving at McKenzie, where he was carried after being shot, the same night that Clark was mortally wounded. One of the negroes was shot by police chief Murphy, of Greenville, while trying to steal a truck in that city.

Clark was an ex-service man of the World War. He had lived in Montgomery for some time. Surviving are his widow, parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Clark of Mountain Creek, two brothers, Mason and Ernest of Montgomery and Clyde of Mountain Creek, and one sister, Mrs. Flora Boone of Montgomery. Funeral services were held at the home at ten o'clock Saturday morning in Montgomery. The body was carried to Liberty church on the Birmingham highway for burial. The Leak Company in charge.

Annual Meeting For Old Folks, Preachers

Will Be Held At Friendship the Fifth Sunday In March

The annual old folks and ministers day will be held again this year at Friendship on the fifth Sunday in March, as was announced at church last Sunday night. Those who attended this service last year and the year before know something of what it will be, and we are sure that they will want to attend. All others have a cordial invitation—especially all ministers of any denomination and old people over 70 years of age.

Begin now to make your plans to come to Friendship the fifth Sunday in March and spend the day. More will be announced about this meeting later.

Rev. John Bean filled his regular appointment here Sunday and Sunday night. The attendance was fair Sunday at the 11 o'clock service, but was exceptionally good at the night service. Rev. Bean expresed himself as being well pleased with the crowd which came out to hear him at the 7 o'clock service. And we might say in the way of comment that both of Bro. Bean's sermons were excellent. One man from Clanton who heard Rev. Bean's sermon Sunday night asked me Tuesday morning: "How long do you folks expect to keep that man over there?" The answer came: "We expect to keep him at least for some time yet." He then said: "The reason I asked is that churches do not often keep pastors very long who preach as straight and as fearless as Bean did Sunday night. He did some real preaching."

Rev. Bean has about agreed to remain over in the community between the fourth and fifth Sundays in March, so as to be present at the old folks and ministers meeting on the fifth Sunday. If he does and the weather permits, it is expected that he will preach at the church every night during the week. However, further announcement will be made if this fully materializes.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

SUMMER PLANS AT AUBURN ANNOUNCED

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 23.—Monday, June 8, has been named as the opening day for the 1931 summer session at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The session will be divided into two terms, the first which will continue six weeks of five days per week, and the second will run for five weeks six days per week, as announced by Dean Zebulon Judd, director.

At the end of the summer session, August 22, a special commencement will be held and degrees conferred by President Bradford Knapp upon those entitled to them. Seventy-nine degrees were conferred at the end of the 1930 summer session.

As usual, summer work at Auburn will be a combination of regular work according to Dean Judd. All divisions of the college will be functioning. Last year 329 courses were offered by a faculty of 129 professors, instructors and assistants and fully as many courses will be offered this year.

During the summer session college students will continue their regular courses and several special groups will be served, including teachers who wish extension, renewal or issuance of certificates; normal school graduates and other teachers who wish credit toward college degrees; and other groups. High school graduates may enter college at the summer session with a view to graduating in three years.

Special attention will be given to graduate work as was done last year when 300 students were in the graduate division.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY AT VERY LOW COST

Auburn, Ala. Feb. 23.—In connection with the "live at home" movement being sponsored in Alabama, Miss Helen Kennedy, extension nutritionist at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, has prepared suggestions on how to feed a family properly at minimum cost.

For health and for sufficient energy, said Miss Kennedy, the daily diet for each member of the farm family should include one pint of milk for each adult and one quart of milk for each child.

For the remainder of the daily diet she names five servings of vegetables and fruits, two servings of vegetable other than potatoes or dried legumes, one leafy vegetable, two servings of fruits (raw fruit, or vegetable or canned tomatoes daily), or one or more servings of whole grains, bread or breakfast food, two servings of any two of eggs, cheese, flesh foods, or dried peas and beans, and six to eight glasses of fluid.

Most of these foods can be produced on the farm, Miss Kennedy said. In fact, a home garden properly managed will supply a great many of them. This is an economic necessity every year and especially under present conditions when food supply is inadequate, due to dry weather last year, Miss Kennedy said.

Ferrac is Now on Sale Here For First Time

Natures Marvelous Prescription Unchanged by Man at all Drug Stores

The development of Ferrac reads more like a story from Arabian Nights than a modern business achievement, fascinating in its full detail that cannot be given in its entirety here. It comes from a deposit near Greenville, Alabama, that is unique. From this deposit kept securely locked by mother nature between the eternal hills for hundreds of thousands of years, come the mineral contents of this remarkable compound. Among the constitutents are two in combination that make a chemical marvel. The greatest labratories with the brightest minds in chemistry cannot combine them, yet mother nature placed them in the Greenville deposit in perfect combination. Hundreds of people from the United States and Canada have visited Greenville to be treated by this remarkable product and have gone away as living advertisements of its efficacy. Requests for the product have come from prince and pauper, and it has been sold in practically every section of the United States and foreign countries through power of merit alone, and with the expenditure of practically no money for advertising or other promotion up to the present time. Modern business has learned nature's secret and has taken it from twenty five feet beneath the surface of the earth and put it into a modern package to aid in its perfect functioning the most wonderful machine in the world, the human body.

Ferrac is a wonderful combination of a large number of mineral salts of which magnesium, calcium and the sulphates of iron are an important part. Without alcohol, opiates, roots herbs, or drugs of any kind as harmless as the driven snow but seemingly with almost no limit to its powers. It is daily overcoming ailments that have completely baffled all man-made medicines and the treatments tried. For constipation, stomach troubles, gastritis, kidney disorders, anemia high blood pressure, gall bladder ailments and kindred troubles, no matter how complicated or how long standing, count no case hopeless until y ouhave first tried natures own prescription to which man has added nothing and taken nothing from.

Ferrac is on sale at all drug stores or if your druggist cannot supply you, order from the Greenville Products Co., Greenville, Ala., a bottle will be sent to you upon the receipt of the price of $1.00 per bottle.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Coal production in Alabama increased approximately 95,000 tons in December over November.

On January 1, 1931, savings deposits in Alabama banks were estimated at $48,033,600, an increase of 4.7 per cent over the same date a year ago. This discovery brought from economists of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute the comment that "the people of Alabama in spite of the depression, have not been consuming their savings to any appreciable degree."

A Clewiston, Florida, dispatch to the press of February 8 says: "Fifteen sugar cane harvesting machines the first ever used commerically, have begun harvesting $4,000,000 worth of sugar cane from 20,000 acres of rich, black Everglade muckland. Each of these machines are mounted on endless treads like army tanks and are able to do the work of 200 cane cutters.

SHADE TREES PLANTED ON STATE HIGHWAYS

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 23.—Thirty-three miles of shade trees were planted along the highways of the state during the recent fall and winter, states Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. The planting projects were initiated by the Federated Women's Clubs of Alabama as a part of their program of work. Cooperation was afforded by the highway department and the comission of forestry. The Highway Department staked out the projects and furnished the planting labor. The commission of forestry provided most of the trees and supervised the actual planting operations.

The planting projects are located in the vicinity of Birmingham, Boaz, Guntersville, Ashland, Florence, Selma, Demopolis, Tuscaloosa, Loxley, Troy, Ozark, Dothan, Montgomery and Abbeville. The principal species were live oak and water oak. Other varieties were sycamore and hackberry.

Previous plantings suffered severely last year's drought, and in addition to the new projects of the current planting season eight hundred sixty-three trees were used as replacements on old projects located at Luverne, Montgomery, Union Springs, Ozark, Ashford, Dothan, Selma and Marion. Further replacements are necessary, but the supply of trees available for this work at present is exhausted. The additional replacements will probably be made next fall.

TRIPS TO SOUTH AMERICA FOR TWO ALA. NITRATE DEALERS

Twelve fertilizer dealers from six southern states will be taken to South America this fall by the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational Bureau, according to an announcement just received from the offices in New York. The twelve dealers, two each from Virginia, NoNrth Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi will be selected in a contest based on the efforts of the dealers to promote the use and sale of the Chilean product.

Last summer to mark the 100th anniversary of the first importation of Chilean nitrate to the United States a party of fifteen agronomists and agricultural experts were taken to South America to inspect the nitrate mines and plants and to visit the principal vities of Chile. The success of this trip toward explaining the value of proper fertilization influenced the Education Bureau to offer the same opportunity to dealers.

The winners in each state, according to the announcement will be selected by an impartial committee of three judges selected from each state. The winners will be judged by reports which they will submit not later than July 1st, describing efforts to promote the sale of Chilean nitrate by personal contacts, speeches, demonstrations, newspapers advertising and the like.

The dealers will sail from New York and will visit the Panama Canal enroute to Chile. They will visit Santiago, the capitol of Chile, and other cities in that country, and will spend a number of days in the nitrte fields to get first hand information on production methods. It is believed that this is the first time that opportunity for such a trip has been offered to fertilizer dealers in the South. The trip from New York and return will last about six weeks and expenses will be paid by the Educational Bureau.

POULTRY

HATCHABILITY DEPENDS UPON HANDLING OF EGGS

Eggs that are being sold for hatching purposes should be gathered several times a day. Good eggs oftentimes become poor hatching eggs simply because they are not gathered before they get chilled in the nest.

When eggs are gathered, they should be graded, and those of uniform type, shape, size, and color saved. For the most part these egg qualities are inherited; so you will want to avoid setting or selling for hatching purposes off-colored, misshapen eggs or eggs with shell imperfections.

To hold hatching eggs, keep them in a room where you can maintain a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. If the temperature is below 50 degrees, the germ is apt to get chilled, while if the eggs are held in a temperature above 55 degrees, there is danger of the germ starting to develop. In either case, it proves to be a direct injury when the eggs are incubated.

The fresher the eggs can be placed in an incubator, the better. They should not be held over ten days at the most, because the hatching quality decreases rapidly after the tenth day. When holding hatching eggs, it is a good policy to turn them once a day.

There is no one cause for poor hatches. It may be any one or a combination of improper handling of hatching eggs, faulty incubation, and poor nutrition. Breeders should be properly nourished through the winter months. They ought to be in good condition and in good health when the hatching season starts.

Giving Providence A Dirty Look.—An old farmer was complaining bitterly to the minister of the terrible bad weather for the crops, when the latter reminded him that he had much to be grateful for, all the same.

"And remember," said the good man, "Providence cares for all. Even the birds of the air are fed each day."

"Aye," replied the farmer, darkly, "off my corn."—Glasgow Herald.

Rev. J. C. Hill returned Monday night from an appointment at Troy. A few minutes after he had reached home he received a call from Thomasville, stating that his uncle died suddenly Monday with a stroke of paralysis. He stated that he expected to attend the funeral of the dead relative.

Might hose it.—Down in Texas the short cotton crop forced a large number of the country negroes into the cities. One of them applied for a job at the office of an unemployment agency.

"There's a job at the Eagle Laundry," said the man behind the desk. "Want it?"

The applicant shifted uneasily from one foot to the other.

"Tell you how it is, boss," he said finally, "I sure does want a job mighty bad, but de fact is I ain't never washed a eagle."—The Open Road.

"And what if the engine stalls when we're away up in the clouds?" asked the young lady of the pilot as she was about to enter a flying machine for her first trip.

"Well if it should happen," replied the pilot, "you just leap out, count ten and then pull the cord on your parachute."

"But what if it doesn't open up?" she asked anxiously.

"In that case the only logical thing to do is to flap your arms up and down and say 'I'm a bird—I'm a bird'."—Glasgow Herald.

Where Quality is Higher than Prices

IN MEMORY OF HARLEY RAY

Dear Grandfather, you have left me,
And your smiles I see no more;
My heart is filled with sadness,
For no time can heal the sore.

More and more each day I miss you,
Friends all think the wound has healed;
But they little know the sorrow,
That is in my heart concealed.

I often sit and think of you, dear Grandfather,
When I'm all alone;
For memory is the only friend,
That grief can call its own.

What is home without a grandfather?
All the things a world may send;
For when I lost my dear grandfather,
I lost my dearest friend.

He wore the crown of patience,
Through the years he struggled on;
And those hands that rest forever,
Are the hands that made my home.

Soft and bright the stars are shining,
Spreading over a lonely grave;
Where lies the one I loved so dearly,
Whom I tried so hard, but could not save.—A Granddaughter.

MR. HARLEY RAY DIED

On Saturday morning, February 14, Mr. Harley Ray was hit by a car and was badly injured while he was crossing a street in Birmingham, Alabama. He was rushed to the Hillman's Hosptal where he lay unconscious till Monday morning. The Lord saw fit to take him to his eternal home on Monday morning at six o'clock. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, four sons, and five daughters as follows:

Mr. Will Ray of Dadeville; Joe and Lonnie Ray of Clanton; Horace Ray of Birmingham; Mrs. John Sanders Mrs. Renzie Mims and Mrs. Alphie Dobbs all of Clanton; Mrs. Erbie Higgins of Maplesville and Mrs. O. P. Henson of Verbena.

He was seventy-two years of age, and was a good and faithful church member. He wore a smile to greet everyone. He loved the Lord and we know he is at rest in the beautiful heaven above, where he will have no more sorrow or pain, but will rest forever more. He will walk the golden streets where the Savior bids us come and we are praying to meet him up in heaven when our work here on earth is done.

The remains were laid to rest in the Maple Springs cemetery on Wednesday February 18, with Rev. T. J. Deason officiating. J. Mell Martin was in charge.—Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Deavers.

Mrs. Frank Callen spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. John DeRamus in Talladega.

Prof. H. L. Davis was confined to his home with illness last week. He is now able to resume his duties as principal of the school at Shiloh.

BETHSALEM

Our Sunday school seems to be growing, and more interest being shown than ever before. We have cause for thankfulness each time we meet. There were 73 present, and all took part in the work. Our theme was: "Take heed how ye hear," which was discussed by our superintendent and also in the classes. The special song by the juniors was nicely rendered, the title being, "More about Jesus."

Our invitation to everyone, and especially to all in our church and community, is to come and help carry on the work. There was one thought advanced in one of our classes that each one ask, within themselves, if everybody was just like me, what kind of a church would this be?

We had a very good singing Sunday afternoon. We hope everyone will come and help us.

IN MEMORY

Dear Mother, you have left me,
And your smiles I see no more;
My heart is filled with sadness,
For no time can heal the sore.

More and more each day I miss you,
Friends all think the wound has healed;
But they little know the sorrow,
That is in my heart concealed.

I often sit and think of you, Dear Mother,
When I am all alone;
For memory is the only friend,
That grief can call its own.

What is home without a mother?
All the things the world may send;
For when I lost my dear Mother,
I lost my dearest friend.

She wore the crown of patience,
Through the years she struggled on;
And those hands that rest forever,
Are the hands that made my home.

CEDAR GROVE

Rev. Lynch filled his regular appointment at this place last Sunday morning. He preached a mighty good sermon. There was a good crowd at church, but not as many as could have been, perhaps, for such a beautiful day.

The Liberty Hill-Cedar Grove singers met here in the afternoon and sung in the new Stamps-Baxter song books. Directors were: J. W. Lowery, Kermit Lowery, Houston Melton, and D. T. Melton. Organists were Miss Gertie Lee Lowery and Mrs. Lela Thornton. All members who want a new book see Prof. J. W. Lowery.

On account of the Sunday School Convention to meet at Liberty Hill the second Sunday in March, the Sunday afternoon singing at Liberty has been postponed to the third Sunday afternoon in March. Don't forget to come to our singing the third Sunday of next month and bring someone with you.—Secretary.

Everybody is cordially invited. Admission will be 10 and 20 cents. We will also have about six quartets rendered by the Devaughn Quartet.

IN MEMORY OF E. WILLIS TAYLOR

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom his seen fit to remove from us our beloved one, Elbert Willis Taylor, age 35 years, one month.

He was taken from us Friday, February 13th, at noon—gone to dwell with God eternally. Funeral services were held in the Clayton Strete Baptist Church at Montgomery on February 14th at 10 o'clock, with Bro. F. M. Barns in charge; with interment in Chestnut Creek cemetery, at Coopers, Alabama.

He was married to Miss Nan Robinson eleven years ago. To this union one little girl came to brighten the home, age 10 years.

He was faithful to God and His work here, giving his life to Him at an early age. His pastor said he often talked with him about his faith in Christ. He was always at Sunday School, church, and prayer service. He taught a class of boys. He has left budded roses to bloom. He ministered to the sick, visiting the hospital often, always a cheerful word.

Dear husbnad and father, we miss your presence. Your voice is still, your chair is vacant. We are so lonely without you. Dear son, we miss you. You were so true to us. We miss you, dear brother. Oh, we will miss you here. Yet we know you have laid down the cross, and taken the crown. You will know no sorrow. We meekly bow in humble submission to the Father's will, and we realize that our loss is His gain.

A man who was a kind and loving father, gentle and loving in his dealings; with not only his loved ones, but with all with whom he came in contact. A man whom you always knew where to place on every mortal religious, social, or political issue. A man abounding in the work of the Lord, and exemplary in his department. A man who bore his sufferings bravely to the end, having fought a good fight, and finished his course.

Softly his hands are folded at rest,
The hands and the heart that have rendered their best.
Gently the hands have planted the seeds,
Petaled their fullness in generous deeds.
Blossoming deep where memory lends,
Beauty and fragrance that ever ascends.
Softly his soul has traveled alone,
The valley of shadows, so dark and unknown.
Softly his hands are foldled at rest,
While his soul, with a smile, that has ever caressed,
The friends of his heart.
There's a smile on his face,
Smiling at life, he has found his true place.
Smiling at friends with a wistful regret,
The friends of his heart.
There's a smile on his face,
Stalwart and brave was his generous heart.
Smiling at friends whom death never can part.
For love is eternal and royal its role,
Purple its garments, and white is its soul.

Left to mourn him: His wife and daughter, Annie Myra; father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Taylor, Coopers, Ala.; four sisters, Mrs. E. D. Hand, Clanton, Ala., Mrs. A. L. Taylor, Clanton, Ala., Mrs. Ira Smith, Halleyville, Ala., Miss Lucile Taylor, Coopers, Ala.; three brothers, A. J. Taylor, Coopers, Ala.; B. L. Taylor, Coopers, Ala., and L. Roy Taylor, Montgomery, Ala., and a host of friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Robinson and son were visiting in Clanton Sunday.

FROM W. P. LOWERY

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to express my sincere thanks to the good people of my churches.

I have to admit that I entered my fields of work this year a little dispondent, as I faced the drough stricken situation which cut the crops half, then the price cut that half. And I did not see how my churches were going to support me so I could continue my work, and I could not afford to ask them for money. So I prayed to the Lord to, in some way, make it possible for me to continue the work. Then I promised the Lord that I would make any sacrifise possible for me to meet the situation. Then the people began to sacrifice. They began to bring me fuel to burn, and to load my car with good things to eat, and the Lord has urged this depression to thoroughly convince me that my people will sacrifice. And this has been a means of drawing me closer to my people, and to love them better than I ever could have otherwise.

Then to cap it all, last Sunday night at Poplar Springs church, ju as the B. Y. P. U. closed their gram, an express wagon drawn by one of the Juniors, was placed in front of the pulpit, then a box by the Seniors, filled with good things to eat, and they filled my car brimming full. And they sent this old preacher home with his heart bubbling over with joy. Surely no preacher ever had a more loyal people than I have at my four churches, Shiloh, Bethsalem, Poplar Springs, and Enon.

The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want.—W. P. Lowery.

FREEMAN SCHOOL

There are quite a few children out on account of sickness. The attendance was not nearly so good last month as we wished for.

Mr. Posey has donated an acre of land to be used for the purpose of buying new desks for the school next year.

The following were perfect in attendance last month:

First grade—Doyle Brantley, Winston Pate.

Second grade—Lloyd Martin.

Third Grade—Paul Brantley, Buford Warren.

Fourth grade—Chestine Crumpton, Harold Hodgens, Essie Posey.

Sixth grade—Slim Cofer, Lee Cofer, Flossie Posey.

PLEASANT GROVE—JEMISON

We want to take this medium to thank each one who helped to make the box supper a success Saturday night.

Mr. Green Cofer of Mars Hill Community visited his nephew, Mr. Bob Cofer, and family Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sloan of near Providence attended preaching services here Sunday.

WEST CHILTON

Nothing very exciting over here just now.

Everybody is busy preparing for the 1932 crop. The people may need more money and more fertilizer to make their crops. But we hardly think they will be lacking in free advice.

The W. E. Smith farm was sold Monday. Mr. John Cooper of Jemison was the purchaser.

Rev. Dyer held services at Union Springs Sunday and Sunday night.

Mr. T. J. Hubbard has returned from a visit to his daughter at Hamburg.

Mr. C. G. Glass, one of the popular merchants of Jemison, was a welcome visitor at the Macedonia Sunday School Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowery of Providence came down the other Sunday to visit Mr. Hubbard and family.

Some gardens over here are being planted. The rush will come a little later.

Miss Bertha Waldrop of Randolph visited her brother here last week end.

A Tuscaloosa firm is cutting and shipping a great quantity of large sweetgum timber from West Chilton now.

It looks as if there will be a lot of truck farming this year. So if there is a cry of over-production along that line it will not be surprising. Why should the farmer increase his poultry flock to 100 head or more, when poultry and eggs are down flat with the present supply of poultry. How would it be if we had a large increase in poultry? It is advised to build your flocks to 100 head. Ah, if our advisers could always know what to tell us to do. Best like ourselves, they cannot probe the future. So the clouds of depression hang over us. "But light is shining behind the cloud."

CENTER HILL

Sunday School was fine Sunday. The crowd was small, considering what it could have been, if everyone who could would come and take a part. So be sure to come next Sunday.

The singing at Mr. W. R. Scott's Wednesday night was good. Organists were Mrs. B. L. Cobb and Miss Effie Cofer.

Mrs. Ward Thrash and children of Dry Valley spent part of last week here with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Price.

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Lowery and baby, Dave, of Free Springs spent Sunday with Mrs. Lowery's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Cobb.

Mr. and Mrs. Sug Webb spent the week end in Birmingham.

The United Singing Society visited the Cooperative Singing Society at this place Sunday afternoon. The crowd was large and the singing was good.

The singing was called to order by the president of the Center Hill division of the society. Prayer by J. H. Martin. Directors were Ellis Martin, Lloyd Edwards, Johnnie Minor, Marion Cofer, W. J. Northcutt, Akins Collins, Rev. M. Lockhart, Russell Scott, A. H. Glasscock, Burl Martin, C. W. Scott. Organists for the afternoon were Misses Ruby Smith and Emma Atkinson. The Cooperative Society will meet next Sunday with Oak Grove.

From Former Chiltonian Now in New Hampshire

Wolfeboro, N. H., Feb. 19, 1931
Editor Union-Banner:

By the kindness of my sister, Mrs. Dezzie Littlejohn, of Jemison, a bundle of your January and February issues came to me today telling of warm spring-like days, plowing, gardening, cabbage plants and garden seed selling, etc. I read the local items and county news of all the issues immediately after they arrived, as one of the hardest snow storms of the winter was beating down upon us here in the cold and snowy North. The contrast was in reading of plowing and planting there, and glancing through the window and seeing the snow plows pull through the street, piling up the snow between the sidewalk and the street so as to keep the traffic lanes open; with occassionally a smaller, narrower snow plow pulling up the sidewalk itself, so people can go for mail and eats, until now the snow is piled so high between sidewalk and street there is no more room to pile the snow.

We have not seen land since last November, as the snow came early and stayed. Yesterday, the 18th, the snow melted about an inch or so on top, and flushed the streets with water. The first thawing day of the winter.

At daylight today, the most furious snow storm of the winter, out of due north, came upon us, and it has raged all day. In the nearby woods the snow is waist deep for a tall man, and in places it is over one's head. On the lake hard by is 15 inches of solid ice, and on the lake is 49 fish houses, moved thereon by trucks and teams. The fishermen drill a hole through the ice, and sit by a warm fire and fish all day, and oftimes all night.

In a nearby town, in Vermont, near here, the other day the land was found frozen to a depth of 55 inches. The people who die here are placed in stone vaults until spring, when they can be buried in the ground. Every cemetery has to have its stone house or vault for keeping dead bodies in winter. One funeral I had in March a few years ago filled the vault. We had not room for another body.

Other items in these issues were of interest to a wanderer far from home. Uncle Dick Edwards and Alf Popwell, both my father's (Ran Headley) firm friends, gone to the long home. Oft have I heard my father telling of Uncle Dick Edward's youth, of his economy and thrift in his boyhood days, and how, on Sundays, in his shirt sleeves with broad red suspenders, his hearty laugh would be heard all over the hill near the church; and I can still see him, in mind's eye, as he was driving the red oxen, with long horns, before I left Clanton 25 years ago, about the time you mention in your 25-year-column of my preaching the "excellent" sermon at Fairview. Thank you for the compliment anyway.

And speaking of Fairview, there is where Prof. Orman Davis, of your town, founded and taught one of the best schools ever taught in the days of 40 years ago. And a list of the worth while men of all professions in your county who got their "A. B.'s" at that institute under Prof. Davis comes before me now in the persons of E. B. Deason, county judge; Tom Herrod, county commissioner; Haley, dentist; Farmer Apperson, Walter Popwell, and other leading farmers; Jim Mims, the physician; Fate Popwell, James Mims, Robert Headley and other teachers; and oft were these men, then boys, seen going home from school by my boyhood home, on the old Shelby Jones slave plantation, long after the sun had set. And I was told they worked "sums" on the blackboard as long as they could see.

The allumnae of that "institute" ought to re-assemble on the old base ball field before the passing of Prof. Davis, and give him a ripping cheer for what he did for us in the long ago. No one who ever attended that school will ever forget Prof. Davis and the good work he did in the days of "little larnin" in ole Alabama.

I am pastor of an old, old church in Gaukeedom, in a city that was known in the '60s as a copperhead town, ie, they fought for the South in the Civil War. That is, they didn't go down and shoulder a musket, but they refused to fight in the Union army, and gave the government considerable trouble in those days of unpleasantness. Several of my parishioneers live in homes that were built before the Revolution, and one grant of land in my parish is still in the same family (descendants) that King George III gave the land to, long before the Revolution was fought. The only deed the family has is from King George III. The land never having been sold, but inherited all the way down from the original grantee. The present owner, however, whom I often visit, has no heirs, and soon, as he goes, the land will pass out of the family. The anti-Revolutionary house (dwelling) my church was organized in shortly after the Revolutionary War, still stands, and the descendants of the original owners still live in house.

I close my letter with an experience of a colored mother and her who came from Alabama (and maybe from Chilton County, for all I know) to a city near here just after the World War.

The negro son came, first got a job, married a colored lassie in Portsmouth, N. H., and settled down to a happy life at home. When prosperity smiled upon him, instead of taking his bride on a visit to his people in "Alabama," he sent his mother money to pay her expenses on a visit to him in Pourtsmouth. The first Sunday this negro mother desired to attend church, but as her son and wife didn't attend, she went alone. On her way she approached a policeman and inquired of him where the nearest church was. He directed her to the Christian Science Church, which was nearest. Arriving at church, she found the members were testifying of faith healings by Mary Baker Eddy. Some testified of being cured of rheumatism, others of fevers, ulcers, stiff joints, etc. After they had all testified the good Alabama colored mother arose to testify. She said:

"Brederin and Sistahs: I never looses an oppertunity to testify when I has one. I hain't never hearn of that lady Eddy you tells about, and can't say she has done me any good, but Ah do want to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's pills sho has helped me."—Orman L. Headley.

Rev. J. Robert Bean of Bessemer was here Saturday and Sunday and filled his regular appointment at Friendship Sunday and Sunday night. He remained over Monday night with his nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Heshel Gore, returning to his home Tuesday morning.

PITTS IS NOT ANTI-HOOVER REPUBLICAN

Editor Union-Banner:

On Friday of last week there appeared in The Birmingham News a writeup of me as Representative in the legislature from Chilton County, in which it was stated among other things, that I am an anti-Hoover Republican.

I would like to say in justice to myself that there was an evident misunderstanding of me by the correspondent who wrote that article to The News. I am not against President Hoover. I was for him in his campaign for election to the Presidency, and I have been a supporter of him all through his administration. I believe that he and his administration are doing all that can be done for the interests of the country under the present world-wide conditions of depression in business activities.

The statement of The News, however, that I am not a postoffice Republican," is true. I am a Republican from principle, and have been all my life. I have always stood by the Republican ticket in every campaign.

Thank you for the opportunity of making this explanation.—Percy M. Pitts.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Neutral political observers at Washington, who like to view things through non-partisan spectacles are pretty generally of the opinion that the opposition to the administration in Congress during the past few weeks has by its actions strengthened President Hoover and his administration out in the country, although this of course has not been the intent of the opposition program. Immediately after the 1930 election Republican spirits in most quarters in Washington were decidedly low, and it was commonly stated that the party would have hard sledding in 1932 unless conditions changed. Well, business conditions have not changed so much yet, although prospects seem better than in the closing months of 1930. But the opposition to the Republican administration as represented by the Democratic party and its insurgent allies has undoubtedly been "making medicine" for the regulars during the past few weeks.

The first setback which the opposition received was when the Senate sought to recall its confirmation of certain power commissioners and got into a controversy with the President which gave the chief executive the opportunity to put the Senate in the light of seeking to go beyond its constitutional powers and to try to take over some control of administrative matters in Washington. The reaction in the country to the gentle rebuke which the President administered to the Senate opposition was undoubtedly favorable to Mr. Hoover.

Following this came the bitter disagreement over drought relief and the attempt of the Senate to force a contribution from the federal government to the Red Cross for relief work in the drought districts and in the cities of the country. In spite of the fact that the Red Cross announced that it could not accept such aid, and would be able to secure what help it needed from voluntary contributions, the Senate persisted and in the heat of debate some senators implied that they might force an extra session of Congress after March 4 by holding up appropriation bills.

Now if there is anything which the country does not want it is an extra session of Congress. There were immediate protests from all over the country, the general opinion expressed being to the effect that an extra session would retard business recovery. Another disturbing element came in the proposal to pay an immediate cash bonus to veterans of the World War amounting to something like $3,500,000,000. The immediate effect on the stock and bond market of this proposal was decidedly unfavorable and protests again rolled in from business leaders everywhere, who were of the opinion that such action would in the long run injure the country, of which the veterans are a part, far more than it would temporarily assist the veterans. As forces in Congress opposed to the President were apparently behind the cash bonus proposal, the effect was to pour additional water on the administration wheel.

In explaining his stand for voluntary contributions for drought relief as against direct government aid, President Hoover again made a favorable impression on the country and he was able to furnish a good precedent in support of his stand, from the remarks of Grover Cleveland, one of the two Democratic Presidents we have had since the Civil War. In a similar situation President Hoover quoted President Cleveland as saying:

"The friendliness and charity of our countrymen can always be relied upon to relieve their fellow citizens in misfortune. This has been repeatedly and quite lately demonstrated. Federal aid in such cases encourages the expectation of paternal care on the part of the government and weakens the sturdiness of our national character, while it prevents the indulgence among our people of that kindly sentiment and conduct which strengthens the bonds of a common brotherhood."

In his own words President Hoover declared:

"The basis of successful relief in national distress is to mobilize and organize the infinite number of agencies of self-help in the community. That has been the American way of relieving distress among our own people and the country is successfully meeting its problem in the American way today."

It is an odd superstition among Republicans, that no matter how badly rattled and depressed they become during the off-years, the Democrats always manage to provide them with an issue and with popular support when the campaign rolls around. Well the Republicans have certainly been rattled and depressed. But they are picking up a little and they are getting their cheer from the action of the opposition in Congress at this time, an opposition which is not calculated to win any confidence in itself from the American people unless it changes its program.

CHANCE FOR PATRIOTISM

Deaf, dumb and blind World War veteran is cured by falling downstairs. Wont somebody please place some banana peelings on the steps of the capitol at Washington.—Los Angeles Times.

PILING IT ON

Many would-be statesmen, both in and out of office, appear to be taking advantage of the depression in business to saddle the various departments of government, city, county, state and nation, with burdensome taxes. They advocate measures with utter abandon. They seem to think that any government agency can have a wand and, presto, a flood of gold will pour forth.

We hear people advocating old age pensions and other causes with an appeal to sympathy without first knowing how much old age pensions would cost or who would pay the bill. We recall an illustration some prominent writer gave the matter sometime back: A man walks down the street and sees a beautiful fur coat in a window. He thinks of the struggle his wife has had in rearing the children and doing her work and all that kind of thing. His heart melts with tender emotion and he walks in and buys the coat and takes it home to his wife. When the first of the month rolls around and he gets a statement for $500, he realizes that he cannot afford the coat, or one within a considerable cost of it.

There are those scrambling for lavish expenditures for public buildings, creating inland waterways that will never be used, colecting statistics which are utterly useless, experimenting with government ownership of this, that and the other, anything for which to spend money, with no thought of the final day of settlement or where the money is to come from.

It is disregard for cost that is piling up taxes higher and ever higher. The mere fact that a thing is wanted or is meritous is not justification for its purchase. We take off our hats to no one in his desire to allay suffering, to do away with poverty and the dread of fear, of a friendless and penniless going out of life. But the way to build independence in old age is not through government bounty. There are too many methods of saving, of insuring against want to justify the government launching into the business.

We do not like the word revolution. It is really impulsive to a democratic or republican form of government. Here is one thing sure, however: let the different departments of government keep on increasing expenditures and putting extra people on the pay rolls until every earner outside the government is keeping up another person on the public payroll, and you will see revolution.—Ada, Oklahoma Evening News.

THE CINDER PILE

(By The Sweeper)

Yes, Sir, The Sweeper has been mighty busy for the last week digging among the cinders and trying to get them all piled up in the corner in a nice orderly heap. But alas, and alack, this premature March wind that has been howling around the corner has made the job a very strenuous one indeed. So we now pause from our labors to chat with you for a while and get a little rest before we tackle those cinders again.

We have been wondering all the past week just what that old ground hog thinks about the kind of weather we have been having since he saw his shadow on the second day of this month? Surely he must feel somewhat chagrined over the fact that he seems to have lost his pull with the weather man entirely. We thought last week that possibly he had gotten the weather situation in hand and was going to prove to all us fellows who are inclined to discredit the ground hog theory, that he was really the wise old boy he is universally given credit for being.

However, the weather has again turned out to be very pleasant indeed, for the time of the year, and there are signs of Springs to be seen on every side.

In our paragraph last week relative to the old-fashioned log-rollin's where we mentioned about wishing to see a revival of those good old times and expressed a desire for lots of "red corn" we failed to mention just how, or what kind of "red corn" we referred to. We hasten to explain to our readers that we did not have in mind the newer and in some localities, prevalent variety of "red corn" which comes in bottles, but the good old-fashioned and seldom seen red "ear corn."

We make the above explanation so that none of our readers will get the idea that we are in favor of the return of the forbidden "joy juice."

Have you folks noticed the extremes some of our nationally known concerns are going to in order to attract the attention of the buying public? Here we refer in particular to some of the advertising matter that is being sent out over the country to the farmers by the fertilizer manufacturers.

Being, as we are, a printer, and thereby having a fair knowledge of the cost of printed matter, we are of the opinion that some of these highly colored and decorated pieces of advertising matter cost a pretty piece of money. Far be it from us to do anything or say anything that would tend to detract from the income of the printers—but in these times when money is so hard for the farmer to get—we must assert that someone is going to have to pay for that elaborately decorated printed matter.

We will give you farmers three guesses as to who is going to be the final goat in this matter. You may bet your sweet life the farmer who buys the fertilizer will be the fellow who will bear the burden of such beautifully colored advertising matter as is being sent out to tell how good such-and-such a brand of fertilizer is, and how it will make money for the farmer who is wise enough to buy that "brand."

It would seem to us that a more sensible plan would be to use advertising, if any personal or direct mail advertising is done, of only one color, and pass the saving along to the purchaser in the form of reduced prices on the fertilizers he buys.

Our advice to the farmers is to use very little high priced fertilizer this year with which to grow cotton. The price is certainly not sufficient to justify a huge outlay for fertilizer at this time. Let's all be very careful about this fertilizer business this year, in order that fall will not find us taking all we have made to pay our fertilizer bill.

And while we are talking fertilizer, we would like to call attention to the fact that after about 12 years of being batted back and forth in the Senate and House, those bodies have at last, through their joint committees, reached an agreement as to what they are going to do with Muscles Shoals. The way we understand the present arrangement is that the government is to run the power plants at Wilson Dam and lease the nitrate plants to private interests, with a provision for the operators of the nitrate plants to purchase a part of their power from the government operated power plants.

We are not well enough versed in the matter of fertilizer manufacture to be able to say just what effect this may have upon the future price of fertilizers to the farmer, but we are of the opinion that any operation of the plants at Muscle Shoals will tend to lower the price of these commodities to the consumer.

The action of the joint committee in reporting out the above bill favorably, has if nothing else, opened the way for some immediate action on this important matter. We are of the opinion that the Muscle Shoals question has been used as a political Band Wagon long enough. The country needs action on this all-important question.

Got to get to sweepin'.—The Sweeper.

Still, when you stop to think of all the honey-mooners' baby talk Niagara Falls has had to listen to, the wonder is that it didn't collapse a long time ago.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

THE RING-NECK DUCK

Editor Union-Banner:

Thanks for the copy of your paper containing the item on the ring neck duck bearing band No. A689,419. I received the return card on this band some time since from Washington. Am sure you found this bird edible, I fed him on rough rice about half the winter.

This only one of over one thousand ducks banded by me on this sanctuary this season, of course we fed many thousand that were not caught. No firearms are ever allowed on the property, and besides the ducks many thousands of blue geese spend the winters with us. Am sending along a leaflet containing a list, not complete, of the birds found here.

It may interest you to know that the number of ducks and geese banded up to the close of the last fiscal year, on record in Washington, was 59,771. The returns from these banded birds help the Biological Survey to determine the lines of flight between wintering and breeding grounds as well as other important information valuable in the making of proper laws to conserve our waterfowl.

Thanking you for your interest and hoping that you will encourage your hunter-readers to send the numbers of any bands they may secure to the Biological Survey at Washington, D. C. I am, very truly yours, RICHARD GORDON, Supt., Paul J. Rainey Wild Life Sanctuary.

LITTLE HOPE FOR DISARMAMENT

The council of the League of nations has put off the date of the general disarmament conference as far as it decently could, but there is no immediate prospect that conditions will be any more favorable for its purpose a year hence than they are today. The preparatory commission labored intermittenly for four years and a half to produce a tentative agreement that could be submitted to the conference. Its task has just been completed and the council had to take cognization of the fact. But neither the experience of the commission nor the draft treaty it finally worked out offers hope for any substantial accomplishment by the conference.

The greatest difficulty which the preparatory commission met was on the question of limiting land armaments. The countries with the system of universal and compulsory military training, headed for France, flatly refused to allow their trained reserves to be counted in any limitation. That position rendered an agreement practically valueless. But the preparatory commission saved what it could by proposing that the maximum period of training and the expenditure upon personnel and war material be limited. Unless France and her friends have a remarkable (and unexpected) change of heart before February 2, 1932, any general treaty which the conference produces will be very feeble.—Kansas City Star.

Professor Einstein declares that it is hotter at the poles than at the equator on the sun, and we defy you to prove it isn't so.

One financial expert says that the foundations of many future fortunes will be laid this year. But personally we haven't been able to get hold of any rocks to start a foundation.

Of course it is just possible that the politicians might load enough burdens on Uncle Sam's back to break it, but so far they haven't suceeded in doing more than put a few vertebrae out of place.

IMPRESSION OF RUSSIA

Clara Erwin, who visited Soviet Russia with a party of 450 tourists, has given her impression in a letter printed in the Chicago Tribune of January 18. Speaking of the Russian crowds, she said: "I never shall forget those poor faces in the crowd, so pale and thin and bewildered looking; so shabbily dressed and dirty, like the poorest of the east side crowds. And wherever we went in Leningrad, that was all we saw; just streams of poverty stricken, pinched looking people walking slowly in the shabby streets, or standing in long lines at the food shops. They say they wait there for hours, basnet on arm, baby on shoulder, for a chance to buy food at government prices rather than to pay $1.25 a head for cauliflower or 25 cents for a single egg. And the government supply sometimes gives out before they can get a chance to buy. The bolsheviks say there is plenty of food for everyone but all the people we saw certainly did not look well fed. One of our passengers tried to photo one of these food lines in Moscow and was promptly arrested and marched off to the police station and had to be rescued. I wonder why they don't care about having a picture of the food line in the American papers."

There is one commodity in the world which hasn't been deflated yet and that is trouble.

It may be true that the meek shall inherit the earth but they don't get very far in politics.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

A Better Appearance

As I stand on the corner and look over in the direction of the county courthouse, I am impressed with the great improvement in appearance that has been effected by the trimming up of the trees and the cleaning up of the Potts place. In a few days the county will be using the Potts place to house the department of education. It will give Mr. Lawrence and the County Board of Education plenty of space, filling a need that has been urgent for a long time. Perhaps also Mrs. Stapp will use part of the Potts house for the Child Welfare Department.

A Good Buy For the County

Regardless of what the Potts property is used for in the immediate future, and even if not used at all, it is a good buy that was made for the county. Our present courthouse is already overcrowded. Every official in the building could very handily use more space. Expansion of the county building in the future is imminent. The Potts property is the only lot adjacent to the courthouse that could ever be acquired. I think the Commissioners acted wisely and with a right vision for the future when they bought it.

Monroe Wyatt at Woco Pep

I am glad to find out that Monroe Wyatt, the filling station operator, will take up his business abode at the Woco Pep Station in front of the courthouse next Sunday, March 1st. For several years past he has operated the Clanton Service Station down on the highway. Old reliable Woco Pep is a fixture with automobile owners. "Mun" Wyatt is also a fixture with lots of them. The two together at the popular place in front of the courthouse will make a winning combination. And then, too, there is another important thing in this hook-up. Firestone Tires will be right there. "Mun" is the original Firestone dealer in Clanton, and he intends to keep on pushing them.

Another Change on Sixth Street

Broadus Connatser has been saying for several weeks that he was going to close up the W. W. Fox hardware and furniture business. He has made good his threat. The decks have all been cleared, everything in the building given a new coat of paint, and in moves Tiffin-Klinner Furniture Company, to keep on doing business at the Fox place. The latter are coming over from the Mullins Building next to the Exchange Hotel.

The Future of Sixth Street

There are plenty of people in Clanton who believe that Sixth Street is destined to become a very important part of Clanton's business district, comparable to the position now occupied by Seventh Street (the Highway). Nothwithstanding, perhaps many of those who believe in Sixth Street are property owners in that vicinity, nevertheless it is indeed a future worth contemplating. Clanton will be bigger some day than it now is. Some time in the future there is going to spring up a movement to have Sixth Street paved from South Clanton to North Clanton, thus affording a two-way through passage for traffic on the highway.

The Trees of Clanton

I believe the trees of Clanton constitute one of the most impressive of our natural beauties. With much satisfaction I have noticed that many people are taking care of their trees by proper pruning, and other helpful attentions to their preservation. It will not be many weeks until these stately oaks and elms will come out of their winter quarters and greet us with blossom and foliage. Another season of life and growth for them. Would it be interesting to know just how many years of our town's life some of these trees have seen, and how many and what interesting stories of the bygone days they might tell if they had the power to talk and to write.

County Money on Deposit

I hear that the County Commissioners of Chilton County have allotted fifty thousand dollars of the county's money to go on savings deposit in one of the banks of Clanton. This bit of information has a savory taste for more reasons than one. In the first place it makes one feel comfortable to know that his county is in such good financial condition. It speaks well for the management of the county's business. Then, perhaps best of all, it means that so much money will be available to business interests locally. The bank which secured the deposit will not let the money lie idle in its vaults. They will loan it out. Perhaps much of it will go to help farmers operate their business and make a crop this year.

GREETINGS FROM CONGRESSMAN OLIVER

The Union-Banner received Monday morning from Washington, D. C., a telegram from Congressman W. B. Oliver, addressed to the people of Chilton County, in which he extends to the people of Chilton and Shelby Counties, a very cordial welcome into the Sixth Congressional District of Alabama.

It might be stated here, for the information of those who have not kept up with the recent acts of the Alabama Legislature, that the congressional redistricting measure recently enacted, takes Chilton and Shelby Counties out of the Fourth District, represented by Lamar Jeffers, and places them in the Sixth District, represented by "Buck" Oliver, of Tuscaloosa.

We quote the telegram of Congressman Oliver, as follows:

"On behalf of the people of Bibb, Greene, Hale, Perry, Sumter, and Tuscaloosa Counties, I extend to the people of Chilton and Shelby a very cordial welcome into the family group which we affectionately call the Sixth Congressional District."

The Union-Banner is glad to have this expression of cordiality and interest from Congressman Oliver and the people of the other counties mentioned. Mr. Oliver is a seasoned member of the House of Representatives at Washington. He has represented the Sixth District for many years, and he has represented his constituents well.

Politically speaking, The Union-Banner would first, of course, prefer to have Chilton, a Republican county, associated with other Republican counties in the selection of a Republican to represent us in the National Congress. But we happen to realize that things political in Alabama are not done to suit Republican newspapers, nor to fit the wishes of Republican voters.

Therefore, it must be as our Democratic brethren decree for us in such matters as Congressional representation. With this realization in our minds, this newspaper is moved to say that we are pleased with the choice made for us in this matter. If we had to choose for ourselves one of the Democratic Congressman to represent us in Washington, we do not know of one in the bunch we had sooner have than Buck Oliver.

Thank you, Mr. Oliver, for your cordial interest in the people of Chilton County. Come around to see us. We want to get acquainted with our Congressman. You will find that we are, as a people, interested in finer things than politics.

FOREST FIRES COST MILLIONS EACH YEAR

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 23.—In an address to students of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Dr. Chas H. Herty, industrial consultant of New York, declared that forest fires are exceedingly harmful in two ways. "In the first place," said he, "our economic losses caused by fires are huge; and, in the second place, forest fires stamp us as a backward people."

The speaker made this statement in connection with a discussion of the timber and naval stores industry of the South. He said that the southern states now have 150,000,000 acres of non-producing land, of which 125,000,000 acres is cutover land. "If fire is kept out," he continued, "this land will produce timber, the annual growth of which will be worth $5.00 to $10.00 per acre."

He quoted the Forest Service at Washington as his authority that the annual wood growth of long leaf pine is worth $5.00 per acre; old field or short leaf pine, $7.50 per acre; loblolly pine, $8.50 per acre; and slash pine $10.00 per acre. Long leaf and slash pine have a naval stores value in addition to timber, he explained.

"To get an idea of the economic importance of preventing forest fires you have only to multiply the number of acres of non-productive land by the value of wood produced on an acre each year if fire is kept out," said Dr. Herty.

Dr. Herty made a special appeal to students to become active for the prevention of fires. He advised a fire control unit in each community to prevent forest fires and also to create public sentiment against them.

The year, 1930, was the best year we have had in 4-H club work. There were 36,000 Alabama boys and girls enrolled in the Alabama 4-H clubs.

ALABAMA BUTTER IS FOUND BETTER

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 23.—The sting of being inferior to butter produced in other states was removed from Alabama butter at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, by Joel J. Winjker, butter specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, in connection with the short course in dairy manufacturing of which A. D. Burke, professor of dairying at Auburn, was in charge.

Twenty samples were scored; ten came from Alabama creameries and ten from the outside state, many of them being in the middle west. The lowest score on Alabama butter was 87 and the highest 90.5. The lowest on butter from outside the State was 86 and the highest 89.5 Althougn Alabama butter was found to be better, Mr. Winjker said that buttes from other states is being sold in Alabama for five cents a pound more than butter produced by Alabama manufacturers.

He explained that the butter which came from other states was as good as the Alabama butter when manufactured but that it deteriorated in shipment after being removed from storage. He insited, therefore, that Alabama butter should be preferred even at a price above that for butter manufactured elsewhere.

Mr. Winjker insisted that in addition to producing good butter from Alabama cows, creameries of the State are surrounded by conditions favorable to dairying. He said that Alabama can continue with her developments by taking advantage of opportunities within the State and following practices for successful dairying.

TEARING DOWN NOISE

Hugh Thompson of Thorsby came into Clanton the other day, and after passing the old Nivens Market asked: "What are they fixing to put up in the old Nivens place? As I passed there just then I heard an awful banging and bumping fuss; sounded like carpenters cleaning the place out."

Some kind friend explained to him that a bowling alley was in the place, and that was the fuss he had heard.

WATCHING THE WORLD
By John McCready

Co-Eds In Cotton

In Missouri at the state university a new craze has started—cotton clothes in old-fashioned patterns. The girls have returned to balloon sleeves and mid-Victorian hats and one has been selected as the prettiest "old-fashioned girl." The purpose of the movement is to aid Southern farmers by making cotton the popular fabric. As for the old-time styles, one suspects that it suddenly dawned on some campus belle—possibly at a movie of bygone days—that some of the styles of yesteryear were decidedly becoming. Which was argument enough.

Likeable Lecturer

A quarter million has been raised for sufferers in Arkansas through the lectures of Will Rogers; and the achievement gives rise to much comment on the cowboy-philanthropist. Will has the distinction of being able to deliver his "wise cracks" against any individual without the person taking it amiss. Few, if any others, can imitate him there. However, there is one way in which his example can be utilized by all who will. The crowds coming to his lectures, paying their dollars and going away with pity in their hearts suggest a principle—that it is not hard to get people to do what you wish and feel as you wish provided they like you. It is not abstract principles that lead men to do this or that; it is their liking for the leader.

Eggs and Yeggs

Three men are running for mayor of Chicago, and three eggs were hurled in the direction of one the other day during a speech. William Hale Thompson, conducting his campaign with bluster and baffoonery, was shouting to the crowd, "I wear no man's halter"—unlike his opponents, he maintained. "Oh, yes you do"—a man in the audience shouted back—"you wear the hoodlum's halter;" and with that he let fly the eggs. Many will agree with the egg-thrower in his opinion that Thompson is acceptable to the lawless element headed by Capone; and Judge Lyle, another candidate, is pressing the charge so vigorously that Thompson has sued for libel. The judge, who is a native of Tennessee, is showing the same relentlessness toward his adversary that he has shown toward twenty-eight gangsters listed as "public enemies;" and it is a safe guess that Chicago's good citizens hope he will be as successful in the race as in the drive.

$100,000—If . . . .

Two boys in New England will inherit $100,000 if they reach the age of twenty-five without smoking or drinking. A rich uncle has provided. It is pleasant to have an uncle of that sort, and his kindness is shown in the conditions imposed. The habit of not smoking or drinking is worth $100,000, in the opinion of some. Judgment may vary with respect to the weed which Sir Walter Raleigh made famous; but at any rate some might be found who would give real money to be quit of the incessant cigarette habit. A case comes to mind of two boys whose father offered them watches if they would not smoke till 21. They fulfilled the conditins, and then, realizing the benefit received let dad off with the prizes.

Boost For Business

Around Detroit 150,000 men have returned to work, building cars for the spring trade. The length of their employment will of course depend on the volume of business done. It is interesting to visualize the effects of this activity in a major industry. Thousands of men who work in mines, forests and factories in various parts of the country will be affected, going to work to supply the materials required. Merchants of Detroit will at once feel the effects of millions of dollars paid week by week to potential customers; and in keeping up their stocks they will send orders which will cause renewed activity in many manufacturies throughout the land. It is all an instance of the interdependence of mankind in the twentieth century.

Modern Marriage

Amelia Earhart, aviatrix, thinks time too valuable to waste more than a minimum on a mere detail like getting married. She took but a few moments the other day to get married to George Palmer Putnam, publisher; then took the next day, Sunday, for a honeymoon, and on Monday went to Washington, leaving "hubby" at his desk in New York. It was a splendidly prosiac affair—without announcements, guests, or gifts, or even a husband's name to be bothered with; for the bride will still be Miss Earhart for business reasons. It must be wonderful to be so busy and business-like.

Lords and a Lady

Members of the House of Commons were "told a few things" by their American member, Lady Astor, the other day. In the course of a debate on prihibition the member from Virginia—as she might be termed—declared that the defeat of a British cricket team at the hands of Australians was due to the fact that Australians did not drink. This brings to mind the remark of some noted man—Henry Ford, if memory serves — that the British would eventually be compelled to adopt prohibition in order to compete with American labor. Lady Astor coined a new expression in referring to the House of Lords—a wealthier and more bibulous body than the House of Commons. "You might as well call it the beerage as the peerage. That, in fact, would be a very good name for it."

Science and a Scourage

Those who are aware of the terrible toll which leprosy has taken through the ages will be glad to know that this dread disease, like most others, is being conquered by science. An indication is the recent release of eleven patients from the leprosarium at Carrville, Louisiana. In ten years, eighty-nine patients have been restored to health. The treatment given consists partly in the injection of a fluid called chaulmoogra oil—a painful experience unless a local anesthetic is used. Leprosy of two types is found—that which affects the nervous system and that which affects the skin. Seventy per cent of the victims are men. In the United States there are something like a thousand cases.

Pity the Prince

The Prince of Wales, entertained at Panama, pays such marked attention to an American girl that the London Times cables next day for her photograph. This recalls the deep interest shown by Britain's future ruler on a former visit to the United States a decade ago. The young lady, whose name is one very famous in the South, so captivated the Prince that he asked the privilege of paying her an informal call. But the case went no farther than the call. Pity the Prince — he cannot marry where he falls in love, unless it be with nobility. Otherwise he will forfeit his royal rights. However, some one might suggest a happy solution—that as he dislikes the idea of being king anyway, he might escape by following Cupid.

More Briefly

A tiny planet, about as big in the sea of space, you might say, as Tom Sawyer's diminutive isle in the Mississippi, has been discovered. It appears to be about twenty-five miles long and ten wide. Perhaps Professor Einstein would now and then like to escape from the earth's "merry din" to such a place, somewhat after Tom's example. President Hoover has contributed a tenth of his annual salary of $75,000 to the Red Cross. Now he can say effectively, "Come on, boys" to the rest of the country. Owen D. Young, championing before Congress the bill for veterans' adjustment compensation, seems to observers to have thrown his hat in the ring for the Presidency. According to a count made by two professors in Pennsylvania, a small Presbyterian college in Virginia—Hampden Sidney—has the largest percentage of graduates in "who's who in America." It is a venerable institution, with conservative tendencies, old-fashioned enough to emphasize the study of the classics and the view once held—that a college is a place for study.

Lesson for March 1

JESUS SENDING FORTH MISSIONARIES

GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore said he unto them, the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Trying Out His Helpers.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helpers of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Missionary Task.

The sending forth of the seventy was for a special time and purpose. The missionary enterprise today has much in common with that of that day, but there are certain essential differences which should be recognized.

I. The Seventy Sent Forth (vv. 1, 2).

1. Appointed by the Lord (v. 1). They went forth not merely because of an inner urge but because of personal and direct appointment. Only those should go forth as missionaries who are appointed by the Lord.

2. Sent two by two (v. 1). The purpose of this was that they might mutually help, counsel, and support each other.

3. The reason for their appointment (v. 2). It was the greatness of the harvest and the fewness of the laborers.

4. The force back of missions (v. 2). The disciples were instructed to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers. Prayer indited by the Holy Spirit has been back of every missionary enterprise.

II. The Seventy Instructed (vv. 3-16).

1. As to the source of their commission (v. 3). "I send you." Everything depends upon the authority of the commission. No missionary should go forth without the consciousness of being sent by the Lord.

2. As to the dangers confronting them (v. 3). Missionaries thrust forth by the Lord will be exposed to deadly peril.

3. As to their support (v. 4). Being sent forth by the Lord, they were to look to him to provide for their need.

4. As to the speed of their mission (v. 4). So urgent was the need of the speedy evangelization of the Jewish territory that the distractions of social intercourse were to be omitted.

5. As to behavior in homes where received (vv. 5-9).

a. Offer the peace of the gospel (vv. 5, 6). This is to be done regardless as to whether it will be received or not. There is a reflex blessing in preaching the gospel.

b. Do not shift quarters (vv. 7, 8). Missionaries should remain in the home where they have been received, content with what is given them. They should not demand better food and more comfortable quarters than are commonly provided.

c. Heal the sick (v. 9). These disciples were given power to heal the sick. The ministers of Christ should seek to give relief to those in distress and use every opportunity to proclaim the gospel message.

6. The awful fate of those who reject Christ's message (vv. 10-16). Their case is more hopeless than that of Sodom. Those who reject Christ's messengers reject Christ and reject the Heavenly Father who sent him.

III. The Return of the Seventy (vv. 17-24).

1. Their report (v. 17). They were highly elated. They found that they could not only heal the sick, but cast out demons also. It is easy even in Christian service to be spoiled by our successes.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 18-24). (a) He told them that it was no surprise to him (vv. 18 and 19). With prophetic eye, he saw their success as indicating that time when the prince of this world would be overthrown (John 12:31). By virtue of his mighty triumph over Satan, he assures them that they need have no fear of what should befall them. (b) Real cause for rejoicing (v. 20). He promptly rebuked them, telling them that their chief joy should be because of their heavenly relation, not because of these miraculous gifts. (c) Jesus' exultation (vv. 21, 22). The consciousness that soon the victory would be won because God had committed all things unto him and that only as men received him could they know the Father caused him to rejoice in what was being accomplished. (d) Congratulates the disciples (vv. 23, 24). He assured them that they were sharing privileges which had been denied to many of the prophets and kings.

By His Presence

When God possesses us we are possessed by his presence, and the Holy Spirit cannot be in us without purifying our thoughts, desires and motives and so equipping us for his service.—J. H. Griffith Thomas.

Boundless Possibilities

Oh, I am staggered as I think of the boundless possibilities that God opens before the man whose whole nature is filled with His Spirit!—Selected.

NERVOUS SPELLS

Crystal Springs, Miss.—"I suffered with blind nervous spells which would last from 30 to 45 minutes and would leave me with a severe headache. I tried several doctors but they did not help me. Then I started taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery Tablets after meals, and the 'Favorite Prescription Tablets' between meals, and at bedtime, also the 'Pleasant Pellets' for constipation. Since using these wonderful medicines I feel like a new woman and do my own work"—Mrs. Ruby Rice. Druggists.

I could not stand to take strong medicine, so I decided I would take Black-Draught, and I found it to be all right. "I would have such dizzy spells, and such bursting headaches, until I could hardly go. But after taking a few doses of Black-Draught, I would feel just fine. IN MEMORY OF LOYCE VESTEEN LITTLEFIELD

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Littlefield on February 2, 1931, and took away their oldest son, Loyce, age 20 years. We felt as though we couldn't give him up, but God saw fit to take him.

Loyce was a good boy, kind to his father and mother, always ready to do as they said. He left a vacant place in the home that can never be filled.

He was operated on for appendicitis in the Central Alabama Hospital, and lived only a few days.

He leaves a father, mother, and four brothers, Laverne, Wallace, Wilton, and Joe Earl.

He was buried at Union Grove. Rev. Davis conducted the funeral, with Martin in charge.

Another car going north, driven by a drunken negro, ran into the Lawrence car, inflicting considerable damage. The car belonging to the negroes was held at Thorsby to stand for the expenses of repairing the car of Mr. Lawrence. The negroes were allowed to go on their way.

DR. CALLOWAY DIED IN FLORIDA

Son of the Late N. J. Calloway of Clanton; Brother of L. A. Calloway

Dr. John T. Calloway, age 48 years, prominent physician, of Birmingham died last Saturday night in a hospital at Sarasota, Florida. The body was sent back to his home at Birmingham, and buried at Elmwood Cemetery Monday. The funeral was conducted by Dr. L. O. Dawson.

Dr. Calloway was a son of the late N. J. Calloway, of Clanton, and his first wife, Mrs. Nan Caffey Calloway. He was born and reared in Chilton County, near old Salem Church, on the river. About 17 years ago he completed his medical course at the old Birmingham Medical College, and has been practicing his profession in Birmingham since that time.

Several years ago he was married to Miss Frances Haggard, of Birmingham, who survives him. They had no children.

The home of Dr. Calloway was at Edgewood. He was among the first settlers in that community, and was prominent in the development there. He served on the city council and as Mayor of Edgewood.

Besides his wife there are surviving him the following members of his immediate family: His stepmother, Mrs. Alice Calloway, of Clanton; two brothers, Evan B. Calloway, of Nauvoo, and L. A. Calloway, of Clanton; three sisters, Mrs. H. B. Glenn, of Clanton, Mrs. Katie Bryant, of Clanton, and Mrs. Grady Harris, of Clanton.

For the past four years he had been in failing health, and had been spending the winters in Florida. During those years he was associated in the practice of medicine with Dr. Graves and Dr. Raymond Calloway, son of L. A. Calloway. They had offices in the Empire Building.

During the World War Dr. Calloway was a Captain in the United States Medical Corps, serving in various base hospitals in this country. He did not go overseas. He was a devoted member and worker in the Baptist Church, a Mason and Shriner. For several years he was medical examiner for the Woodmen of the World in Alabama.

Many relatives and friends from Clanton attended the funeral at Birmingham Monday.

WALTER C. PATTERSON DIED

Walter C. Patterson, age 48 years, died last Saturday night at his home in the Poplar Springs community. He was buried at Chestnut Creek Sunday by Mell Martin. The funeral was conducted by Rev. W. P. Lowery. Mr. Patterson is survived by his wife and eight children.

Mt. Pleasant Wins Over Methodists

On last Friday afternoon the boys basketball team from the Clanton Methodist Church went down to defeat at the hands of the Mt. Pleasant Jr. High School team, 19-4.

This game was more exciting and interesting than the one-sided score indicates, for it was fought in a clean, clear-cut manner, both teams displaying real sportsmanship.

The Methodist boys were unable to break the defense formed by the Mt. Pleasant boys, as they were limited to one field goal. The other two points came by fouls.

Curtis Traywich flashed his usual good shooting ability for the winners by netting the ball for 13 points.

Parker and Cecil Traywick played a great defensive game at guard position. These two teams meet again next Friday, March 6th, at 3:15 on the Mt. Pleasant court.

The Clanton boys won over the Mt. Pleasant team Saturday night in a very lively and interesting game. The Mt. Pleasant boys overcame a 9 point lead and tied the score 16-all with one and one-quarter minutes to go, only to lose at this juncture of the game, when Busby and McMurray made two long shots from near center, giving the Clanton boys a 4-point margin.

Curtis Traywick was again high point man for the Mt. Pleasant team, lopoing the ball for 12 points. The lights were somewhat confusing to the visitors, as they were unable to pass the ball systematically without fumbling.

Everyone is invited to see the game between these teams next Friday. Come! Pull for your favorite team.—R. B. Johnson.

CUTTING SCRAPE AT MAPLESVILLE SATURDAY

In a difficulty at Maplesville last Saturday night Glenn Chandler inflicted terrible wounds on the body of Joe Deloney with a pocket knife. Deloney was cut so badly that it required about three hours time for a doctor to sew him up.

Chandler was brought to Clanton and put in jail. The case will be investigated by the grand jury, and it is expected that others will be involved in the mix-up that resulted in the cutting.

RETURNED FROM FLORIDA

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Franklin have returned to their home in Clanton after spending the past winter at Arcadia, Florida. According to Mr. Franklin they had a delightful time, enjoying good health and fine weather throughout their stay. Since Christmas it was said there was a rather unusual amount of rain for that section, which is exactly the opposite of what we have had in Alabama.

IN MEMORY OF OLIN RANDOLPH CAGLE

Olin Randolph, 11 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Cagle of Bethany community, died at Central Alabama Hospital in Clanton early Wednesday morning, February 25. Randolph had suffered from an attack of appendicitis since Sunday before; he was brought to the hospital Tuesday morning and operated on shortly before noon Tuesday. He was found to be in very bad condition, the doctor and nurses said, and it was even a surprise to them that he ever came out from under the ether alive; but he did and was conscious almost to the end.

The little fellow endured terrible pain and suffering both before and after the operation, but he endured it with a fortitude that was amazing. It was heart-rending for the loving parents to sit by his little bed and hear his numerous calls for water and were not permitted to give him any. Such things are terrible to bear, but under such circumstances we can only submit to the Almighty God who knoweth best and who doeth all things well. It was best that Randolph go just as he did.

Before a house filled with friends and relatives, the funeral was conducted by Rev. J. D. Hughes at Bethany Thursday at 11 o'clock. Prof. Harris, with his school children from Enterprise school, who were school- and play-mates of Randolph, were present at the funeral and brouvht lots of pretty flowers and placed them on the little casket. The throngs of people present only serve to show with what esteem and love Randolph was held, and the love and respect the many friends of the family have. There were relatives of Mrs. Cagle present from Bessemer and Sylacauga.

MOBILE STICK WIELDERS SELECT MARINE TITLE

Washington, D. C., Mar. 2.—Ambitious baseball teams of the Southern League who wish to cop the pennant this year will have to "tell it to the Marines." For "The Marines" was the name selected from among 1,050 suggestions for a scrappy title that would best fit the Mobile baseball club, according to word received at Marine Corps Headquarters here today.

Major General Ben H. Fuller, commandant of the Marine Corps, received a letter from Mayor Leon Schwarz, of Mobile, announcing the fighting nickname of the Alabama bat wielders. Mayor Schwarz wrote: "We feel that if the members of our baseball team can get the fighting spirit of the U. S. Marines, we will have a pennant winning club at all times."

The selection of the title was approved by a board of judges, following a lievly contest conducted by Mobile newspapers. Byrd Douglas, president of the club, sounds a note of warning to the other league teams when he says, "The name 'Marines' fully signifies just the type of battling team we'll put on the field this season."

Attention was called Tuesday by L. E. Diefenderfer, local Goodyear Tire dealer, to the announcement that the Goodyear factory at Gadsden has been placed at peak production.

The factory has begun to turn out 6,500 tires a day, said Mr. Diefenderfer. This is an increase of 1,000 tires a day over what has been produced in recent months. The limit of production in the plant is said to be 6,500 tires a day.

STILL PAYING CENTRAL FEES OF PEOPLES TELEPHONE CO.

Some few are still paying up central fees to the Peoples Telephone Company. Up to the present there have been a total of 202 to pay their fees. Better service is being given this year than for the past several years, and there is nothing to prevent phoneholders getting good service all the time. Of course, there will naturally be interferences caused from one thing and another. But the minute that you realize something is wrong, you should locate the trouble. If it is something wrong with your phone or the line, fix it and don't wait for somebody else on the line to do it. And if you are positive the trouble is in Clanton, make your complaint to Mr. Giles or to T. E. Wyatt at The Union-Banner office, and every effort will be made to get it straightened out. Don't come up here and say that you have not got central in a month; but let your troubles be known at once, because we want you to get service all the time.

Now, if you have not paid your central fees, do so just as early as you possibly can. If you haven't paid, don't expect the company to tote you on through the year for nothing. Be man enough to not ask for service over your own or anybody else's phone unless you have paid your fees. The company needs the money and you need the service.

CLANTON METHODIST CHURCH

Immediately following the lesson period in our Sunday school next Sunday, the pastor will have a special message for the children. All the school will gather into the auditorium for this service. Do not miss Sunday school next Sunday.

Preaching at 11 a. m., and at 7:30 p. m., by the pastor. All of our efforts in March will go toward the revival that we are to have in our church the week before Easter. We urge that you put this meeting in your prayers and in your plans.

We plan our work and then we work our plan. The worship of God is worth doing right, and we urge that you help us in seeing that everything is done in decency and in order. We are trying to make our services simple and full of the spirit, and yet is dignified and cultured as a Christian service should be. The poorest will feel at home with us. May we not have the pleasure of your presence.

COUNTY CONTRACTS FOR GASOLINE DELIVERY

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County announced Tuesday that they had contracted with Rush Burnett for delivery of gasoline and oils to the county road working crews for this year.

Elsewhere is an advertisement in this paper asking for bids on this job. This advertisement was ordered by the Commissioners Monday; and after it was printed, they decided to withdraw it, and go ahead and award the contract. Therefore, the advertisement is of no use, as the contract has already been awarded.

SINGING AT PROVIDENCE NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Central Singers will meet at Providence church next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Singers all over the county, or anywhere else, are invited to come and help.

Concord was the meeting place last Sunday afternoon, and the singing was good. We were very glad to have Prof. G. C. Weldon with us last Sunday afternoon, and hope he comes back again. Uncle Bob Grant asked me Monday morning: "Well, how was the singing yesterday?" Of course the answer was in the affirmative, and I added: "We always have good ones." Mr. Grant then said: "Yes, I notice that's what you say about them in the Banner every week."

Yes, I plead guilty of boosting the Central Singing Society through The Union-Banner, but I do not exaggerate it a bit. Now, the best way I know for you to affirm what I always say about the singings is to come to them and see and hear for yourself. It came to my ears that a member of our society had slipped off from home—that is, he had gone to another singing—and had made the assertion that the Central Singing Society was not doing much. All we have to say about this is that this good brother member has surely been absenting himself considerably from the Central Singing Society; because no one who has been attending regularly could make such a statement. The society started off fine and with lots of determination, and it has been getting better ever since.

So, everybody come and let's boost it to the top, and not be satisfied until we have made the boost entirely good.—T. E. Wyatt, Secretary.

PLAY DAY FRIDAY MARCH THE 13TH

Schools of County Will Unite In Program of Fun and Frolic

From the office of the County Superintendent of Education, we secured the following statement relative to the plans for Chilton County School Play Day, which will be held at the Chilton County High School building in Clanton on Friday, March 13:

Our Play Day will be had on Friday, March 13. We would be glad if all students and teachers in the county would be present. Of course we expect the teachers to be present, and all the pupils that will come. Of course we cannot make it mandatory that the children come to the play day, but we expect you to urge everyone to come that can possibly do so. No schools will be in session on that day. All children who attend the play day will be given credit as for regular attendance in school. Each teacher will be expected to keep a record of the attendance of the pupils under his or her instruction in the regular school work.

We hope to make this a red letter day in the county schools. We are expecting newspaper men here who will in all probability want a picture of those in attendance for publication in one or more of the daily papers.

We are highly pleased with the cooperation received so far from the teachers of the county. The committee is working hard to get everything in good shape, but of course it will take the cooperation of every teacher, pupil, and official to make the day a success, and I am sure that you will be glad to lend your efforts in this direction. One of the things that we are most anxious about is the parade. This will begin at the County High School strictly at 9:00 o'clock, and we trust that everyone can be present at that time. Those in charge will give instructions as to the route of the parade, etc.

The spelling bee will be held in the County High School auditorium immediately following the parade. We are expecting a state official to do the pronouncing. Each school is expected to send one contestant. You may choose your method of selecting one to represent your school. Two of the best spellers in the county spelling contest will go to Jacksonville to represent Chilton County in the spelling contest to be held there on March 21.

We are just as anxious to have the parents present on this day as we are to have the pupils. We would be very glad to see all of Chilton County turn out on this day. If they will it will be a great day for all of us; and please let the parents know that we are anxious to have them present.

Pitts And Foshee Get Endorsements

Judge Kennamer Requested To Give Appointments To Two Chilton County Republicans

Petitions of endorsement have been sent to United States Judge, Chas. B. Kennamer, in favor of Percy M. Pitts for Referee in Bankruptcy at Montgomery, and Marion D. Foshee for Clerk of the United States Court at Montgomery.

Appointments for these two offices will be made by Judge Kennamer, who has been appointed and confirmed as the successor of Judge Clayton.

The endorsements of Foshee and Pitts which have been signed by a number of the leading Republicans of Chilton County say:

"We feel that the Republicans of Chilton County are entitled to consideration in this matter. Our county has been consistently Republican for the last thirty years; and since it is the only Republican county in the Middle District, it seems to us that our county is entitled to be considered in the selection of such officers as referee in bankruptcy and clerk of the United States Court in the district in which our county is situated, especially in view of the fact that we have worthy Republicans who are well qualified."

Mr. H. G. Boyd and Family, of Selma, was in Clanton Sunday.

CHEVROLET AGAIN LEADS FIELD IN PRODUCTION

Chevrolet new car registrations in the United States for December lead all other makes, according to figures just made public.

With 31,609 new Chevrolet sixes titled in the domestic market during the last month of 1930, the company exceeded by 2,000 units the second leading make. Figures so far reported indicate that the relative position of Chevrolet in the lead should be maintained for the month just ended, particularly since Chevrolet's January production was 70,000 units.

December was the first month in the history of the automobile that six cylinder cars led the field in deliveries to consumers. While Chevrolet in 1927 and again in 1928 was first in manufacturing and sales in the industry, the company's performance in those years was based on the old four-cylinder car. Since the change-over from a four to a six in 1929, Chevrolet has forged ahead to this leading position.

This passing of leadership to the six-cylinder automobile is interpreted in automotive circles as indicating a growing public preference for the larger, multiple-cylinder car, when it combines operating economy with an initial price range in the lowest priced field. The current Chevrolet models are two inches longer than last year despite prices ranging from $20 to $40 lower than the 1930 models.

MINERAL SPRINGS

The United Singing Society met at this place last Sunday. A large crowd attended, but more would have been appreciated. Directors for the afternoon were, Mr. Archie Glasscock, Z. Y. Appleton, Elijah Glasscock, and Posey Cleckler.

Organists were Miss Gyula Collins and Mrs. W. C. Erwin. The singing was enjoyed by all.

We thank the people of other communities for their help, and we especially thank the members of the society for their interest in this place.

Health of this place is not very good. Miss Birtie Lou Gore is sick. We hope her a speedy recovery. Mr. John Bean is also confined in bed with rheumatism.

Mrs. Anna Gore is better after a severe illness.

Miss Ruby Davis spent the week end with Misses Versie and Lovey Hilyer.

Misses Versie and Lovey Hilyer, Laura Martin and Ruth Kate Heflin were guests of Misses Lurla and Lola Vinzant Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Hilyer of Collins Chapel were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Paschel Sunday.

Our Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. is mighty good. We invite everybody to come out and be with us. The young people are very good to attend, but what we need is more parents. Come on parents, let's show the young people that we haven't lost all of our vim. Let's all see which one can beat the other there Sunday and Sunday night.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish, through the columns of The Union-Banner, to express as best we can our many thanks for the courtesies and sympathetic help extended us during the recent illness and death of our little boy, Randolph. We especially thank Drs. Marcus and Gragg and the nurses at the Central Alabama Hospital, as well as Mr. J. Mell Martin, the undertaker. May God richly bless you all is our sincerest prayer.—Mr. and Mrs. Lou P. Cagle.

CARD OF THANKS

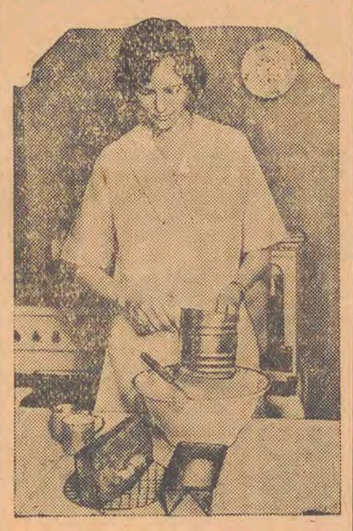
Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow us space to express our thanks to Dr. Gragg and the nurses at Central Alabama Hispotal for their kindness to our wife and mother during her recent illness. We also wish to express our thanks to the many other friends who were so good in extending aid and assistance to us in many ways.

We are thankful that through the help of sympathizing friends and the good work of Dr. Gragg and the nurses, our mother has been spared to return home to us.—Newt Wyatt and family.

The brass industry certainly is lucky. About the time it lost the brass railing market the saxaphone market was opened up for it.

...SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING



By GRACE VIALL GRAY

ARE YOU HOSPITABLE?

Are you hospitable, really—in the good old-fashioned way for which the South is famous? If not, I expect it is because you feel swamped with the many de mands that modern, Twentieth century living puts upon its women, and have just fallen out of the way of extending informal invitations to friends to share your meal, whatever it may be, on a few minutes' notice.

If this is what has happened to you, why not get back into the habit of easy hospitality right away and start tonight by asking some one to drop in and take "pot luck?"

Serve the regular, simple meal you were planning, only make it a bit more interesting and appetizing by the addition of one of the many quick loaf breads that can be made with self-rising flour, the newest innovation in home baking.

Orange bread, for example, is delicious and has the merits of being economical, quick and simple. If you will follow this recipe exactly, you will have a splendid addition to the evening meal that will give it all the flourish of a specially prepared "company" dinner:

Orange Bread.

2 tbsp. fat
½ cup sugar
2 cups self-rising flour
1 cup milk
1 egg
½ cup candied orange peel or the grated rind of 1 orange
½ cup nut meats, broken into small pieces

Mix together the fat, sugar and flour; add the milk and egg. Beat until well blended; add the orange peel and nuts. Pour the mixture into a greased bread pan and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for an hour.

Sounds easy, doesn't it? It is! And remember, self-rising flour needs only one sifting and no baking powder and salt are needed, as they are already blended by the miller in the correct proportions.

OLIN RANDOLPH CAGLE

Editor Union-Banner:

If you will please allow me a small space in your esteemed paper, I wish to write a few lines, though I realize that I am not much of a writer; and language utterly fails me to express what I would like to say; or what I feel it my duty to say, in regard to the great services, love and interest shown by the friends and neighbors for Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Cagle in the sickness and death of their little son, Randolph.

The great services rendered, and heart-felt sympathy and love can be seen and felt in our hearts. But language fails us to tell it. No, the Christian spirit is not dead. Oh! How wonderful to have such neighbors and friends.

But dear reader, did you ever think or realize that there is nothing but death strong enough to make us feel and realize the great depth of love in the human heart? But you say, the bereavement, such sorrow and pain. But dear friend, would there be any such pain and sorrow, if there was no love?

Oh, the unfathomable love of God our Father so loved the world, not good, but wicked, sinful men and women. Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour, this Son nailed to the cross, there to hang, bleed and suffer until death relieved him. Our sins laid on him, nailed to the cross with Him. God, our Father, paid the penalty for us, and is satisfied, reconciled to us. But are we reconciled to Him? Oh, the great debt we owe to Him and to our fellowman. Can we ever pay it, with love and service?

Little Randolph was my little grandson, and I have known him all his life. He was of a bright and happy disposition; was always kind and respectful to me, and also his father and mother, and all others. It was indeed touching to see his little school chums and friends pass by his little bier, and see their little weeping eyes and tears. And the wonderful and heart-soothing sermon preached by Brother Hughes. Oh, how much easier and heart-soothing for a minister of God to precah the funeral of a true Christian or a little child.—E. L. Manning.

Lesson for March 8

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: I am the Lord.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:25-37.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Real Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Real Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving and Sharing.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Stewardship of Life.

I. How to Inherit Eternal Life (vv. 25-38).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 25). The term "lawyer" here means one versed in religious law—the Scriptures, not lawyer in our modern sense of that term. It would more nearly correspond to our theological professor. The lawyer's object was to trip Jesus, to induce him to take such a stand as would weaken his influence as a teacher. He expected Jesus to set forth some new ceremonies which would conflict with or disparage the law of Moses.

2. Jesus' question (v. 26). Though Jesus knew the motive of the lawyer, he did not evade his question. He sent him to the law, the field which was familiar to him. He thus robbed him of his own weapon.

3. The lawyer's reply (v. 27). He made an intelligent answer, declaring that the entire content of the law was embraced in love to God and man. This expresses the whole of human duty.

4. Jesus' reply (v. 28). The straightforward answer went to the heart of the lawyer. Perfect love to God and man is truly the way of life. No man has yet had nor can have such love. His sinful condition precludes its possibility. Man's failure to measure up to this requirement is his condemnation. The lawyer keenly felt this thrust. He was defeated on his own grounds and convicted of guilt.

II. Who Is My Neighbor (vv. 29-37).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 29). This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience, and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a captious question. Lawyer-like he sought to get off by raising a question as to the meaning of words.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 30-37). Jesus' reply more than answered the lawyer's question. In the Parable of the Good Samaritan he makes clear who is a neighbor, and also what it means to be a neighbor and what loving a neighbor means. Christ's answer had a double meaning. He not only made clear who is my neighbor, but made it clear that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor.

a. Who is my neighbor? This destitute and wounded man, left on the wayside by the robbers, is a man who needs a neighbor. My neighbor, therefore, is the one who needs my help, whether he lives next door or on the other side of the world. It does not regard locality, nationality, or blood relation.

b. What being a neighbor means. Our supreme concern should not be "Who is my neighbor?" but "Whose neighbor am I?" To be a neighbor is: (1) To be on the look-out for those in need of our help (v. 33). It is keen to discern the needs of those with whom it is brought into contact. (2) To have compassion on the needy (v. 33). Christ's compassion was aroused as he came into contact with those who were suffering and in need. (3) To give to those in need (v. 34). Love does not calculate the cost of its actions. Whenever there is calculation of cost, there is the expression of selfishness. Many are willing to give money to help the poor and needy but are unwilling personally to minister to them. The true neighbor gives himself as well as his money.

(4) To bind up wounds (v. 34). If we have eyes to discern, we shall see many wounds about us that need attention. (5) To set the helpless ones on our beasts while we walk (v. 34). This is the proof of the genuineness of our love. Those who are like Christ will deny themselves in order to have something to give to those who are in need. (6) To bring to the inn and take care of the unfortunate (v. 34). Genuine love does not leave its service incomplete. True love follows up the needy. (7) To give money (v. 35). It costs a good deal to be a neighbor. Love is the most expensive thing in the world. It cost God his only Son. It cost Jesus Christ his life.

This parable has been through the centuries the classic illustration of true Christian neighborliness.

Born of God

"He that loveth is born of God," therefore let us "keep our friendships in repair." Let us cultivate the spirit of friendship, and let the love of Christ develop it into a great love not only for our friends but for all humanity!—Henry Drummond.

Difficulties are God's errands; and when we are sent upon them we should esteem it a proof of God's confidence.—Henry Ward Beecher.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by C. E. Stapp, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County.

FEDERAL FARM BOARD

Washington dispatches bring the news that the Senate passed the independent offices appropriation bill, including an additional $100,000,000 for the revolving fund of the federal farm board. The amendment to prohibit the farm board from speculating in wheat and cotton was defeated after hours of heated debate.

The fact that the Cotton Stabilization Corporation today has on hand over a million and a quarter bales of cotton at an average price of more than 16 cents, with a loss of some $40,000,000 not including carrying charges, is rather good evidence of speculation, as the word is commonly understood. However, in the hearing before the Senate agriculture committee, Senator McKellar brought out some significant facts while questioning Alexander Legge, chairman of the federal farm board. Legge stated that when 100 bales of actual cotton were sold to a mill, the government agency bought 100 bales of cotton futures, which made their position "the same as if they had not sold any cotton;" later he tried to explain the necessity for this as due to the policy of giving the farmer the option to specify, "by call," the date on which his particular cotton was to be sold by the cooperative association, but the argument was not convincing because only a small part of the total cotton on hand is taken on this optional basis. It was made clear that this is in no sense the familiar hedge transaction, in which the buyer of actual cotton sells an equal amount of futures to protect himself against fluctuations, up or down, in the market, and when he sells the actual cotton, buys back the futures and "undoes the hedge," or releases the protection. Rather it is the reverse of the hedge transaction.

Chairman Legge tried to show these transactions as "a little complicated," but Senator McKellar made them out to be quite simple when he asked: "Mr. Legge, do you think that it is right for an agency of the government like this to go on the futures market and buy coton so that the farmer may get the benefit of it if it goes up, and let the government stand the loss if cotton goes down?" Legge answered that "they are not, in any sense, an agency of the government;" but the senator pointed out that "the cooperatives could not possibly engage in speculating in cotton in this way, unless the government furnished the money." Quibbling over a word does not change the facts.

The whole purpose of the cooperative plan is to provide orderly marketing and prevent the immediate sale and sacrifice of a commodity. That is a sound policy. Apparently, what the farm board is doing is impounding a commodity. It has been tried with disastrous results in coffee, sugar and other commodities and has been proven unsound, for it is contrary to the well-established principle of "supply and demand." The so-called revolving fund of the farm board is an impounding fund, for the cooperatives begin with so much cotton and as sales are made, futures are purchased in replacement. At the end of the year, it is reasonable to suppose that the Cotton Stabilization Association will be called upon to take up a few more million bales to add to their present supply. Some day, if the price of cotton advances sufficiently, the speculation may be ended and the impounded cotton sold.

If the plan was of benefit to the farmer, there would be some excuse for it. As it is, we would certainly like to see much more investigation on the part of the Senate committee.

No doubt they call the Senate the upper house because it is up in the air most of the time.—Florida Times-Union.

ITEMS OF INTEREST ON COTTON PRODUCTION

(By Walter Parker)

I am an economist and student of the cotton market, and have been for more than thirty years.

I am not a merchant, a spinner, or a producer of cotton.

My interest is the larger welfare of the cotton industry, and the prosperity of the South.

Here is how I see the problem confronting the cotton producers, and its solution:

The cost of producing cotton on the average in the United States is higher than similar costs in Egypt, India, Russia, Brazil and other countries. In order to make a satisfactory profit, in competition with cotton growers in other lands, economic improvements which will result in lower costs of production will have to be introduced on American cotton farms.

The remedy for the American cotton farmers' problem does not lie in destroying or handicapping market outlets for American cotton.

Economic Effect of the Federal Agricultural Marketing Act

The purpose of the Act was to help the farmer.

The effect has been to greatly accelerate the loss of export markets for American cotton.

While the Act is not responsible for Europe's desire to be independent of American cotton, the administration of the Act is responsible for changing that desire into very acute action.

In 1928-29, before the Farm Board attempted control over the market for American cotton, the world consumed 15,076,000 bales of American, and 10,806,000 bales of other growths.

In 1929-30, with the government in attempted control of the market for Americans, the world consumed 13,023,000 bales of American and 12,206,000 bales of other growths.

Since then, substitution of other growths for American cotton has continued at a rapid rate, and in recent months the world has been consuming more foreign grown than American cotton.

Thus we have world consumption of American cotton in 1928-29, 15,000,000 bales; in 1929-30, 13,000,000 bales; in 1930-31 (estimated) 11,000,000.

The present day unpopularity of American cotton results from interference, by the government, with the normal processes of trade. As a consequence, foreign merchants and spinners prefer other growths because the market for other growths responds to the law of supply and requirement, while the market for American cotton does not.

The effect is a rapid reduction in the world surplus of other growths, and a rapid increase in the surplus of American cotton.

Some 2,000,000 farmers are engaged in producing cotton in the United States.

Of these 2,000,000, only about 160,000 farmers and about fifteen per cent of the crop are functioning through the marketing machinery set up by the government.

Normally, more than fifty per cent of the crop is exported.

The export market for cotton is now being lost.

If it be entirely lost, the average crop of American cotton will have to be reduced by about fifty per cent, because, in that case, the only market will be the market supplied by American mills doing a domestic business only.

In that case, about 1,000,000 American cotton growers, or one-half the total number now engaged, will be forced to find other occupation in competition with other workers, or join the bread lines.

Truly, under government control of the American cotton market, the position of the American cotton producer becomes more tragic every day.

The Federal Agricultural Marketing Act violates economic law in a very direct way.

Economic law cannot be violated without imposing a penalty.

The penalty, in the case of cotton, is the loss of the export market. The cotton farmer in the United States is the sufferer. The cotton producer in other lands is the gainer.

ARE FOREIGN MARKETS CLOSED TO AMERICAN COTTON?

It is difficult for an unbiased outsider who is interested in the facts bearing upon the South's present unfortunate cotton predicament to have a clear-cut and correct insight into all the factors involved and to know where the blame should be placed, if blame attaches to any particular method or organization. These cotton leaders appear to differentiate into two well-difined groups—those who support the Farm Board and its policies and those who condemn this body and its revolutionary methods.

Mr. Carl Williams, cotton member of the Farm Board, is quoted by the New Orleans Times-Picayune as saying:

"The Federal Farm Board cannot solve the problem; it is left to the farmer. The Board is doing everything possible and within its power, but we are absolutely helpless in the face of present conditions unless we get complete co-operation from the people of the South." Of course, chipping the responsibility up to the South for restoring better prices and solving a wide-reaching economic problem is nothing more than a search for an alibi. The South is not going to lend a solidly united support to any program. If the South should, the coming crop year, produce 10,000,000 bales, prices would bound upward and Mr. Williams would have his solution handed to him on a silver platter, but he would have done nothing to accomplish it.

But there is another noteworthy factor which Mr. Williams overlooks and that is the sharp decline in the demand for the South's cotton in world markets.

EXPERTS GIVE VIEWS ON COTTON PRICES

F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician of the department of agriculture has released the opinions of 21 leaders of the cotton trade on what price cotton might be expected to bring this year for crops of varying sizes.

The following table represents the average judgment of these men, Gist said:

Bales	Cents
10,000,000	16.50
11,000,000	14.50
12,000,000	12.50
13,000,000	10.20
14,000,000	8.45
15,000,000	7.40

Gist said these estimates are much more optimistic than the judgment of the federal farm board and the economists of the United States department of agriculture. The latter authorities, he said, rather expect a graduated price two cents per pound lower if the varied sized crops materialize.

According to the two opinions if a crop of ten million bales is grown this year the aggregate value would be $825,000,000 and $725,000,000 respectively.

An old timer is one who can remember when a button hook was as important around the house as a can opener now is.

"Martha," said the lady of the house, "is it possible you are thinking of getting married to that young fellow who has been calling on you lately?"

"Yes, ma'am, he's the one."

"But you've only known him three weeks. Do you think that is long enough to know a man before taking such an important step?"

"Well," answered Martha, "it isn't as if he was some new fellow. He's well recommended. A girl I know was engaged to him for quite a long time."

STORRS ADVISES LESS ACREAGE IN COTTON

Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, Friday issued a statement advocating a "very material" reduction in cotton acreage in Alabama this year.

"At least 1,250,000 bales of cotton were in storage and on farms in the State on January 1st of this year, despite the fact that the State produced only 1,495,000 bales last year. This is an unanswerable reason why farmers of the State should reduce their cotton acreage this year," he said.

"Statistics compiled in the warehouse and gin division of the Department of Agriculture show on January 1st this year 1,026,000 bales of cotton were stored in warehouses in Alabama under warehouse receipts. In addition a large quantity is in storage at Mobile Docks under bill of laden, and an unknown quantity remains on the farms of the State."

LITTLE ELOUISE HOLLY DIED

Elouise Holly, age 4 years, 7 months, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Holly, died at the Central Alabama Hospital Monday, February 16. She had been sick since December 20th, 1930. Was first taken with malaria fever, then the flu, which developed pneumonia, and it settled on her lung, forming an abcess, which doctors failed to remove with medicine.

The days that were to come were a hope of better, but she grew weaker and weaker. Though she would have some bright days, when it would seem she was going to get well, then she would fall into high fevers again. At last Dr. Gragg said all had been done that could be done without an operation. So she was carried to the hospital on Sunday, February 15, for an X-ray. Afterwards it was decided something greater than medicine must be done for her relief.

The following Monday she was admitted to the hospital for an operation of the lung, and it was on the operating table God saw fit to call her away. Weep not dear loved ones, for she has gone home to Jesus.

Dear little Elouise, you have left us,
And your smiles we see no more;
Our hearts are filled with sadness,
For no time can heal the sore.

Soft and bright the stars are shining,
Spreading o'er a lovely grave;
Where lies the one we loved so dearly,
Whom we tried so hard to save.

The secretary-treasurer invites all, especially Baptists, to tune in the night of March the eighth, which is next Sunday night, remember.

NOTICE TO POULTRYMEN

The poultry department at Auburn in recent communication with County Agent Stapp, has asked him to call the poultrymen's attention to the value of sanitary porches for baby chicks.

Mr. Stapp advises that sanitary porches be built ten feet wide by the length of the brooder house, floored with one-fourth inch hardware cloth and walled up and covered with 1-inch poultry netting and same placed in front of brooder house so that the floor of the porch is of the same elevation as that of the brooder house, will give chicks plenty of range and keep them off of the ground until they are ten or twelve weeks of age.

After the chicks are ten to twelve weeks of age they are very resistant to coccidiosis and other diseases, and parasites. Mr. Stapp advises that good sanitary porches can be built for a small amount of money and if properly built can be stored for use from year to year.

KUDZU PLANTINGS ARE BEING MADE

Auburn, Ala., Mar. 2.—Kudzu, a valuable legume, is being introduced to farmers throughout North Alabama this year; and the aim, as expressed by J. T. High, district demonstration agent, is to make it one of the important crops. This, he explained, will require several years, but when farmers become acquainted with its merits and advantages he is sure that they will produce it on a large scale.

To introduce it the old demonstration method is being used, Mr. High said. The goal is to plant this spring 5,000 kudzu crowns for demonstration in each county. The county demonstration agents will arrange and direct these demonstrations. Several farmers in each county are expected to participate.

Each planting will be small but it will be used to produce crowns for other farmers; and, in this way, the crop will be spread from one farm to another. Crowns are very limited this year.

The kudzu movement in North Experiment Station at Auburn and Alabama followed experiments by the by other stations revealing the merits of kudzu and its production requirements. It is a perennial legume which makes an excellent hay, or it may be grazed by livestock, or it may be used as a green feed for poultry. It is also a great soil builder. It has given excellent results in restoring exhausted and gullied soil.

With the spread of kudzu Mr. High sees increased production of livestock on Alabama farms for it will produce valuable hay to feed them. The hay is as good as alfalfa hay and livestock relish it. It produces abundantly anywhere in Alabama.

4-H CLUB BOYS ORGANIZING FOR 1931

County Agent Stapp advises that the 4-H club boys are now setting up their community organizations for 1931 and future years.

Mr. Stapp is visiting a number of school communities and asking that boys who want to carry a project in 4-H Club work this year, to organize themselves into a community club with officers and one outstanding citizen of the community as a leader. The following are schools and clubs organized last week:

Baker School—J. W. Hamilton, leader; Willis Baker, president; Julius Foshee, vice president; Morris Thornton, secretary; Earl Lowery, Treasurer. Other members of the club are A. J. Chastine, Marvin Scarbrough, Glenn Bradberry, Hershal Hamilton, Johnnie Culpepper, Grady Williams, Jr., Bill Carroll, James Parrish, Zane Lowery, Joe D. Holley, Harvey Rowell, Lloyd Foshee.

Isabella School—Earle Thomas, leader; James Deason, president; Clifford Manning, vice president; Homer Morgan, secretary-treasurer. Other members of the club are John Griffin, Dave Griffin, Winford Lecroy, Melvin White, Sidney Griffin, Clifford Davenport, James Calfee, Dorman Williams, Harry Fox, Van Williams, Jimmie Ware, Walter Lecroy, Homer Lecroy, Elree Calfee, Andrew Jones, Renfro Oden, Robert Calfee, Berman Cadle, George DeShazo, Arlie Bone, Norwood Jones, Woodrow Morgan, Charles Griffin, Pierce Griffin, Crayton Deramus, Mitchell White, and Thomas Lenoir.

Maplesville School—To be selected later—Lindsey McAfee, president; Jesse Hayes, vice president; Thurston Batson, secretary-treasurer. Other members of the club are Edward Hayes, Horace Wallace, Calvin Smith, Tommie Williams, Bartie Smith, Howard Smitherman, Billy Smitherman, Henry Smitherman, Thomas Elliott, Monroe Hayes, Van Potts, H. M. Nix, Jr., Frank Brown, Raymond Oden, Louis McGee, C. V. Smith, Joe Latham, J. E. Wallace, Jr., Melton Wallace, Hershal Shanks, Clarence Dennis, Williard Hicks, Clifford Bowden, J. C. Latham, Charles Shoults, Tommie Headley and Charles Parnell.

Stanton School—A. B. Jones, leader; Jack Jones, president; Woodrow Jones, vice president; Merritt Walker, secretary-treasurer. Other members of the club are Ben Bearden, Buck Burnett, John Harris, Melvin Carter, Pettus Carter, Plato Chambers, Cecil Walker, Ernest Harris, and Wilton Grover.

Mr. Stapp did not visit Fairview community, but found seven or eight Fairview community boys attending school at Isabella. Upon suggestion of Mr. Stapp, these boys went into session and elected officers and deferred electing the adult leader until they could meet with the other boys of their community. Marvin Durbin was elected president, Cecil McKee, vice president, and Delus Culp, secretary-treasurer. Other members of the club are Winston Culp, Alton Culp, Clint Billingsley, J. P. Poole, O. T. Scott, Morris Keen, Carlos Owen, Baxter Popwell, Julius Mullins, Woodrow Durbin, Warren Keen, John Nelson and S. L. Broadhead, Jr.

We have been informed that Fairview club was the only club organized with officers last year. Mr. Stapp states that the splendid work done by this club is largely responsible for the plan to organize communities all over the county this year.

Mr. Stapp is offering a silver cup with the name of the officers of the club engraved thereon, to the club doing the best all round 4-H club work this year. Mr. Stapp expects to isit as many other school communito visit as many other communities in the county as he can within the next three weeks and help the boys set up their community organization. The boys are selecting various projects, among which are cotton, corn, three pigs, litter of pigs, purebred calves and grade beef calves, garden and poultry.

GASOLINE SHOW INTERESTING

A unique gasoline demonstration at Dief's Service Station for the benefit of those among motorists who are skeptical of the virtues of the new Pan Am Ethyl gasoline as compared to an ordinary fuel was held Wednesday morning. A large gathering of interested automobile owners witnessed the performance. The above is a picture of the demonstration.

A unique device developed by General Motors research engineers as a means of measuring the efficiency obtained from different types of gasoline was brought to Clanton through arrangements made by Dief's Service Station, local distributors of Pan Am gasoline.

The apparatus, which is pictured above, is mounted on the rear of an automobile. It consists of a single cylinder high compression motor to which is attached a number of instruments which indicate the variations in anti-knock value, power and speed, while the machine is in operation, viz: a special carburetor, an electric generator, and a third device to indicate anti-knock rating. This is attached to the combustion chamber of the motor, and consists of a small steel tube at the end of which is located a steel diaphragm. This diaphragm has its position inside the combustion chamber of the motor. When fuel knock (or carbon knock) is developed the high pressure waves which are set up, cause the diaphragm to vibrate and this in turn causes a steel pin to bounce up and down. One end of the pin then comes into contact with a form of electric switch which operates lights on the instrument board indicating the exact reaction of gasoline to high compression.

An electric tachometer measures the differences in revolutions per minute. The generator is attached to a watt meter. The arrangement on the carburetor enables the operator to feed either Ethyl or regular gasoline into the motor. The difference in power is registered on the watt meter, which, together with the other instruments shows the comparative efficiency in fuels.

The demonstration was in charge of Stanley Beck, lubrication engineer of the Pan Am Corporation, of New York. It was successfully shown that from the use of this product we obtain (1) Complete elimination of knock. (2) Added power on hills. (3) Faster pickup. (4) Lessened gear shifting. (5) Cooler motors. (6) All round increased performance.

MARCH WEATHER FORECASTS

A popular calendar—The Cardui Calendar, predicts general storms with rain and snow for the first half of March, but states that the latter half of the month will be predominantly clear.

This calendar publishes Devoe's forecasts, which have proven quite accurate for many years, and are firmly believed in by large number of people. It is popular, however, because of the large readable figures and other information, besides the weather forecasts. It is said to contain the most complete compilation of national and state legal holidays, feast days, etc.

The Chattanooga Medicine Company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., manufacturers of Thedford's Black-Draught and Cardui, are the publishers of this calendar.

EVERGLADES NATIONAL PARK

Imagine, if you can, a vast area of some two thousand miles of tropical terrain in the southernmost portion of the Florida peninsula, a terrain marked by wide, winding rivers and little glistening lakes. Imagine miles of white sand beaches fringed with groves of tall, graceful palm trees. Imagine dense jungles of tropical trees, draped in strands of lacy Spanish moss. Imagine groves of cypress and mangroves, choked with trailing vines and vivid with rare tropical blossoms, and natural rookeries where thousands of white-plumed egrets, blue herons and long-legged cranes nest and chatter. Picture marine gardens where one can look, through glass bottomed boats, upon wondrously strange and colorful fishes and waving sea plants, clumps of coral. Who wouldn't wish to return again and again to such scenes as these? Such a place will be developed in Southern Florida in the near future, it is said.

THORSBY SECTION

(S. E Norton, Manager)

"The Family Failing," was the title of a one act play given last Saturday night at Helen Jenkins Hall by a group of members of the Helen Keller Literary Society. It appeared to be a veritable "Comedy of Errors," each participant working at cross punoses. There was plenty of action and streneous effort to marry young couples who were not in love, but whom they thought ought to be. After considerable effort, the mess was unscrambled, each got their heart's desire. Vinson Sutlive and Miss Thoroman had charge of the rehearsals, and the play went without a hitch. The chief criticism was the fact that so few of the actors have learned the art of speaking so they can be understood. They do not enunciate clearly by finishing a word before they start another.

To really enjoy a play or a song, or an actress, one must be able to near and understand what is said or sung. And cooparitively few people have learned the art of doing this. Listening intently is quite a strain and when one does it and gets nothing, it hurts.

Teachers are almost powerless to correct these errors because they are a part of anothr phase of "Family Failings." When the babies begin to try to talk they make some queer noise for words; fond parents come back at baby with more stuff of the same sort, which they call "baby talk" and continue to do so during the formative period of the God given faculty of speech, so that they learn what they hear, and they are crippled for live in this important function, which can only be cured by patient, persistent and painstaking effort on the part of the one who is afflicted because they have never learned the proper use of their vocal organs.

The Thomas Jr. High School presents a play entitled, "Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick" at the Thorsby public school Saturday night March 7th. The admission will be 10 and 20 cents. The proceeds will go to the two schools. The players will bring an excellent quartet.

After the musical numbers a comedy in one act, "The Family Failing," was given. The cast of characters was as follows: Brown Russell, Myrtis Canington, Kathryn Lenoir, Albert Mims, Mayme Johnson, George Nix, Mary Ruth and Leo Spivey. The desire of two sisters to run everything was brought out in an amusing way as "The Family Failing."

Thursday and Friday of this week term examinations will take place at the Institute.

On March 21 the faculty of Thorsby Institute, with the help of some of the alumni, will give a play.

How its strengthening, invigorating, health-giving ingredients go to the very root of ailments that have previously baffled all medicines and treatments tried. Read the statement recently made by Captain Wm. A. McQueen, Greenville, Ala.

"I want to go on record as saying that for chronic stomach troubles and indigestion, I don't believe there is anything that will even approach Ferrac. I was in the hospital in Montgomery for eight weeks for an operation, and when the operation was over, nausea set in that is seemed impossible to control and I actually thought that I would die from it, and so did everybody else. When everything at hand in the hospital had been exhausted, I sent to Greenville for a bottle of Ferrac, and as wonderful as it may seem, after the fourth dose my nausea had entirely ceased, and I was astually eating and enjoying light meals to the astonishment of every one in the hospital. POULTRY

WIRE FLOOR IN BROODER AVOIDS CHICK TROUBLES

A wire floor for the first three weeks in the brooder house has become quite popular among poultry raisers. They have had much better luck in raising the chicks than they have ever had on sand or straw as litter.

The simplest way of putting a wire floor in the brooder house is to build it in sections so that it may be readily removed when the chicks are three weeks old. Build good, strong frames, using 1x4 lumber so that the wire floor will be 4 inches off the regular brooder house floor. To take care of the chicks and of the brooder stove it means walking on the wire floor; so each section must be strengthened by cross pieces. The wire should be a hardware cloth with one-half inch mesh so there is no chance of the chicks getting their feet caught, and yet allowing the droppings to fall through.

As a floor covering in under the screen you may use clean sand. It will tend to fill up the cracks in the floor, preventing drafts through the floor, and also tend to absorb some of the ammonia from the droppings.

Using a wire floor prevents the chicks from eating anything they should not eat. There is no chance for them to fill up on litter or to eat the droppings. This not only means that you will be able to raise a larger per cent of the chicks, but they will as a whole make better growth. You will find that it will pay for the cost of installing the wire floor in a single season. Aside from that there is real satisfaction in having a really good bunch of chicks minus a bunch of culls or stunted chicks.

After the chicks are three weeks old, the wire floor should be removed and most anything may be used as litter, provided it is clean and will absorb moisture. Clean sand probably will be the cheapest as well as the most saving in labor.

EGGS TO BE CHEAPER AND POULTRY HIGHER

Auburn, Ala., Mar. 2.—Though egg prices in January, 1931, reached the lowest point since 1910, according to Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, Prof. G. A. Trollope of Auburn urges Alabama poultrymen not to abandon their poultry enterprises but to cull closely and cut feed costs, and get baby chicks to reinforce laying flocks next fall. It is thought eggs will be cheaper during the first six months of 1931 than in same period last year.

The outlook for poultry meat prices during the first half of 1931 is that they will be somewhat above those of the first half of 1930. The storage supplies of poultry were short at the beginning of this year and the prospects are that the market receipts for the spring and summer will be less than a year ago—thereby boosting the prices.

Here are Professor Trollope's 1931 recomendations for Alabama poultrymen:

1. Cull closely and sell all hens that are poor producers, since there is a possibility of poultry bringing a better price than eggs this spring. This will mean a ready cash income and will lower the cost of production considerably. Keep enough hens to supply eggs and poultry for home consumption and some for market, but keep the very best.

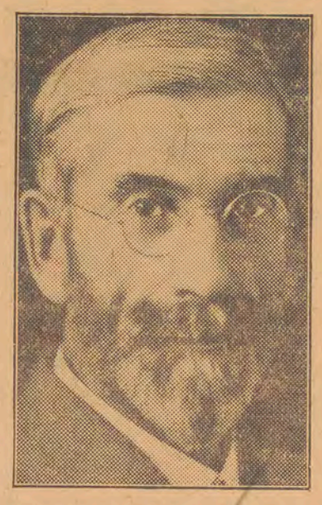
2. Cut feed costs to the bone by utilizing all the available home-grown feeds.

3. By all means get baby chicks again this spring to replace the flock next fall, as all indications are that egg prices will be better at that time.

4. Make plans to produce at least a part of the necessary feed required for the flock at home.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The U. S. Department of Commerce has estimated that 2,995,677 automobiles were sold on the installment plan last year, entailing a credit extension of $1,229,965,000. This compares with 3,559,829 cars and $1,662,768,000 in 1929. However, the 1930 business was considerably above that of 1928.



As reported by the U. S. Department of Labor, retail food prices in the United States declined a little more than 3 per cent between December 15, 1930, and January 15, 1931. For the year ending January 15, 1931, the decline was 14 1-2 per cent.

Both consumption and exports of American cotton are off this year as compared with last. Consumption for the first six months of this season is approximately 850,000 bales from last season and exports for January were 624,631 bales against 728,737 during January, 1930.

President Hoover announced recently that the government would employ within 30 days, directly or indirectly, 450,000 people. This is an increase of 350,000 since the employment program began several months ago. President Hoover pointed out that $500,000,000 out of $700,000,000 "carried in supply bills now before Congress will go to meet the unemployment problem."

Minister Firmly Endorses Sargon

No matter where you go—North, East, South or West—there are thousands who testify that they owe their strength, vigor and well being to Sargon. Rev. Chas. E. Auger,

REV. CHAS. E. AUGER

"I was so weak and rundown I was at the point of complete exhauston. My food disagreed with me, I hardly knew what it was to get a good night's sleep, and I seemed to lose weight and strength continually.

"Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills corrected my troubles speedily. I eat heartily, and my food agrees with me, with none of that former indigestion. I have gained eight pounds and am again strong and vigorous."

AGREEMENT AT GENEVA ONLY

Even when the European powers do go through the motions of harmonizing their differences, they refuse to stay put. In 1927, for example, an economic conference was held at Geneva under the auspices of the League of Nations to devise a program for the removal of trade barriers, mainly tariffs.

Our old friend, "assent in principle," worked overtime. Everyone of the 190 delegates from fifty powers was a unit that these barriers must be eliminated. The moment they got home nationalism asserted itself and they began to erect fresh customs fences.

The Germans, who protester loudest, tightened their restrictions against Poland, while the French enacted a whole new tariff system, which, with its latest developments, almost excludes our motor cars and greatly reduces our film exports.

I cite this failure to arrive at common action to show, as one observer stated, "that the European nations so far have not always been willing to make real sacrifice for the sake of achieving economic and political unity." So long as this feeling prevails, federation is bound to have hard sledding.—Isaac F. Marcosson in the Saturday Evening Post.

NEW MESS HALL FOR SCOUT CAMP

Scout Executive John J. Sigwald, who wil lagain assume the role of camp director at Camp Spring Villa, the council camp for Boy Scouts of the Central Alabama Area Council, announces the reappointment of E. J. Harris of West Palm Beach, Florida, as assistant in charge of the camp commissary department. This will assure that campers will receive good wholesome food, attractively served durnig the encampment at Spring Villa.

A new mess hall, to be completed before camp opens by the Opelika Kiwanis Club, will be an asset to the camp. Already this club has received specifications from Birmingham. The new dining quarters will be fashioned after the army type, and Camping Chairman O. H. Tatum states that it will have a seating capacity of 80 scouts.

No one department of camp life affects the morale of the campers or is such a powerful factor in determining the popularity of the camp as the Commissary Department. For this reason the 1931 Camp Committee is giving special attention to this.

The sanitation and mechanics of handling a large number of scouts at one time will be expertly managed.

Menus for the entire camp will be planned by an experienced dietition. Careful attention will be given to the serving of balanced, wholesome meals—so necessary for growing boys.

The camp cook wil undergo a physical inspection. The Junior Camp leaders, who will also have a thorough physical inspection, are to be the only ones besides the cook to come in direct contact with the food before it is served to the scouts. Dr. Julian Palmer will make a daily inspection of the mess hall, in addition to his daily supervision of camp sanitation and health of the scouts.

Meal times at Camp Spring Villa last year proved a splendid opportunity for morale-building. Following breakfast, while the boys remained seated around the table, they sang scout songs. Singing will be a feature at all meals this year. Since the boys are not allowed to rush away from the mess hall, the tendency will be for them to properly masticate their food, which is essential to good health.

An adult or older boy will be seated at each table to serve as counselor. Camp eating is not at all rowdy but freedom is allowed and the boys thoroughly enjoy hearing the camp bugler blow "Mess" three times a day.

Scouts or parents of scouts in the Central Alabama Area Council should make sure, without further delay, that they have completed plans for at least one or preferably two weeks stay at Camp Spring Villa (near Opelika).

Another article will appear in this paper soon setting forth other phases of camp life. Last year, for the first time, the Council Camp earned recognition from the National Camp Department and an attempt is being made to the end that the 1931 camp should likewise merit such award.

Throughout the State of Alabama farmers are intensely interested in producing and saving better seed this year, according to reports from county agents. This includes cotton, corn, soybeans, and, in fact, all important crops.

On July 8 the first official report of the 1931 cotton crop will be made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It will be a report on acreage only.

Pale and Weak

"I THINK Cardui is a wonderful medicine, for I improved greatly after taking it," says Mrs. A. W. English, of R. F. D. 4, Roanoke, Va. "When I was just a girl of 13, my mother gave this medicine to me, and it did me a great deal of good. I was weak and run-down. After I had taken Cardui awhile, I felt much better.

"In 1924, my health was poor. I felt miserable, and hadn't enough strength to do my housework. It took all my willpower to keep up. I was pale and weak.

"I got Cardui again and took it. My improvement was wonderful. I can recommend Cardui to others, for my health was so much better after I had taken a course of the Cardui Home Treatment."

THE FARMER'S SHIPPING POINT

At the recent Ninth Annual Asphalt Paving Conference, Norman M. Blaney, director of farm-to-market roads of the American Farm Bureau Federation, spoke on "Making every farmer's gate his shipping point."

He pointed out that nearly 5,000,000 farms are located on dirt roads, impassable during many months of the year, and said, "Unless the farmer has a highway from his front gate to his primary market, passable 365 days of the year, he is seriously handicapped."

Every state should consider Mr. Blaney's statement. Millions of dollars have recently been appropriated for road work and will be spent this year. In the beginning of our great highway development it was necessary to use practically all general road funds for main highways. Farm roads were largely left to take care of themselves.

Now to get the most value from our main highways it is imperative that all feeder roads be developed as rapidly as possible.

Modern materials, of the asphaltic type, make it possible to build good roads, passable at all times, at a small cost. Maintenance is likewise low. There is no reason why any state should continue to neglect its farmers in the matter of road building. And it might be pointed out that those localities which lay the ground-work now will be the centers of agricultural prosperity and progress in the future.

NEED BETTER LAWS, NOT MORE LAWS

This country is surfeited with laws. There are so many statutes that it is utterly impossible for the average citizen to be conversant with them, even superficially. This superfluity of statutory law tends to lower general respect for law. It should be the purpose of all legislative bodies to keep down to the minimum the number of legislative enactments.

Fewer laws, and laws of better quality, is the supreme need of the hour throughout the nation, says the Pasadena Star-News.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One of the most important expressions on our Latin-American policy in recent years was that given by Secretary of State Stimson recently in an address in New York at a dinner of the Council of Foreign Relations. In his address Secretary Stimson declared that our policy was noble in conception and had been generally devoted in the past to preserving the independence and promoting the welfare of our sister republics to the south. The statesman fell logically into three parts, in the first of which Secretary Stimson touched on the Monroe Doctrine which he declared was "a declaration of the United States against Europe, not of the United States against Latin-America" and which he said did not assert any control over Latin-American government but was a confirmation of their individual rights as independent nations. In the second part of his statement the Secretary recalled our agreement with five Central American republics not to recognize any government among them coming into power through revolution. This policy, he declared, had prevented much bloodshed in Central America. In the first part of his address Secreary Stimson touched on the policy of embargoing shipments of arms to rebels against established governments in Centra America. This policy, he said, had broken up a disgraceful traffic and had been of great benefit to the Latin-American nations.

In outlining the history of the Monroe Doctrine, Secretary Stimson declared:

"That doctrine far from being an assertion of suzerainty over our sister republics, was an assertion of their individual rights as independent nations. It declared to the world that this independence was so vital to our own safety that we would be willing to fight for it against an aggressive Europe. The Monroe Doctrine was a declaration of the United States versus Europe—not of the United States versus Latin-America."

He quoted John Quincy Adams on our Latin-American policy as declaring:

"The principles upon which the right of independence has been maintained by the South American patriots have been proved not only as identical with those upon which our own independence was asserted and achieved, but as involving the whole theory of government on the emphatically American foundation of the sovereignty of the people and the unalienable rights of men. To a cause reposing upon this basis the people of this country never could be indifferent, and their sympathies have accordingly been, with great unanimity and constancy, enlisted in its favor."

He quoted the statement of Thomas Jefferson to the effect that "We certainly cannot deny to other nations that principle whereon our own government is founded, that every nation has a right to govern itself internally under what forms it pleases, and to change these forms at its own will; and externally to transact business with other nations thruogh whatever organ it chooses, whether that be a king, convention, assembly, committee, president, or whatever it be."

Mr. Stimson then recounted how this policy was reversed under President Wilson in the case of Mexico when our government refused to recognize the government of President Huerta, which was in de facto possession of the country and sought to drive it from power. "Armed conflict," Mr. Stimson continued, "followed with the forces of Mexico and disturbed relations between us and that republic lasted until a comparatively few years ago.

Secretary Stimson then went on to state that the present administration refused to follow the policy of Mr. Wilson and has followed consistently the former practice of this government since the days of Jefferson. And he might have added that very happily our relations with our Latin-American neighbors are now more cordial than for years, in spite of the efforts of internationalists here and nationalists in Europe to disturb these relations by calling Uncle Sam imperialistic in his relations with Latin-America and attempting to sow seeds of distrust against us there. The address of Secretary Stimson was a comprehensive and interesting one and will well bear a careful reading by every student of Pan-American affairs.

BUILD UP THE NAVY

Americans who desire a strong navy for national defense have reason to feel encouraged by recent developments. Secretary of the Navy Adams calling on Speaker Longworth the other day, told him that President Hoover and the administration were desirous of having passed the $74,000,000 warship building bill and a measure authorizing modernization of three battleships at a cost of $30,000,000. Mr. Longworth is said to have informed Mr. Adams that the House would pass the modernization bill and would also pass the $74,000,000 building bill if it became evident that the Senate would pass it. Senator Hale, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, said he would bend every effort to get the building bill passed by the Senate.

This is indeed encouraging news to believers in national defense. Great Britain and other European nations are not hesitting to build their navies up to treaty strength and for Uncle Sam not to do the same thing would be the height of folly. In the London naval agreement we accepted certain naval figures, along with Great Britain. Now if we are to have parity with Great Britain we must build up to the treaty agreement. It is a sure thing that John Bull will not hesitate to keep his efficient navy up to the limit. Our administration at Washington of course, well realizes this and for that reason is urging the passage of the two naval bills mentioned above. To permit the little navy men to cripple our defense by refusing to build up to requirements would be a serious national blunder. And aside from the question of defense why won't a naval building program help as much to provide employment for American labor as any other kind of building program?

Somebody in the United States Senate is going to become original some of these days and begin to discuss problems otherwise than in terms of votes, but if so, some Senate committee will doubtless try him for heresy.

SOME AMERICAN OBSERVATIONS

By Jay Taylor

Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Connecticut, in the order named, are the most densely populated states in the union.

Forty patriotic women's organizations represented at a recent conference in Washington declared in favor of adequate preparedness. These organizations seem to have been overlooked by the Federal Council of Churches and the several peace foundations that specialize in keeping the women of the country "properly informed" on all such questions.

Human rights should be placed above property rights, we are told by a prominent professor. But just what does he mean? In the United States the individual is permitted to possess and enjoy the fruits of his labor to as great a degree as anywhere else in the world. That fact doesn't seem to interfere with his human rights. In Russia, on the other hand, there is very little protection of property rights. The individual there who has had to surrender his property, his earnings and all his accumulations, is virtually a slave to the state. The peasant and working man of Russia today could tell us from their own experiences that property rights are quite essential to human rights.

"A country which makes reasonable preparation for defense is less likely to be subject to hostile attack and less likely to suffer a violation of its rights, which may lead to war," is the way Calvin Coolidge expressed it.

The worst disappointment that could come to the soap-box reds who cry out against unemployment would be to have to go to work.

In view of the black picture the radicals are always painting of the United States, it is surprising that they do not emigrate to the countries they think are better, or to the ones against which Uncle Sam has to put up barriers to keep this country from being swamped by immigrants afflicted with socialism and pauperism.

There is no advertising matter in the Congressional Record, sagely remarks one of our exchanges. If there isn't any advertising in it, what else is there?

It seems that when Congress isn't arguing about something to drink it is arguing about something to eat. Isn't there some way to introduce either vitamins or a kick into oratory?

Representative Frear of Wisconsin has introduced a resolution providing that before any war can start, the people of the nations involved must vote on the question. Under this arrangement the people of a nation sufficiently warlike to vote for war would be able to whip the nation which had voted for peace without resistance. This seems to penalize pacifism too much. Wouldn't it be better to have each nation vote on whether the other nation shall fight?

THE CINDER PILE

(By The Sweeper)

The Sweeper wishes to join the "dough-boys" in rejoicing over the fact that they are to receive a portion of their bonus money in the immediate future. Under the present economic conditions, there are many of the boys who saw service during the war, and who have met the requirements for the bonus, which was to have been paid in full in 1947, who can use a part of that money right now very advantageously.

Some of the opponents of the measure just passed by the national Congress over the veto of President Hoover have said that the payment of these bonus claims at this time would bankrupt the government. Others have expressed the opinion that those who really need the money will not get any of it. Others still say that under the present act and plan for paying off fifty per cent. of the bonus is such that the interest on the amounts paid will eat up the remaining fifty per cent, by the time it comes due in 1947. But be that as it may. The Sweeper is of the opinion that those of the boys who really do not need the money to tide them over the present crisis will not apply for it. Also, we feel that even though the interest may consume the remaining part, the good that will and can be accomplished with what is paid out now will more than overbalance any loss sustained on the future payment.

The Sweeper has from time to time said that we wish to know how our readers like our "colyum" and that we would like to have them write in and tell us about it. May be that some of you folks could offer some suggestion that would improve The Pile. If you don't begin to let us hear from you, we are liable to get the notion into our head like the old negro parson.

The story goes something like this: A certain colored parson who was the leader of a rather good-paying flock felt that there was some dissention among the brothers and sisters relative to re-calling him for another season. The eventful day finally arrived and the parson, somewhat excited arose at the conclusion of the sermon, and after the church had been duly called into conference, put the question squarely up to his congregation, saying, "All in favor of me being yo' preacher fo' 'nuther yeah, let it be known by the razin' of the right han'."

To his complete amazement not a hand went up. A puzzled expression was seen to flit across his brow, and then he exclaimed, "Silence gives consent. I'se yo' preacher fo' 'nuther yeah. Let us be dismissed."

So if you readers don't raise your hand, we are liable to decide like the colored brother, that silence gives consent, and that we are pleasing all of you. Speak right out in meetin' and tell us about it.

Not many clinkers to be found in the ole Cinder Pile this week, so we will have to leave you now, but promise to have more to say next week.—The Sweeper.

MORAL ECHOES

By D. W. Haskew

I was standing by the counter in a drug store and a youngster appearing to be about eighteen years of age, stepped up to the proprietor and said: "Give me three packages of Lucky Strikes." With the movements of a Chesterfield he took one of the tubes of death and placed it between his lips and then touched it off with a flame. The smoke curled from his lips, and then he turned to walk out, saying to the owner of the store over his shoulder, "Charge this to the Old Man." I did not know the youngster, but I am certain that he will never amount to anything in this world. Any young man who forms the habit of cigarettes, and then speaks of his father as "The Old Man," and charging his prodigality to that father, is almost hopeless. But then, a father who will allow a thing like that is about as hopeless as the boy.

The pastor knocked on the door and a little three-year-old girl opened it. She did not know the laws of etiquette, and there she stood with her finger in her mouth saying nothing. The preacher ventured to ask, "Is your mother at home?" "Yes," said the little girl, "she is up stairs." The minister waited a little and not hearing a sound he asked, "How do you know that your mother is up sairs?" "Tause, she hollowed to me to answer the knock on the door, and tell that man that she was not at home," replied he child. That preacher had faced the honesty of childhood, and the dishonesty of mature life.

The other day a beautiful dog came up to where four men were standing on the street corner. The dog was noticed and petted and he went on his way with dog happiness in his heart. A few moments later another dog approached those same men, and one of them turned around and kicked at the poor cur with all of his might. Has it ever occured to you that there are some dogs that you naturally want to kick when they come around? Some men seemingly receive kind words and bright smiles wherever they go, but others seemingly receive nothing but kicks and knocks. I have often wondered why some folks want to fondle some dogs and then kick others. Well, that is just like folks.

I went to see a patient at the hospital, and he complained to me of losing his appetite. The next time I called he repeated his complaint. The next time he said, "I do not know what is the matter with me. I have lost my appetite." That complaint kept up for a month, and then I buried that fellow. When a man loses his appetite for food, he is going to soon die if he does not regain it. When you lose your appetite for church attendance you can just put it down you have a dangerous soul malady. There are people in Chilton County who have spiritual nauses on Sunday morning. There is no appetite that makes them hungry for the services of the sanctuary. Not many Sundays will pass with that disease gnawing on soul vitality before there will be soul death. If you have no spiritual appetite for the house of God on the Sabbath, you are suffering from a dangerous soul malady.

It is grand to be alive in the Spring of the year. It thrills our souls to see the dead of winter being pushed back by the warm rays of the sun. It is wonderful to see bleached limbs of bare trees as they become covered over with green, and to witness the brown earth as it springs up with velvety grass and clover. It is just sweet to hear the notes of the birds as they plan the joy days of mating and loving and building. All of the bells of nature are set to ringing in these days of Spring, and we feel young and full of life. We do not know why it is, but somehow we are reminded of that time when the winter of earth will all be over, and we shall come out into the glory of that eternal spring. Into that time when the dreary days and dark nights of earth are all gone, and when the music of paradise shall gladden our spirits forever.

WHY NOT TRY IT OUT?

International bankers who are anxious to collect from Europe private loans made at high interest rates, insist that the United States government should cancel the prior debts of European governments to this country already cut in two and adjudicated at a low interest rate, on the ground that the collection of these debts costs us more than we could thus gain, because paying them is an impediment to European prosperity.

It is of course easy for these bankers to demonstrate the sincerity and unselfishness of this argument. Let them try it on the people who owe their banks. It is undoubtedly true that by canceling the notes of debtors, many of whom are now hard-pressed, these customers would be put in funds and their chances of becoming more prosperous increased. The money they make would finally come back to these very banks. After the international bankers have proved the beneficience of their theory, perhaps the American people would be glad to follow their example.

THE SOVIETS ARE OFFENDED

The Soviet government indignantly rejects Great Britain's request to be permitted to investigate for itself the matter of forced labor by convicts on logs and lumber, dumped by the soviet on other markets. Russia, says the bolsheviki, utilizes convicts on road work, just like other governments. How would those other governments feel, should the soviets ask to investigate labor in their domains? So virtuously do the Russians reply.

This would be more convincing if it had not been brought out immediately after announcement that the soviets had ordered mobilization of all railroad workers, regardless of their present jobs. They may have work and residence to their liking. No matter, they must give it up, and go where the soviet government wants them to go, and work on the railroads.

Thus with Russian labor. Denials that it is forced will fall upon skeptical ears. And the problem raised by soviet dumping must be met, no matter how altruistic are the pleas of persons who feel deeply, tenderly for the welfare of almost any people but their own.—Minneapolis Journal.

An easy and satisfactory way of getting rid of these college professors and editors who regard Soviet Russia as a noble experiment would be to get them to go to Moscow and try knocking that government.

The Man On The Corner

Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not.

Two of My Good Friends

I was delighted Monday by the visit of Zack J. Jones and Henry H. Armstrong, two of my good friends from Beat 14. They report that folks in their section are getting along well. "In spite of the hard times, we have plenty to eat over our way," they said. That reminded me that the northwest section of Chilton County had plenty of rain and flourishing crops last summer while most every other part of the county was being literally parched.

Uncle George Goes To See Mother

"The only time I ever miss Sunday School is when I go to see my good old mother," said Uncle George Willis last Sunday morning. "And most of the time when I come to Sunday School I go to see her in the afternoon." Uncle George's mother is getting old and feeble, perhaps away up towards ninety years old. He told me her age, but I forgot what he said. Mr. Willis loves his mother. Everybody does. When mother is gone, one continually asks himself the question: Why was it that I did not keep her close to me every day of my life? But no answer comes. Only the lonesome echo that reminds again that she is with us no more.

A Great Shaker of Hands

Seeing Rev. F. A. Gibson coming up the street shaking hands with almost everyone he meets, one would think surely there is another candidate broke loose. Brother Gibson can shake hands with more folks than any other man you can start. And when he shakes a man's hand he calls him by his name. He knows more folks than most anybody in the county. And oh boy, here is some fun. Just hold to his hand long enough to get him started to telling a funny story.

Here's Another Gibson

Uncle Wilse Gibson from Pleasant Grove, west of Jemison, was in town Monday. Don't know whether he is akin to the other Gibson or not. He is not such a hand-shaker. And I don't expect he is a preacher. But he is a mighty good man. This was the first time I have seen him in several years. He is a good man to go fishing with. I tried him on that about ten years ago. I don't think he wet a hook on the whole trip. But when the fishing was over and we got ready to take a picture of the catch, he insisted on holding one end of the pole.

Uncle Daniel Is Improving

The many friends of Uncle Daniel Wyatt are mighty glad to learn that he is getting better. It was thought for the past week that he would not be able to recover from his illness of pneumonia. Indications are better for him now. "Grandpa," as the kids call him, has more friends among the school children than any man I know. He lives on the street near the Grammar School where all the children pass along. He is always jolly with them.

Back From Winter In Florida

Joe Franklin, with Mrs. Franklin and the boy got back from their winter in Florida this week. I told Joe it must be fine to get up into the select group who are able to shut up their homes and go to the land of flowers when the winter blasts begin to blow.

Haircuts A Quarter Now

Things are getting better. We can now get haircuts for a quarter. The new order went into effect at the Clanton barber shops this week. Just think of how much that saves. It takes only two dozen eggs now to get your locks amputated, where it took three dozen a week ago.

Jesse Baker Out Again

Jesse Baker, of the Clanton Cash Store, is able to be at his business again after staying at home for a couple of weeks. I notice also that the grocery department of the Clanton Cash Store is being enlarged and improved in appearance. Not a bad sign, in view of the "hard times" which we have been hoping would pass away. Maybe we are about to witness the passing.

Our County School Board

I had occasion last Friday to sit with our County School Board in the consideration of an important school matter. I was impressed with the manner in which the members took cognizance of our general educational system in the county. I think the present School Board is on the right track for the future. I like what I have seen of their program, and I believe the people of the county will like it as time gives them opportunity to develop their plans.

COPPER, HOMES, AND WORKERS

The output of refined copper has declined steadily since last May. During the first half of 1930 output totaled 762,168 tons, as compared with 697,202 tons in the second half.

Stocks of copper are expected to show further reductions during the next few months as the effort to curtail production becomes more effective. However, it is said that stocks on hand will not be reduced to normal until there is an increase in buying.

Homebuilders who are taking advantage of present low construction costs should seriously consider using this everlasting metal wherever applicable. Its present slight additional cost is returned many times in long wear and freedom from care.

Thousands of workers are dependent on the copper mines for a livelihood, and balanced production will, in the long run, be in their interest.

Cooking Demonstrations Held

A Mr. Killough, of Luverne, has been in Clanton for the past week, giving entertainments, serving dinners, demonstrating the merits of a certain kind of cooking utensil. He has furnished entertainments at the homes of Mrs. Grady Heflin, Mrs. Gowen, Mrs. Diefenderfer, Mrs. Gragg, Mrs. Fox, and perhaps others whose names we did not get. All who have attended these functions are highly appreciative of the hospitality of the homes, the cordiality of Mr. Killough, and the merits of his wares.

New Freedom of Women Raises Standard of Music

Night Club Also Marks A Step in Social Advancement

New Haven, Connecticut.—The passing of the dance hall and the advent of the night club marks a step in social advantement which is reflected in the present day music, asserts Barney Rapp, musical director of the Terrace Restaurant here.

"The new freedom of women demanded that all places of amusement be open to them and the standard had to be raised to meet their demands," says Mr. Rapp. "This step also raised the morale of the boys. They are better behaved than they used to be in the so-called dance hall.

"The effect on music has been requests for sweet music of the ballad type instead of the former popular 'hot' tunes. The sweeter the tune and the music the more requests. 'Since Maggie Became Marguerite,' the waltz song asked for by everyone, gets the biggest hand and often I have to play it a half dozen times an evening."

Mr. Rapp is a famous broadcasting artist and his brother is Lou Rapp, former captain of the Yale water polo team and all-American water polo player for three years, who sings with the band.

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you look at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

THE INDIVIDUAL AND HIS BANK

By ROME C. STEPHENSON
President American Bankers Association

R. C. STEPHENSON

BANKERS recognize that their business carries especially heavy public responsibilities and welcome all sound measures to aid them meet the duties this imposes. Unceasing efforts to bring about continually improving methods to safeguard depositors in banks of all kinds have long been uppermost in the plans of bankers' organizations throughout the nation. They are not the outgrowth merely of the past year of business adversity, but have been carried on actively for many years and have resulted in great progress along lines of better, safer banking methods. Although banking along with all business has suffered reverses, conditions in this field have been far less severe than they would have been had not bankers been widely successful in their endeavors to develop the high standards of banking that now generally prevail.

The American Bankers Association and bankers' organizations in every state actively support the principle of government supervision of banking. The national banks, which receive their charters to do business from the federal government, are under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington. Through his efficient staffs of expert bank examiners in every section he has the duty and powers to keep watch of the way every national bank is being conducted, to suggest desirable changes in its policies or methods and even to step in and take control for the protection of the depositors if such action is warranted. The state banks, also, which are chartered by the various state governments, are subject to similar supervision and control by state bank officials. In addition banks in many places have long maintained voluntary clearing house associations which enforce even closer supervision over their members.

Bankers Favor Public Supervision

Present laws adequately enforced contain ample provisions for government supervision. Bankers universally believe in strong, capable banking departments manned by officials with the discretion and courage to enforce these laws and act under them as the common welfare demands. They believe that these public officials should be paid sufficient salaries to command the services of men of character, ability and a resolute spirit of public service. They believe also that the banking departments should be kept free from all political or other special influence in order to be able to act at all times with single-minded independence solely for the benefit of the public interest.

Although banks in the United States operating under state or national charters are thus subject to supervision of public authority, they are strictly private business enterprises. They are owned by their stockholders and administered by officials chosen through the boards of directors which their stockholders elect. No bank is owned or operated by the United States Government, nor, with one small exception in a western state, by any state government. The function of government in banking is to promote and enforce careful banking administration through the system of examination and supervision which I have described. This, however, does not relieve the individual depositor from the necessity of judging and choosing carefully as to his banking relations, just as in his other business or professional relations. He must inquire for himself into the character and type of institution and men he shall do business with, satisfying himself as to their reputation, reliability and capability. These qualities are essential to complete the element of safety and dependability in any human institution.

An Illusory Law

The bank deposit guaranty law in any form is a snare and a delusion, declares a banker in a state where it has been tried, adding: "It is a license and encouragement to irresponsible banks and banking and penalizes capital solvency and prudent banking. It creates a sense of security in the minds of the unthinking and uninformed that is false and impossible to be realized or ultimately. To compare it to legitimate insurance is without reason and absurd. It jeopardizes the solvency of all banks and the safety of all depositors for the theoretical safety of a few. Guaranty schemes always have been, are and always will be impotent, futile and disastrous. It is not new. Has been tried, failed and discarded at intervals for more than 100 years in this country. No well-informed, honest and intelligent mind can accept it in principle or practice. Competent bank supervision and restriction of banks to territory that will warrant sufficient capital investment and accounts is the only sane and honest course and will afford all the guaranty the depositing public is entitled to as compared with all other human affairs."

...SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING

By GRACE VIALL GRAY

TASTY LUNCHEON DISH

Something a bit "different" for luncheon is always welcome to the housewife who finds herself getting into a rut in this respect. A happy suggestion is banana fritters served with lemon sauce. They are appetizing and piquant, yet substantial enough to constitute a one dish meal.

The first step is to make the fritter batter. This is made by beating an egg with two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of melted fat.

Banana Fritters are easily made with self-rising flour. Served with a lemon sauce they make a tasty luncheon dish.

Add two-thirds cupful of milk and one cupful of self-rising flour, sifted once and added slowly.

When the batter is ready, take six well-ripened bananas, remove the skins and fiber, and cut in halves lengthwise and again crosswise, if large. Sprinkle with cinnamon and lemon juice and dip each piece of fruit separately into the batter.

Drop into deep fat hot enough to brown a small cube of bread in one minute. Cook the fritters until a pale brown, then drain on unglazed paper and dust with confectioner's sugar. Serve with lemon sauce.

This sauce is made as follows: two tablespoonfuls of self-rising flour blended with two-thirds cupful of sugar. Add one cupful boiling water slowly, stirring well to prevent lumps from forming. Add the juice and grated rind of half a lemon and cook until the mixture thickens. Serve hot.

Self-rising soft wheat flour is used in these fritters because it is more economical. With it fewer eggs are necessary (use only one egg for each cupful of flour). Besides it is cheaper to have a miller combine the flour, salt and baking powder at the mill than for each individual homemaker to do so in the kitchen. The miller gives the user the advantages of wholesale carlot prices on these materials. So self-rising flour is more economical to use in home baking and furthermore the results are more certain.

Elderly Lady (to soldier with head swathed in bandages)—Were you wounded in the head?

Soldier (fed up on questions)—No, mum, in the leg, but the bandage has slipped up.

Customer—"I'd like some grapes."

Former Shoe Salesman—"Yes, madam. What size grape do you take?"

He—"So you were shopping?"

She—"Yes, I went into a five and ten."

He—"Is that all?"

She—"Er, no, I went into a twenty, too. Here's the change."

Hobo—(Who has just received a piece of pie from Mrs. Freshwed for sawing some wood)—"Lady, do you mind if I saw the pie and eat some of that wood?"

WATCHING THE WORLD

By John McCready

For the sixth time in the history of the United States a man and a woman were executed together the other day in Pennsylvania, paying for crimes extending over several states. Irene Schroeder had tired of the monotony of her job as waitress and fallen an easy prey to the get-rich-quick schemes of Walter Dague, former Sunday school teacher. Beginning petty crimes, they went on to murder, and ended in the electric chair. They left as their wills a message to the world urging all to follow the pathway of religion as the pathway of peace. Monotony is bad, but murder is a poor exchange. Whatever one's problem may be, crime is not its solution.

Fate and Fame

A notable comment on Woodrow Wilson, with reference to his place in history, is made by Bernard Shaw in his recent book, "What I Really Wrote About the War." He says that if at the height of his popularity Wilson had been assassinated, his fame would now equal that of Lincoln. Perhaps many would say it does. However that may be, Shaw is doubtless right in saying Wilson's fame would be greater if he had not survived the war—to see his plans frustrated and his ideals dragged in the dust as party strife and international selfishness became again the order of the day. Fate provides strange compensations, as lovers of Lincoln may reflect.

The Spirit of Science

Professor Einstein, about to leave California, is delighted at the American people's interest in science. This he finds expresses itself in many ways—notably in the frequent dedication of wealth to scientific uses—an indication that neither money nor power is longer regarded as the highest good. For this enthusiasm for science the examples of great scientists are in part the explanation—their love of toil, their devotion to truth, their passion for accuracy. These traits, prominent in Einstein himself, have found striking illustration in the recently-undertaken task of another great physicist, Professor Michelson. Some years ago he discovered the velocity of light—about 186,000 miles a second; later he found that his calculations had been inaccurate to an infinitesimal degree. Now at the age of 78 he is resuming them, with elaborate apparatus, determined to time the light with absolute accuracy, or as near that as is humanly possible.

Vergil's Anniversary

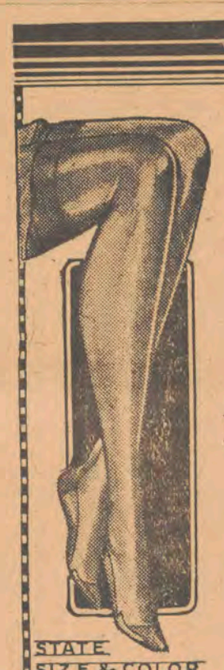
Boys and girls struggling with Latin will hear with mixed feelings of the 2000th anniversary of the birth of Vergil, most illustrious of Roman poets, which is to be celebrated this year. They may see little reason for rejoicing. Their attitude may be akin to that of Mark Twain about Michelangelo: "In Rome, along at first, you are full of regrets that Michelangelo died; but by and by you only regret that you didn't see him do it." Yet the study of Vergil and other classic writers is of real value, in imparting the facts and the flavor of ancient civilization, without a knowledge of which one can scarcely understand his own day and age. The chief defect in the teaching of ancient masterpieces is that the teacher tells the pupil little more than that the "Aeneid" or the "Iliad" is great, without pointing out wherein the greatness lies.

Soldier-Speaker

General Butler of the Marines, who recently talked indiscreetly of Mussolini, is to talk indiscreetly or otherwise before long from the lecture-platform. The free advertising he gained of late will come in helpfully. He announces that half the receipts will be given to the unemployed of Philadelphia. Some people doubt the ability of the general as a speaker. One critic says his record shows equally that he is a born fighter and not a born speaker. One asset of immense value, however, he possesses—an experience to talk about; he has a fund of facts on which to draw. Those anxious to speak or write often forget that a pleasing style is not the first requisite, much less a mere desire. The first thing of importance is acquaintance with life and the world; next interesting ideas based on this; lastly a pleasing style.

Escorting the Seals

An event of spring on the Pacific coast is the migration of a million seals from the warm waters of the South to some island off the Alaska coast. Being socially disposed they all go together, while armed guards of Uncle Sam's coastal service act as escort. Toward the end of the 18th ecntury there were five million seals in the herd. This number was reduced to a quarter million by 1911, when Japan, Great Britain and the United States, fearing the extermination, made an agreement giving the American government control of the herd till 1926. This agreement still holds. Only Indians of the Pacific coast are allowed to kill seals, and only with primitive weapons. Thanks to these wise provisions the herd has increased to a million, and the net annual income amounts to $18,000,000. Hunters of seals and wearers of the luxurious coats they provide may gratefully remember Secretary Seward of Lincoln's cabinet, whose purchase of Alaska for $7,000,000 was denounced at the time as "Seward's folly."



CARE OF SHADE TREES

Montgomery, Mar. 2.—Trees planted for shade or ornament require care after planting, says Colonel Page S. Bunker, State Forester. Too often the money, time and effort employed in carrying out the details of planting are partially lost due to later neglect of the growing tree.

The soil about a young newly planted tree should be kept cultivated and free from weeds for a distance of two or three feet from the trunk of the tree. It is desirable that the cultivation be done as soon after a rain as is feasible. A small amount of artificial fertilizer is also of material benefit.

The objection is sometimes raised that shade trees planted adjacent to agricultural operation will draw heavily on the soil fertility and moisture of the entire field. As a matter of fact, the area affected by the drawing power of the roots is only approximately equal to the spread of the crown of the tree. Cultivation, fertilizer and water accorded the tree when required need therefore be only within this area.

MEMORY OF W. C. PATTERSON

On last Saturday night, February 28, about nine o'clock, the death angel visited the home of Walter C. Patterson, and carried him to be with one that loved him better than we He was sick about three weeks, in which time everything was done for him that loving hands knew to do, but God knows best in all things so he called him away from this world of pain and sorrow to a home where smiles and sunshine.

Mr. Patterson moved from Coosa to Chilton about ten years ago and has lived near Clanton every since, where he has gained many friends that will miss his smiling face. He was a member of the Poplar Springs church and was faithful to attend when he was able, but he has been in bad health for a year and could not go like he wished to.

He leaves to mourn his death, a wife and eight children, one brother two sisters and a host of friends and relatives. The children are Mrs. Dell Clark of Elmore, Mrs. Letha Wilson, Reedie, Gertie, Pearl, Floyd, Loraine and Maurice all of Clanton. His brother, Monroe Patterson lives at Tallassee, his sisters, Miss Viola Patterson of Deatsville and Mrs. Drue Wright of Thorsby, he also leaves 5 grand children.

He was laid to rest at Chestnut Creek cemetery. Rev. W. P. Lowery conducted his funeral with Martin in charge.

Weep not dear friend and children all
For to that home he has been called
Where some day we too shall go
There no pain nor heartache to know.
Again we'll see his smiling face
And know that no one could take his place
Though now it seems so hard to bear
All will be joy when we get there.
A friend, Gladys Wilson.

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

Another week gone and those mid-semester exams are almost upon us. Ten weeks and this school year will be a memory. And what shall we say does it matter. The Crimson Tide basket ball team was unfortunate in the tournament in Atlanta; lost to Tennessee, 26 to 20, in the first round. We offer no alibis, but we wonder. Would it have been the same with Hood and Walter Laney playing. Well, maybe.

The Alabama Academy of Science meets at the University on March 13 and 14. This is a society whose aim is the advancement of science for the betterment of our civilization.

Student politics is beginning to wax warm on the campus, soon all candidates will be furnished smokes and chewing gum for prospective votes. Let's hope it is as clean as the last State election.

Plans are being made for the opening of the swimming pool. Spring training is well under way. The "A" Club pulls another dance. So do the fraternities. Baseball players warm up. Harris goes home for a week end. Connatser boys star on Frosh basketball team. 24 shipped for cheating on exams (cheating is not tolerated). The chimes ring and 4,000 students change classes, and we end by a quotation from the Rammer-Jammer, "You can't drive a nail with a sponge no matter how many times you soak it."

Mrs. W. D. Spigener spent last week with her daughter, Mrs. Laurie Farrier, in Birmingham.

ISABELLA SCHOOL NEWS

Plans are being made for field day Friday, the 13th. We are expecting to bring back some of the blue ribbons for the school.

Last Friday night the Seniors were entertained on a treasure hunt, sponsored by the Juniors. The hunt began at the school building and ended at the swimming hole beyond Mr. Walker's When the treasure was found they returned to the school building. After they had played games for a while they were served a picnic lunch, which everyone enjoyed.

Next Friday night there will be a banquet here by the F. F. A. boys and the Home Economics girls. The mothers and fathers of the boys and girls are cordially invited. We are also expecting the county supervisor and some of the State supervisors to be present.

The P.-T. A. met on Monday night, March 2. A very good number of parents was present.

Dr. Haskew of Clanton was the principle speaker for the evening. He talked on "There is a Child Here." The talk was very fine and every one was benefitted by it.

After the program and business meeting, a social hour was enjoyed. Contests, music, and a grand march attracted every one. A dialogue by Louise Davenport and Sallie Joe Cox of the seventh grade was splendid. While every one enjoyed little Annie Laura Calfee's reading, and Evelyn Lecroy's solo. Lorene Lecroy gave a very effective pantomime on "The Star Spangled Banner."

Refreshments were served to the largest group of parents ever attending the P.-T. A.

Meetings are held regularly on Tuesday night after the first Sunday of each month. All parents are urged to attend these meetings.
